ACCORD BETWEEN ALLIES REPORTED

British, French and Italians Said to Have Reached Agreement on Attitude to Be Taken Toward Turks at Lausanne.

By the Associated Press.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 18.—Crown Prince Abdul Medjid Effendi, cousin of Sultan Mohammed VI, has been elected Caliph, according to an announcement from Angora.

Rafet Pasha has asked the allies to suppress all foreign postoffices in Constantinople. He has requested also that American, British and French colleges and schools be placed under the Angora Government's reign.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 18.—Premier Poincare of France, Lord Curzon, British Foreign Secretary, and Baron Avezzano, Italian Ambassador to France, reached a complete accord at a conference here today on the general outlines of the attitude to be taken by the Allies toward the Turks at Lausanne peace conference, it was stated this evening.

Premier Poincare and Lord Curzon will proceed tomorrow to Territet, Switzerland, to meet Premier Mussolini of Italy, so as further to confirm the harmony of the Allied views and to go into the general situation in Europe.

Wives Overwhelmed With Grief at Sultan's Flight.

By the Associated Press.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 18.—The Sultan's wives and women of the harem are overwhelmed with grief and dismay over the flight of the Sultan. They did not know he was going. The Sultan's youngest wife, whom he married only nine weeks ago, and who is the 22-year-old daughter of his gardener, became hysterical when the fact of the Sultan's flight was confirmed, and the seven faithful eunuchs, who had acted as personal bodyguards to the Moslem ruler for the last five years gave themselves up to despair, fearing the Sultan had been kidnaped by the Kemalists. The other eunuchs and the women of the palace, numbering 300, wept bitterly and soon the whole palace was in a state of commotion.

The Sultan's departure was not known to his household until 9 o'clock yesterday morning, when his aid de camp entered his sleeping chamber. When he gave the news that the Sultan was missing the palace was searched from top to bottom for the monarch.

Former Grand Vizier and Other Turks Now in Egypt.

By the Associated Press.

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Nov. 18.—Thirteen prominent Turks, including Tewfik Pasha, former Grand Vizier Mustapha Sabri, former Sheik of Islam, and Gen. Suleman Sherif Pasha, former Minister of War, have arrived from Constantinople. They have announced their intention of staying in Egypt and say that a hundred more of their countrymen are coming.

Tewfik said that the Kemalists were adopting a policy of pin pricks, with the object of goading the allies to war, and that the Nationalists, well supplied with bolshevik gold, were acting under bolshevik pressure.

MEXICO ANGERED BY WHAT IT CONSIDERS U. S. EFFORTS TO CENSOR OIL LEGISLATION

Vindictive Speeches in Chamber Against America for What Hughes Says Was Thought to Be Welcomed Comment.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 18. — All South and Central American republics were being informed today that Mexico resented any censorship of its legislation by the United States or other powers and that President Obregon's statement to that effect had secured for him a virtual vote of confidence in the Chamber of Deputies.

This action grew out of a heated debate in the Chamber last night following the disclosure of a series of communications which are said to have recently passed between Foreign Secretary Pania and George T. Summerlin, the American Charge d'Affairs. In these communications, Summerlin, speaking for the American State Department, is alleged to have offered suggestions concerning the prospective petroleum law which is to be considered by Congress. The Mexican Government is represented as holding the opinion that these suggestions were intrusive.

Speeches Against United States.

Seldom has there been such an outburst of oratory and vindictive speeches against the United States as were heard in the Chamber last evening when communications dating back to last October were read. These letters, some of which were mere personal notes between Foreign Secretary Pania and Summerlin, were interpreted as an encroachment upon the national sovereignty and the lower house, unanimously approving President Obregon's attitude, voted to inform all Latin-American countries of "the Yankee attempts at imperialism."

The newspapers treat the incident as the most sensational news in several months.

"A grave international incident is surging," says El Democrata. "President Obregon repulses all invasions of national sovereignty," says El Universal, while Excelsior declares that Mexico will not permit censorship of its law by any foreign government.

Summerlin declined to make a statement on any phase of the incident.

Considered a Political Move.

In some quarters the publication of the communications is considered a clever political move to unite all factions in Congress at a moment when the provisions of Article 27 of the Mexican Constitution, which deals with the appropriation of private property, are about to be discussed.

In the same quarters it was said that the text of the communication did not reveal any intention on the part of the United States Government to dictate Mexican legislative matters, but were rather intended to constitute helpful suggestions relative to matters of mutual interest to both countries.

It has been known for some time that various Mexican officials had expressed the wish that the United States would indicate its desires relative to Article 27 so that these might be considered.

Secretary Hughes Terms Charges Wholly Unsubstantiated.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Charges that the United States has interfered unduly in the drafting of international legislation in Mexico, which have culminated in an outburst of anti-American sentiment in the Mexican Chamber of Deputies, were declared by the State Department tonight to be wholly unsubstantiated by the facts.

In a formal statement given by the department to the Associated Press it was said that the views on proposed oil legislation communicated by American Charge Summerlin to Mexico City officials had been expressed only after the Washington Government had been given to understand that such comment would be welcomed.

No Desire to Interfere.

"We had not the slightest intention of interfering in Mexican affairs, the statement continued, "and have not done so. We desired to maintain friendly relations with the Mexican people and it is in the interest of that friendship that we have hoped they would find a way of giving protection against confiscation. Upon that fundamental question the position of this Government remains precisely what it has been."

The statement, authorized by Secretary Hughes after his attention had been called to dispatches of the Associated Press on the subject from Mexico City, follows in full:

"The officers of the State Department were much surprised to learn of the expressions in Mexico that the United States Government was seeking to interfere in Mexico's international affairs. This Government has not the slightest desire to do so. As Secretary Hughes said in his recent speech at Boston, it is not for us to suggest what laws Mexico shall have relating to the future for, of course, Mexico must be the judge of her own domestic policy. What we have said as to the proposed legislation was with the understanding that the Mexican authorities would welcome an expression of our views.

Policy Prevented Recognition.

"The Mexican regime desires recognition by the United States. The confiscatory policy of Mexico has stood in the way. We have said that when a nation has invited intercourse with other nations, has established laws under which investments have been lawfully made, contracts entered into and property rights acquired by citizens of other jurisdictions, it is an essential condition of international intercourse that international obligations shall be met, and that there shall be no resort to confiscation and repudiation.

"We have repeatedly said that we are not particular as to the form of the assurance against confiscation. We desire the fact.

"The Mexican authorities have said that they could not make a treaty to give this assurance against confiscation. They have said that the proper course was for the Mexican Congress to regulate the application of the constitution of 1917 so as to preclude confiscation. We have said that we have not stood in the way of such legislation and should be glad to see it.

"Recently we were informed that a bill for this purpose had been drafted. But the provisions of this bill, according to our advices, were utterly inadequate to protect against confiscation of validities acquired under Mexican laws prior to the Constitution of 1917.

Thought Comment Welcome.

"Of course, we did not desire to rest apparently satisfied with such procedure and permit the Mexican authorities to assume that recognition by this Government would follow the passage of such an inadequate measure.

"We were given to understand that the department's comment on the proposed measure would not be unwelcome.

"We had not the slightest intention of interfering with Mexican affairs and have not done so. The Mexican Congress, of course, is entitled to pass its laws. But if they resort to legislation to interpret the Constitution of 1917 with the idea of precluding confiscation and obtaining recognition by this Government, it is only fair that they should know the views of this Government as to the efficacy of the legislation for that purpose.

"Had this Government in no way intimated its view before the legislation had been passed, there doubtless would have been complaint.

"We desired to maintain friendly relations with the Mexican people and it is in the interest of that friendship that we have hoped they would find a way of giving protection confiscation.

"Upon that fundamental question the position of this Government remains precisely what it has been."

MRS. McCORMICK OUT, SO SUITOR SAVES SIX BITS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—Edward Krenn, youthful admirer of Mrs. Edith Rockefeller-McCormick, whom she brought from Switzerland to assist her in her psychological studies, is a thrifty soul. If it should come about that he and Mrs. McCormick marry, he may be counted upon to safeguard her millions.

Today he called at her mansion and on the way stopped at a florist shop and purchased a nifty nosegay, paying therefor 75 cents. It was made of three geraniums and a carnation, surrounded by ferns.

At the McCormick mansion he was told she was out for an indefinite time, so he hiked back to the florist shop, turned in his nosegay and salvaged his six bits.

50 NEW YORK DRY AGENTS OUT AS FIRST STEP IN CLEAN-UP

22 Employed in New York City and Remainder Up-State; No Charges Made Public.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—State prohibition headquarters made known tonight that 50 agents had been dropped from the force, upon instructions of Acting State Director E. C. Yellowley, who now is in Washington.

Twenty-two of the men were employed in New York City, and the remainder up-State, it was said at headquarters.

No charges against the men dismissed were made public, but it was indicated that Yellowley's action was the first step in a reconstruction of the whole force, which has consisted of 250 men.

LA FOLLETTE CALLS MEETING TO FORM PROGRESSIVE BLOC IN NEXT CONGRESS

Wisconsin Senator Sends Out Summons for Conference to Be Held in Washington Dec. 1 and 2 — Leaders Throughout Country Invited.

NATIONAL COUNCIL ALSO IS PLANNED

Representative Huddleston of Alabama, Democrat, Joins in Call — Organization Without Regard to Party to Be Sought.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—A call for a national conference of progressives to meet here Dec. 1 and 2, to organize a progressive group in Congress, was issued tonight by Senator La Follette, Republican, of Wisconsin, and Representative Huddleston, Democrat, of Alabama, chairman and vice chairman, respectively of the People's Legislative Service.

Formation of not only a cohesive progressive bloc in Senate and House, but also a national council of progressives, without regard to party, was the apparent object of the movement. There was no mention of a third political party and before the call went out Senator La Follette declared a new party must be a matter of evolution and could not be established through a meeting of any group of men and adoption of resolutions.

What Call Proposes.

The call proposed a meeting of progressive members of Congress Dec. 1, and of a gathering of progressive leaders generally on Dec. 2. Invitations to the latter meeting were sent, it was announced, to "A representative group of influential representative men and women throughout the country," whose names were not divulged.

Telegraphic replies were requested and it was said the names of those accepting would be announced as replies were received. Previous to announcement of the conference call, Senator La Follette issued a statement declaring that the "time has now come for the organization of a well defined group in support of accepted progressive principles and policies, and the defeat of the administration ship subsidy bill, proposed anti-strike legislation and projected transfer of Federal forests to the Interior Department."

Capper Issues Statement.

Senator Capper, Republican, of Kansas, chairman of the Senate farm bloc, almost at the same time issued a statement declaring against the ship subsidy bill and outlining a program of legislation including farm credits, prohibition of tax-free securities, and reduction of freight rates and Government taxes. Both La Follette and Capper said the recent elections were a victory for the progressives over the reactionaries, but it was not apparent to what extent the plans of the farm bloc might coincide with those of the La Follette-Huddleston group.

The call issued by La Follette and Huddleston, with the latter a strong labor champion in the House, announced that it was "for the organization of an active working group in Congress." The general conference on Dec. 2, it was said further, would include "leading Progressives and those not already actively affiliated with the People's Legislative Service"—an organization formed two years ago at a dinner of senators, representatives and others.

Previous Accomplishments.

"It was decided at that time that it was premature to attempt to organize the handful of Progressives in the two houses of Congress," said the call, "but without organization those members of Congress who are devoted to the people's interests have struggled manfully against overwhelming odds and have won many important victories. They have blocked many vicious bills and have saved the taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars and exposed some gigantic evils. But above all, they have let the people know what was happening in Washington.

"The people have responded. They have elected a very considerable number of senators and representatives with splendid records of fidelity to public service. They have

"WILD OATS" KEPT $1,450,000 FROM QUAKER OATS HEIR

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 18.—Heroic services in the British Army during the World War by a young American, George Camp Douglas, today won for him an inheritance of $1,450,000 from the estate of his father, one-time "Quaker Oats" king.

Trustees in charge of the estate regarded that the distinguished war record of young Douglas offset other deficiencies in meeting the terms of the father's will.

Boyhood escapades of Douglas caused the father, who lost his life on the Titanic, to make the son's share in the $4,200,000 estate conditional on his behavior. Following the death of his father young Douglas figured in several sensational escapades and was in a fair way of forfeiting his claim to the big estate when the World War broke out.

Douglas enlisted under the British flag, rose from the ranks to a captaincy, and was wounded and signally honored by the British Government for his distinguished service. He remained in the army after the war, coming to Minneapolis a few weeks ago on a furlough to claim his inheritance.

The young soldier will receive half of his share at once and the balance in five years.

The elder Douglas was one of the largest owners of the Quaker Oats Company.

ELDERLY FARMER, WIFE AND SON ARE FOUND MURDERED AT HOME

Mystery as to Motive Baffles Tennessee Authorities; Shotgun Apparently Used.

By the Associated Press.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 18. Jesse Rector, an elderly farmer, his son, York, and the latter's wife were found murdered at their mountain home, near Pikeville, Tenn., early this morning.

Sheriff A. T. Goforth and two deputies put in the day searching about the vicinity of the Rector home, which is near Melvine, a village, but discovered nothing—indicating a motive for the triple murder.

The three bodies were in a badly mutilated condition, having been mangled by loads from a shotgun, evidently fired at close range.

Communication with the remote district where the killings occurred is difficult, and little could be learned of the family history of the Rectors, but it has been suggested that the tragedy is the outcome of a feud.

REPORT WILLIAM BROSS LLOYD WILL SURRENDER TOMORROW

Wealthy Communist's Attorneys Say He Will Go to Prison as Soon as Estate Is Arranged.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—Thomas Freedman, chief bailiff of the Criminal Court, today announced he had received "semiofficial information" that William Bross Lloyd, wealthy Communist, ordered to the Joliet penitentiary as a result of his conviction in 1920 of conspiracy to advocate overthrow of the Government, will surrender Monday. Bailiffs who have been looking for Lloyd, sentenced to serve one to five years, have been unable to find him.

Search also is being made for 17 other persons convicted with Lloyd, four of whom are to spend one to five years in prison. Eleven are to go to jail for a year and two must pay fines.

Lloyd's attorneys said their client would surrender as soon as he had arranged for the management of his estate.

BOY CHASING BALL IN STREET FATALLY INJURED BY AUTO

Playmates and Driver, Held for Coroner, Tell Practically Same Story of Accident.

YOUTH SAID NOT TO HAVE HEEDED HORN

Lawrence Wolff, 9, Lived With Parents, Mr. and Mrs. Camille Wolff, at 3435 Louisiana.

Lawrence Wolff, 9 years old, was knocked down and run over by an automobile in the street near his home, 3435 Louisiana avenue, at 4:30 yesterday afternoon. He died a half hour later at St. Anthony's Hospital.

Henry J. Thoele of 2017A Allen avenue was driving south on Louisiana avenue as the Wolff boy and some playmates were playing ball in the street. The ball rolled toward the west curb and the boy went after it.

Thoele told the police later that he sounded his horn, and thought the boy would wait for him to pass. The boy did not wait, but started back toward the other players. Thoele said he swerved the machine, endeavoring to avoid him, but one wheel struck the boy and passed over him.

Thoele stopped his car and took the boy to the hospital. He was found to have suffered internal injuries. Thoele was held for the Coroner, after the police had questioned the boys who were playing in the street. Their account of the matter, the police said, was substantially the same as that given by Thoele.

Anton Griesedieck, head of the brewing firm by which Thoele is employed, signed his $5000 bond. Thoele said his speed, at the time of the accident, was about 20 miles an hour.

Lawrence Wolff was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Camille Wolff. His death is the 122d automobile fatality in St. Louis this year.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—WOODROW WILSON, former president of the United States and associate of Georges Clemenceau at the Versailles Peace Conference, sent a telegram of greeting to Clemenceau tonight. It said:

"Allow me to bid you an affectionate welcome to America where you will find none but friends".

In reply the Tiger of France sent the following message to Mr. Wilson:

"I am deeply touched by your kind message. Please accept my kindest regards and best wishes. I am looking forward with great pleasure to seeing you in Washington".

21 COMPANIES FIGHT FIRE ON PINE STREET

Dense Smoke Makes Work of Firemen Difficult When Two Buildings Are Damaged.

A stubborn fire, discovered at 6:25 last night in the Andree & Kent Wall Paper Co., 1319 Pine street, and which spread to the adjacent loft building at 1317, was fought for hours by 21 engine companies. Dense smoke filled the street, and it was impossible for officers to estimate the damage. At midnight it appeared that the flames, which were especially strong in the upper portions of the building, although the blaze began in the basement, or first floor, would not be subdued for some time.

A light breeze carried the smoke upward at times and made it visible for considerable distances. Several thousand spectators gathered at the Thirteenth and Fourteenth street corners of Pine street and about 40 policemen were required to control them. President Brockman of the Police Board, Chief of Police O'Brien, Chief of Detectives Hoagland and Inspector Gerk were present.

Southampton cars were rerouted on Market street and Olive cars crossed hoses on bridges. Trolley wires on Pine street were cut to prevent danger. An electric arc light in front of the burning buildings, which was of aid to the fire fighters, was put out by a stream of water that made the pole tremble. Searchlights were rigged to play on the fire and water was thrown from the front and back of the buildings and the roof of a nearby factory.

Two of the owners of the wall paper company, Abe Heligman, 1319 Montclair avenue, treasurer, and Abe Mizes, 1345 Montclair avenue, secretary, told the police arson squad that their stock was valued at about $15,000 and they had about $20,000 insurance. They bought the company, which is capitalized at $15,000, several months ago, with Hyman Komm, 5021 Cates avenue, president, they said. They could not estimate their loss. Komm is said to be in Chicago.

Says Stock Was Worth $35,000

Heligman told a Post-Dispatch reporter that his company's stock was worth about $35,000.

The fire spread upward in the building, in which was the wall paper company, and then over to the structure at 1317. The Salvage Corps worked in the leather goods factory of Brauer Bros. Manufacturing Co., Fourteenth and Pine streets, adjoining 1319, and prevented damage there. The George H. Plesser Floral Co. occupied the first floor of 1317. The Talbot Manufacturing Co., makers of novelties, occupied the second floor of both buildings. The Conroy Piano Co. was said by insurance adjusters to have a stock of pianos in the fourth and fifth floors of 1317, but officers of this company could not be reached. The other floors were believed to be vacant.

Fireman Hurt in Fall.

Fireman Robert Wildman, 40 years old, 3223 Oregon avenue, attached to Hook and Ladder Company No. 3, was injured when a ladder on which he was descending from a roof collapsed. A negro fireman was cut on the face when a plate-glass window broke. A third fireman was reported to have been overcome by smoke.

A general or fourth alarm was sounded, after the first firemen arrived, and, besides the 21 engine companies, six hook and ladder companies and miscellaneous apparatus were called out, with Chief Panser, an assistant chief and four deputies in charge.

SAYS FRANCE MUST RETAIN ARMY PENDING GUARANTEES

"My Life Is Over, but It Seems I Can Do You Some Service in Letting You Know How We Europeans Judge the American People."

BIG DEMONSTRATION AT METROPOLITAN

Famous Frenchman Soon Shows He Intends to Go Where and When He Pleases—Visit to Roosevelt's Grave Today.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Georges Clemenceau, distinguished citizen of France, arrived here today. The reception he was accorded by the city, the nation and the ordinary men and women composing the two was a remarkable tribute to the elderly statesman and the Republic, the voice of whose people he seeks to make heard.

His firm, tanned face, with its drooping lines, gave no expression of his emotion. But the welcome worked its way through a skin accustomed to both praise and abuse to his heart. As he stood in the Aldermanic chamber, his squat figure crowded into insignificance by the carefully groomed members of the Reception Committee, army officers and nearly a thousand pressing listeners, he gave vent to the keynote of the message he brings to America.

"Nobody can acribe any personal aim to my act in visiting this country. My life is over. But it does seem to me that I can do you some service in letting you know how we Europeans judge the American people. It is necessary, because in the world at this time there is a crisis which has not been settled yet.

"I will not permit anyone to tell me that we have too many soldiers, or too few soldiers, unless they succeed in giving us guarantees. Then only, with the greatest of pleasure, will we dissolve the French army.

"Will you Americans show us the similar feeling? We must defend ourselves."

Nothing Conventional About It.

There was more to his speech, and the ring of the Tiger of France was in every word of it. He seemed to be carried to a point by the warmth of his reception where he felt he must throw off for a moment the cloak of silence and speak his mind.

It had been expected that he would make a short, conventional speech of gratitude for the honors shown him. But "Georges' Le Terrible" is not conventional. He has a habit of speaking and doing as he feels inclined, and always from the deep-rooted convictions born of 81 years of brimming life.

His arrival in quarantine on the French liner Paris, his transfer to the reception steamboat Macom, his ride up the harbor to the Battery and thence by automobile to city hall, all proceeded according to plan.

When he reached lower Broadway the morning fog had burned off and his trip to city hall was a triumphant procession, perhaps not equaling, but comparable to, the fervid demonstrations given to other war heroes when the tension was at its highest.

Stern Expression.

Streams of ticker tape and torn papers mingled in the dark caverns of the street with the waving flags of the United States and France. The Tiger said little. As on the liner and on the reception steamboat, he contented himself with monosyllables.

GEN. HARBORD WILL RETIRE TO HEAD RADIO COMPANY

Deputy Chief of Staff Who Was to Succeed Pershing Announces Intention of Quitting Army.

ARMY CHIEF CALLS HIM "ABLEST OFFICER"

Retirement Was Opposed by Secretary of War and Others—Had Brilliant Career in Service.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Retirement from the army of Major General James G. Harbord, deputy chief of staff and one of the outstanding American military leaders in the World War, to accept the presidency of the Radio Corporation of America, was announced today by Secretary of War Weeks. He will be succeeded in Washington by Major General John L. Hines, now commanding the Eighth Corps area.

Gen. Harbord's retirement becomes effective Dec. 19 and he will take up his new duties Jan. 1. He had been selected to succeed Gen. Pershing as chief of staff on the latter's retirement, and Secretary Weeks said in his formal announcement that the loss to the active forces of the army through Gen. Harbord's separation from the service "cannot be adequately expressed."

"We have not had in our military service or in our Government service in any capacity a man of higher qualities or one who has inspired in others a greater degree of confidence," said the War Secretary. "The business he will enter is in its infancy and it will offer full scope for his abilities. That he will prove himself a great leader in industry and commercial affairs seems as certain to me as his great leadership in military activities. I have an acute sense of personal loss in his going. His ability and loyalty have been of vital importance to me in administering the affairs of the War Department."

33 Years in Service.

In his letter to Secretary Weeks applying for retirement, Gen. Harbord pointed out that he had been on active service for 33 years, "having enlisted on Jan. 10, 1889, with continuous service since enlistment, over 16 years of such service being abroad."

Gen. Harbord has had the offer from the Radio Corporation under consideration for almost a year. His acceptance was opposed by Secretary Weeks and other officers, including Gen. Pershing, who tonight made this statement:

"I feel that I am voicing the views of the entire army in expressing keen regret that Gen. Harbord has decided to go into civil life. His distinguished services need not be recounte as they are well known to all Americans. We shall miss him in our councils. We wish him the greatest success in his new career, and I predict that his unusual experience as an organizer and administrator of great entrprses will insure his success in the business world."

Held Every Office.

Gen. Harbord's determination to go back to civil life brings to a close a striking military career that began in the ranks of Company A, Fourth Infantry, in 1889. Since then he has passed through every grade from private to Major-General and was raised from a lieutenant-generalcy in France. To carry out his conception of his duty to his fellow officers, he now is laying aside the certainty of succeeding Gen. Pershing as Chief of Staff of the Army and the strong probability of receiving higher rank. The road to the office of Chief of Staff was cleared for him by special act of Congress because of his great ability.

The retiring officer has participated in all of the active life of the army and served in 1898 as a major in the Second United States Volunteer Calvary known as The Torrey Rough Riders, raised in the Rocky Mountain States. Later he became assistant chief of the Philippine constabulary under Gov.-Gen. Taft, remaining in the Philippines from 1902 until 1914.

In 1917 as a major he was attending the war college in Washington and was selected by Theodore Roosevelt to be a brigade commander in the division of volunteers Col. Roosevelt hoped to raise for the world war. On Gen. Pershing's appointment to command the troops in France, Gen. Harbord was his first selection and went over as Chief of Staff, a post he retained until the delicate task of appointing an army officer to command the Marine brigade received his assignment to that duty.

The Marines were under Gen. Harbord's command in their training and in the later struggle of Belleau Wood. Subsequently he took command of the division and led it into action beside the crack French Moroccan division when Gen. Foch ordered the counter assault known as the Soisson offense.

Vibrant Welcome Breaks Through to Clemenceau's Heart and He Reveals the Real "Tiger" in Speech

"No One Can Tell Me We Have Too Many Soldiers Unless They Succeed in Giving Us Guarantees," He Says at New York.

His soft, gray felt hat obscured his face. His hands, gloved in gray leather, gripped the ebony cane, with its silver monogram "G. C." His short, heavy body sank deep into the automobile. The stearnness of his expression did not leave him, except for fleeting smiles. Were his face and figure not vividly familiar to all Americans through the medium of photographs, either of two men who sat beside him in the automobile, Jules Jusserand, French Ambassador to the United States, and Frank L. Polk, former Assistant Secretary of State, might well have been mistaken by the crowd for the visiting dignitary.

The body of the Tiger, sturdy though it is, gives little indication of the mind behind it, acting as its dynamo.

After brief ceremonies in the crowded Aldermanic Chamber at City Hall, where 2000 persons saw the real Tiger, with his hat off, and half that number heard the real Tiger speak, M. Clemenceau was swept uptown at the head of the automobile procession to the home of Charles Dana Gibson, 127 East Seventy-third street.

The northward journey from City Hall was scarcely less impressive than that through the financial section. The long line of automobiles was escorted on each side by motor cycle patrolmen. The procession proceeded up Lafayette street to Ninth street. Small knots of persons stood on the corners.

Thin Streams Become Crowd.

On the outskirts of Greenwich Village, where Clemenceau lived and worked in poverty during the late sixties, up Fifth avenue, the flags became more frequent, tri-color side by side with the Stars and Stripes. The sidewalk demonstrations increased. Thin streams of watchers became a crowd stretching along the curbstone for blocks ahead. Then Madison Square and traffic halted in its pace, while passengers and pedestrians shouted, clapped and waved hats and newspapers. The Tiger smiled again. His hat was off, but only briefly.

And so it was all up the avenue. Finally the sweeping curve of the machines moved into Seventy-third street and eastward to the Gibson home. Gibson, tall, red of face, and white of hair, ran down the steps and stooped to greet his visitor. Mrs. Gibson, in the doorway, tall, lithe, and fair, held out her hands to the squat little man shuffling up the steps. He bowed then. The door closed behind the silk-hatted reception committee. And the public, a small group of 50 or more persons, remained, a little wistfully outside.

Visit to Museum.

A few hours later, when the small crowd had disappeared, the same figure came down the steps. After a short nap, a cup of coffee, and a brief discussion of his plans for his speaking tour about the country, he suddenly announced that he wished to go to the National Museum of History.

As in his speech in City Hall, he showed that he intends to go about his trip to this country in his own way. No such visit had been planned. But he was whirled over to the Museum in an automobile, accompanied by Otto H. Kahn, Stephan Bonsal and Hamilton Fish Armstrong, who were in the reception committee which met him down the bay.

With his hurried shuffling step, he walked through the corridors and rooms of the Museum, appearing to listen to none of the conversation addressed to him and seldom making reply. Only a scattering of persons were in the Museum.

After standing intently before many of the cabinets of strange creatures and plants, he turned abruptly and asked to be taken to the Metropolitan Opera House. It had been planned that he should go there to determine the acoustics in advance of his speech there Tuesday night—the opening address of his American tour and the one which he has described as the most important of his long and important career.

Slips Quietly Into Box.

The party arrived at the opera house in the midst of the performance of the opera "Mephistopheles." Between scenes, they slipped quietly into the private box of Gatti-Casazza, director of the opera company. For a moment the crowd remained in ignorance of Clemenceau's presence. Then the orchestra swung sharply into the stirring notes of the Marseillaise. The crowd rose in a body. Then it caught sight of the Tiger of France.

There was no claque for the visitor. And there was no need of one. A yell and then a thunder of applause. The bowed figure of Clemenceau moved forward in the box, where he could be seen plainly, for there was no slouch hat to hide his features. When the noise subsided, the orchestra struck into the Star Spangled Banner.

It is not often that an American audience can carry that difficult anthem off. But on this occasion it did. It even seemed to know the words. The orchestra rocked with the song. Then Georges Clemenceau moved forword once more and there was another wild burst of applause. One of those Tiger smiles—the friendly kind—and a continued shaking of the head. The curtain went up on the last act.

Waits for Crowd to Go.

After the performance the visitor, always eager to avoid curious crowds except when he is to address them, retired into the private office of Gatti-Casazza and waited for 20 minutes for the audience to disperse. Finnally, he slipped out with his distinguished-looking companions and rolled uptown again to the quiet of the Gibson home. That quiet is somewhat jarred, however, by the fact that there is a band of riveters at work on a new building near by.

It was the Tiger's expressed intention to go to bed at 8 o'clock, in accordance with his strict mode of life. Despite the overwhelming nature of his reception and his constant activity he did not appear tired, however, and there remained the possibility that he might slip out of the house during the evening for an adventure of his own.

Although tomorrow had been planned as a day of rest for Clemenceau in anticipation of the ordeal of his appearance before the great throngs which have bought every seat in the Metropolitan Opera House for Tuesday, the elderly statesman took the arrangements into his own hands.

Visit to Roosevelt's Grave.

As a result, he will go to Oyster Bay tomorrow to visit the grave of Theodore Roosevelt, for whom he always had a deep admiration. Clemenceau will be taken by Kahn in the latter's automobile to Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island. He will rest at the home there before motoring to Oyster Bay. It is expected he will return to the Gibson home tomorrow night.

M. Clemenceau arrived in America for the first time since he left this country, an obscure doctor 29 years old, in 1870, when the liner Paris, of the French line, tied up at quarantine in the dark hours following midnight.

The difference in his station in life from that he held when he was enjoying his "first adventure in democracy" must have been constantly with him from the moment he arose to surmise, rather than see, the fog-smudged shore of America nearby.

After the reception committee had boarded the Paris at quarantine, Clemenceau was hurried into the big lounge of the Paris. Ambassador Jusserand stepped forward and greeted him warmly, speaking in French in a low voice. Then other members of the committee came forward. Bliss conveyed President Harding's welcome and the hope that the two would meet in Washington, at which the Tiger was obviously pleased.

But the first exhibition of emotion on the part of the visitor came when R. E. Condon of the Executive Committee of the American Legion greeted him for that organization.

"Ah! you are the men I like to see; your thoughts are the ones that count," Clemenceau said eagerly. A horde of photographers swept him to an upper deck for photographs. It may be said that never has there been such a large number of photographers to meet a distinguished visitor to this city. Clemenceau's dislike for posing was apparent and, after standing still for a moment, he said briefly: "C'est fini," and walked away. When he had left the Paris and was seated in the stern of the Macom, as that steamboat started up the harbor, he was besieged again by persistent photographers.

"Is it not permitted to kill the photographers in this country?" he asked in a tone showing his irritation. "But I suppose not."

As to American Women.

While the boat was approaching the city, Clemenceau spoke briefly to the newspapermen. All his remarks were witticisms and dealt in no way with his mission to this country. "They are so far from the moon," he replied promptly to a question about how he liked New York's tall buildings.

"Wall Street? It is always the same place," was another answer.

Before the inevitable question could be asked about what he thought of American women, the elderly statesman said:

"The women? The difference is that when I came before they used to show their heads, necks and hands. Now they show so much more."

Throughout his conversation with the newspapermen he kept trying to shut their questions off by saying, with an amused twinkle in his eyes: "You are gratified? Yes? Good-by."

To the interviewers, a little later, he remarked, "I wish you no harm," and again he smiled. Once more he said, "I wish you good luck," bowing farewell to the newspapermen, but they refused to budge and continued to ask him questions. Finally, asked the purpose of his mission, he chuckled and said, "I will tell you privately Tuesday at the Metropolitan Opera House."

Slips on Ladder.

Among those who went to greet him were delegates of the Alsace-Lorraine Society. These were the first of many French faces that the Tiger was to see and he seemed to brighten when he caught sight of one.

The Tiger received an unpleasant shock, however, when he stepped off the Paris to cross the steamer Manhattan to the Macom. His foot slipped for a moment on the ladder and Meehan and a police sergeant, who were supporting him on both sides, tugged him along at a rate too rapid for his comfort. As he crossed the Manhattan the siren of that boat was blown with an ear-splitting shriek. Involuntarily, Clemenceau's fingers went up to his ears and he held them there until the noise subsided.

A crowd of fully 2500 persons crowded about the automobiles at Battery Place Park and cheered and waved to the distinguished Frenchman.

Somewhere between the Battery and City Hall, Clemenceau collected a pink rose. To this he clung throughout the rest of the ceremonies, his hands gloved at all times.

Smiles for Soldiers.

At City Hall, two platoons of First Division troops from Governor's Island stood at attention with bayonets fixed as the guard of honor to the old French warhorse. His eyes glittered and sparkled as he saw them. And his smile was genuine and long. When he got out of the car he was greeted by Murray Hulbert, acting Mayor, who spoke to him briefly, and then led him to the Aldermanic Chamber.

Outside in the park was a crowd of 2000 persons. Inside, in the chamber, was a shifting, eager throng of nearly half that number, counting those in the corridors. The fire department band blared a march as the former French Premier entered.

George W. Wickersham, former Attorney-General, and a member of the Reception Committee, introduced Clemenceau in a short address, delivered with evident warmth and admiration.

"He found it more difficult to make peace than to make war," concluded Wickersham seriously, and the crowd burst into laughter and applause.

Hulbert then delivered a short address of welcome that was singularly friendly in tone and generous in appreciation of the record of the great Frenchman.

No Closing of Hearts.

But the bit of Hulbert's speech, which appeared to work its way under the outward calm of the Tiger, standing in repose and nodding or smiling modestly as Hulbert spoke, was this:

"I can assure you that in spite of the innuendo or indirectness of ingratitude, the people of this city are incapable of closing their hearts against compassion for human woes and that this nation is still, as it always will be, inspred by high ideals and a sturdy conception of human liberty and human freedom.

"The flower of our vigorous youth and manhood, whose bones are comingled with the soil of your beloved France, proclaim more eloquently than the tongue of man the truth of that historic fact."

While Hulbert and Wickersham were speaking, the impassive mask of Clemenceau was turned toward them, except when a smile broke through for a moment. His long arms hung loosely by his side. His check suit, with its square cutaway effect and sagging black bow tie, completed the figure. His shoulders stooped and accentuated the squat, heavy figure. He looked far more like an inscrutable old French peasant than the figure of a world statesman.

Changes When He Speaks.

But the moment he started to speak his whole expression lighted up. One knew at once that there exists a great fire of burning passion back of that sturdy body and lined face. Clemenceau spoke in English. It was excellent English. Its mistakes were not grammatical, but those of vocabulary. It bore a strong French accent, the guttural "r" of the Parisian making every word he said impossible to mistake as that expressed by a man of any other nation.

But the Tiger not only has a surprising aptness of phrase, but the mistakes he does make seem to improve the language and strengthen his meaning, rather than injure it.

Unquestionably, the Tiger of France did not win the love of the American people at sight today. It was entirely out of the question for the Tiger. Tigers don't woo. They subdue. The other method is for lambkins. But if the American people doesn't love him when he leaves for France it is pretty sure to admire him and know it has been in a fight. That much seems certain.

Text of Clemenceau's New York Address Praising U. S. Part in War

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.

GEORGES CLEMENCEAU, wartime Premier of France, in a speech here today, paying tribute to America's part in the World War, spoke as follows:

"We have had a terrific, the greatest, war that ever was in the world. Men fell by hundreds of thousands in that war, and we waited very long sometimes and we looked around to see if some help would not come. Help did come and it came magnificently, I must say, in the shape of the American soldier. I can speak of it as having seen it on the fields, and I have seen it, too, on the farm. Very often I met at the peasants' homes a big, huge American with two children on his knees, telling stories to them and trying to understand the questions that the old men and women should ask about America.

"Of course, he did not speak French more than the other spoke English. Some way or other, they made themselves understood. Very soon we discovered they were all friends.

"I have seen them—the Americans—in the fight and I have seen them in the field when the American under the command of Gen. Pershing took hold marvelously at St. Mihiel, releasing a great many people. When I arrived the next day, what did I see? All the American motors in the old city full of French women and children and flowers. These poor people who had not been allowed to get out of their dens for three years were rescued by the Americans.

The Best and the Worst.

"And I saw the crowd cry, and, laughing and crying, I think I saw once in a while an American soldier get a kiss from some woman. It was the next day after the battle took place, when all of the city had been emptied by the Americans. It was a joy not to be forgotten.

"I saw sometimes the worst. I have seen Americans in the mud of the trenches for days and days without being relieved, and looking very sorry, but the moment I came and brought them the crosses of war they had so magnificently gained, they were all smiles. We shook hands and we spoke of the old place. America was the old place. They did not cry and I could see the twinkle in their eyes. Of course, they knew I was theirs, and they knew they were mine. One day in the highway I met a troop of soldiers going home and they made me feel sad when they spoke of the old country.

"Do Come—I Won't Go."

"They said: 'Won't you come to America some day?' I said: 'No, I am too old—I cannot think of going there.' I said, 'You make me make speeches and it tires my lungs. I have very few of them left, poor miserable things.' They said, 'You do come.' 'I won't go,' I said, and for years and years I said, 'I won't go.'

"One morning I was in my private house bordering on the sea on the other side of the water, when I received bad news from America. I heard bad names. We were called imperialists and militarists. I think that is horrid and I thought I had better go and tell them how things happened to pass and to show them that their judgment was not correct.

"One day a British newspaper arrived. It contained criticisms from a man of very high standing, calling America bad names. At that moment I decided I had better go to America. That is the reason why I am here. I do not make sentences. I don't promise anything. I come, as you very well know, on a mission.

"If It Turns Out Right"——

"Nobody can ascribe any personal aims to my act in visiting this country. My life is over. But it does seem to me that I can do you some service in letting you know how we Europeans judge the American people. It is necessary, because in the world at this time there is a crisis that hasn't been settled yet. How it will end nobody knows. If you take the wrong side—well, then the war counts for nothing and we may have to go to war again. If it turns out right, and the right thing is done at the right time, then it will be one of the greatest steps for the civilization of mankind.

"That is the question I have come to put to America. I will ask them for great freedom of thought and great freedom of speech. I must be allowed to speak as a free man to free men who are not afraid of anything. Your greetings encourage me to believe that I will get access to American minds. It will be a great satisfaction to me.

"Beautiful Ladies to Look At."

"I looked at this country from the Battery. It has not changed as much as it seems. The young ladies look exactly the same and that is the first message I am going to send to my country. I am going to tell my countrymen to come here because there are beautiful ladies to look at.

"During over 50 years I have been mixed up with all of the worst crises of France—think of that. In my own life I have seen my country invaded twice by Germans. I am the only survivor of those who protested at the asembly at Bordeaux against the act of invasion. I do not want to see that invasion repeated. I will not permit anyone to tell me that I have too many soldiers or too few soldiers unless they succeeded in some way in giving such guarantees. Then, only, with the greatest of pleasure, will I dissolve the French Army.

"Will you Americans show us the similar feeling? We must defend ourselves."

DRYS IN THE HOUSE TO TRY TO AMEND SHIP SUBSIDY BILL

Provision Wanted Excluding From Federal Aid All Vessels Permitting Sale of Liquor at Sea.

FIGHT OVER MEASURE TO BEGIN THURSDAY

Democratic Leaders Say They Will Be Joined in Attack by Many Republican Members.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Friends and foes of the administration ship subsidy bill went to work today in active preparation for the fight over the measure which will begin next Thursday in the House.

While there were indications of a deluge of amendments, opponents said they would not agree on a definite policy of attack until they had opportunity for informal conferences. Meanwhile, Republican members of the Merchant Marine Committee, which framed the bill, announced that they would go ahead with the fight, believing enough votes were assured to put it through without important changes.

Democratic leaders, counting on almost solid party opposition to the measure, declared they would be joined in their attack by many Republicans, particularly from the Middle West. Most interest, aside from claims and counterclaims as to the final fate of the bill, centered in amendments which might get through under a broad rule opening it for any changes the House might see fit to make.

Tax Proposal.

Some Republican leaders expressed a belief that a proposal to revive the excess profits tax as the means of providing a subsidy for ships would not stand up. They insisted it would be thrown out on a point of order as not germane. Regardless of this view, members eager to get the old law re-enacted declared the question would be put to a test.

Under the bill as drawn, the subsidy would be provided out of a revolving fund obtained chiefly from a 10 per cent take-off from all revenue receipts. This, according to estimates, would reach about $35,000,000 or $40,000,000 a year. At the time of its repeal the excess profits tax brought in more than $400,000,000.

The prohibition question is expected to enter into the fight probably in two ways. House drys have declared a determination to put through, if possible, an amendment providing that no ship shall share in any Federal subsidy if it permits the sale of liquor at sea, regardless of any ruling by the Supreme Court on the pending suit resulting from the Attorney-General's opinion that the Volstead law follows the flag beyond the three-mile limit.

Additional Proposal.

Satisfied that the prohibition question is settled, the Merchant Marine Commission is preparing to bring in an additional proposal designed to increase the mail payment to passenger ships to offset possible losses through dry ruling. Some House leaders opposed to the bill's provisions announced that a Republican move would be made to strike out the section under which shippers whose goods by designation are brought over in American vessels, would receive a 5 per cent income tax rebate on the amount of freight payments.

An effort also will be made, it was stated, to tack on to the bill an amendment repealing the Panama Canal tolls for American ships. The bill repealing the tolls was passed more than a year ago by the Senate, but it never reached the House for a vote.

Virtually the entire time of the special session which begins Monday will be taken up with consideration of the ship subsidy bill. It will be put before the House Thursday under a rule calling for a vote on Nov. 29. There will be three full days of general debate and three full days for amendments.

PLANS FOR MILITARY TRAINING OF YOUNG CIVILIANS APPROVED

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—War department plans for fostering the training of young men in citizenship were approved today by the conference on training the youth of the country called by Secretary Weeks. A committee of seven was provided for in a resolution adopted with instructions to urge upon Congress the necessity for greater appropriations to continue work.

The meeting, which worked in three sections, adjourned today after receiving reports and recommendations on citizenship training, the reserve officers training corps, and the citizens military training camps. Among the committee recommendations was one urging immediate appropriation of $2,980,150 for the training of 38,000 men in civilian military training camps next summer. Last year it was said the appropriation was made for these camps only two weeks before they were to open, with a consequent loss of interest among men who expected to attend.

ARMY HORSE THAT ONCE DREW GARBAGE CART, WINNER AGAIN

Submersible, Valued When Bought at $142, Takes Another National Show Cup.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Submersible, the army horse that once drew a laundry wagon and a garbage cart at Fort Riley, Kan., added to his laurels at the closing day of the National Horse Show by capturing the Squadron A Challenge Cup. His owner, Maj. J. A. Barry, had the mount.

The chestnut gelding's performances at this year's show have been remarkable for a horse that cost Maj. Barry $142.15 as a 2-year-old, when the officer thought he saw Blue Ribbon horse flash and rescued him from the laundry wagon here at the post.

Submersible's string of victories include the Overseas Cup, the Bowman Challenge Cup, the Pierre Lorillard Jr. Cup and the Jockey Club Plate.

ply to the delegation was not made public.

The committee was made up of Dr. John H. Finley, of New York; Dr. E. O. Wason of Washington; Dr. Stanley White, of New York, and Bishop Charles H. Brent of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

The appeal expressed the belief that "50,000,000 members of the Christian churches of all faiths in America" were in sympathy with its purpose. "We hope that America will have as representatives at Lausanne conference some one from this country who is intimately acquainted with humanitarian interests in the Near East," it was stated.

More could be accomplished, it was set forth, by accredited delegates than by mere observers.

LAUSANNE PARLEY TO OPEN MONDAY

By the Associated Press.

LAUSANNE, Switzerland, Nov. 18.—Another attempt to stabilize the peace of Europe will be undertaken here next Monday, with the inauguration of the Near Eastern conference attended by practically all the Powers of Western and Southeastern Europe.

Primarily summoned to establish peace between victorious Turkey and defeated Greece, the conference possesses vast importance to the United States and to all Europe.

It must settle the various problems that have grown out of the Turk's return to the Continent from which they were expelled after the great war, as well as the all-dominant question of the freedom of the Dardanelles, in which America has a natural interest.

Must Lay Down Frontiers.

The conference must lay down Turkey's new frontier and take up the delicate question of Turkey's capitulation, or concession, whereby foreigners in Turkey, like those living in China, have been exempt from Turkish laws and free from taxation. Turkey demands freedom from these restrictions and clamors for national administrative liberty.

Without departing from her traditional policy of nonintervention in European politics, the United States has shown her interest in the forthcoming developments of the conference by designating three observers: Richard Washburn Child, Ambassador to Italy; Joseph C. Grew, Minister to Switzerland, and Rear Admiral Mark L. Bristol, official American representative at Constantinople.

Position of Allies.

Recent events in London, Paris, Constantinople and Athens have demonstrated the delicate nature of the relations between England and France concerning this Near Eastern tangle, which statesmen of each of these countries striving for "unity of front," which will safeguard their separate national aspirations as regards commerce and their various "special positions."

The prediction is freely made that the Lausanne conference will have a weighty bearing upon future, amity and harmonious co-operation between England and France in European affairs.

The Fascisti of Italy, dedicated to a firmer foreign policy, will be present to demand equality of treatment and apparently strong in their determination to denounce the Italian-Grecian treaty of 1920, whereby Italy agreed to cede to Greece the Dodecanese Islands in the Aegean.

Started Fire, Then Robbed Bank.

GENOA, O, Nov. 18.—Six robbers held up the Genoa Banking Co. bank late this afternoon and escaped with several thousand dollars, after starting a fire to draw the attention of the citizens to another section of the village, and shooting a citizen so badly that he probably will die.

EINSTEIN SURE HIS THEORIES WILL STAND

Proponent of Relativity Hypothesis Believes Observations Will Vindicate Reasoning.

By the Associated Press.

KOBE, Japan, Nov. 18.—Prof. Albert Einstein, sponsor for the theory of relativity and proponent of the doctrine that rays of light bend to the attraction of the great heavenly bodies they pass, declared today on his arrival from Thursday Island that he believed observations of the September solar eclipse would prove his conclusions correct.

Prof. Einstein said he understood that the scientific expedition to Australia to take photographs during the solar eclipse had been successful and he believes the photographs would vindicate his theory.

He declared that the expedition to Thursday Island, composed of German scientists, has met with complete failure as the sky during the eclipse was overcast and the making of photographs impossible.

Prof. Einstein was given a tremendous welcome here, where the keenest interest is displayed in his theory. He intends to return to Europe via Palestine and will not visit the United States.

Australian Expedition Is Called "Particularly Successful."

By the Associated Press.

VICTORIA, B. C., Nov. 18.—The Western Australia expedition which observed the September solar eclipse to determine, among other things the truth of the Einstein theory of relativity, was "particularly successful," according to N. A. Chant, professor of Astrophysics at Toronto University and Dr. R. K. Young of Victoria, Canadian members of the expedition who returned from Australia today.

"It was a wonderful eclipse and we were successful in securing a remarkable collection of photographs of the phenomena," Dr. Chant said.

Speaking of the accomplishments of the expedition, Dr. Chant said: "If the Einstein theory is proved, it means we shall have to start afresh to get new ideas of space and time. It will mean a complete revolution of physical science."

No definite scientific pronouncement concerning the effect of the eclipse observations on the Einstein theory would be possible for some time as the photographic plates would have to be developed and measured with great care, he said. This, he declared, would take some months and after that mathematical computations requiring considerable additional time would have to be made.

"The work will require the most infinite care and skill to determine the exact distance from the center of one little speck on the plate to the center of the next," he added.

The expedition went to Wallal, Australia, where the eclipse was exceptionally clear.

Evanston, Ill., Voted Dry.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—The city of Evanston, in which is the headquarters of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, upheld its traditional reputation for dryness by defeating the Illinois wet referendum on Nov. 7 by a majority of 346 votes. This was shown by completion of the official canvass of the Cook County vote, which, it was erroneously reported a few days ago, had shown that Evanston voted wet.

Women Out of City Government.

By the Associated Press.

ROSEBURG, Ore., Nov. 18.—Josephine, which two years ago elected a city government composed entirely of women, today elected men to serve in the various city offices for the coming two years, and only two women remain in office, those serving on the Council. Two years ago the women organized and, taking advantage of the laxity of the men, elected their own city administration. The women did not again become candidates.

DROP KICK GIVES PRINCETON VICTORY OVER YALE, 3 TO 0

Schaeffering Star of Billikens' Victory Over South Dakota

St. Louis Triumphs, 24 to 0, With Fatty Quirk Playing Brilliantly on Defense to Check Coyotes' Vicious Attack in the Second Half.

A fat boy named Quirk, right tackle for the St. Louis University Billikens, spent only a few minutes in yesterday's game with the South Dakota U. Coyotes, which the Billikens won, 24-0. Quirk was injured in the first half, and when the second half started was wrapped in a blanket on the sidelines. He didn't score a single point for the Bills but he was mainly responsible for that "nothing" of the Coyotes.

The game was touched only in St. Louis Colors but one of the brightest football beams of the afternoon was Quirk. The Bills had scored 10 points in the first half by menas of a field goal by Schaeffering, a touchdown by the same small gentleman and a goal after touchdown. Between the halves, the Coyotes crouched on one side of the field while their Coach, Allison of Minnesota talked to them. When the second half started, the Coyotes were battling mad. The Bills kicked off to them and they started a series of plays, mosty through the line, which gave them 45 yards of the muddiest of Mr. Phil Ball's once-handsome terrain.

Enter Quirk the Phat

Apparently there was no stopping them. Coach O'Rourke thought deeply and, time being called for a moment, ordered Quirk into the fray. Quirk the Phat limped to his place at tackle and the Coyotes started once again on what they thought would be a continuation of their mad dash down the field. But they made the mistake of trying to pierce just the point guarded by Quirk. He heaved them back and they tried again, and four times they dashed at him and four times he hurled them back. They lost the ball and, seemingly, their punch at the same time. They never got started after that and, his work done and beautifully done, the injured Quirk crawled back to the side-lines. But the crowd had sensed the drama of it all and cheered him wildly.

For the first few minutes of the opening quarter, play was even. The Bills had advanced the ball well within South Dakota territory, but there were stopped, two of their plays being smeared for losses. However, Schaeffering dropped a field goal from the 19-yard line, putting his team in the lead by three points. The attacks of both teams lacked decision for the rest of the quarter. In the second period there were some lofty kicking exchanges without much damage until on one St. Louis kick, the Coyote safety man fumbled. Thornton recovered and sprinted over the line, but was called back to the 20-yard mark, the referee's whistle having blown before he had ended his run. This rather tough break only made the Bills fight harder and McConachie and McKenzie carried the ball in two plunges to the two-yard line where Schaeffering roamed through center for the score, kicking a drop for the extra point.

Hannegan Intercepts a Pass.

After Quirk had starred in his "mopping the Coyotes" sketch to start the second half, Hannegan edged into the limelight and outbasked his teammates for the moment by snaring a South Dakota pass and racing 40 yards for a touchdown. Schaeffering kicked the extra point.

Some keen strategy was shown by the Billikens in the fourth period. The shades of night had fallen rather fast. The Bills found themselves some 40 yards shy of a third touchdown.

It looked like a good place for a trick play, so the entire Billiken cast collaborated on one cleverly.

Geraghty passed the ball back and the entire St. Louis backfield sprinted in various directions, each of them apparently with the ball. Several were tackled. In fact, the Coyotes were thorough in downing everybody except Kelly who actually had the ball. He finally was caught just shy of the line, but Schaeffering went over on the next push.

The Billikens, always a splendid defensive team, yesterday showed great improvement on their attack. The backs kept their feet well in the hazardous going and the tackling was deadly and clean cut. O'Rourke has a much-improved eleven and should finish the season most happily.

ST. LOUIS U. HIGH MEETS JEFFERSON CITY TEAM HERE NEXT SATURDAY

The St. Louis University High School football team, which had its game with Chaminade College, Englewood High School and other local teams cancelled because of its early showing, has arranged a game with the strong high school team of Jefferson City, Mo., which will be played at Sportsman's Park next Saturday afternoon.

This will be the only football game in the city Saturday and the acceptance to the Junior Billikens invitation by Jefferson City has given Coach Boland's boys a reason for remaining in training, as otherwise they would have had to disband for the season owing to a lack of opponents. As Jefferson City High has made a good record throughout the interior of the State and St. Louis University has lost only one game for two seasons, it should be a battle that would be above the ordinary for a high school contest.

ST. LOUIS HIGH WINS FROM WHITEHALL, 38-7

The East St. Louis High School team, which has suffered but one reverse this season, yesterday defeated Whitehall, 38 to 7. Earl Millard starred in the backfield for East St. Louis. The East Siders started off with two touchdowns in the first half, added one in the second, and two more in the third period. Whitehall finished with one touchdown in the fourth quarter. Whitehall scored in the second period.

East St. Louis meets Pittfield next Saturday.

NOTRE DAME CAPTURES GAME, BUT LOSES ITS STAR FULLBACK CASTNER

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 18.—Butler College's hopes for the Indiana College football championship were shattered here today by the University of Notre Dame, the final score being 32 to 3 in favor of the team from South Bend.

The victory was a costly one, however. Paul Castner, fullback for Notre Dame, being severely injured in the third period, when he was tackled. It was announced that he probably had suffered a displaced hip, but that it had been snapped back into place and that he might not be as seriously injured as first believed.

Butler looked as if it had a chance only in the first period, when, opposed by almost the entire Notre Dame second team, it kept most of the play in the visitors' territory. Neither eleven was able to score, however. The Notre Dame first team took the field in the second period.

Haskell Indians Win.

EMPORIA, Kan., Nov. 18.—The Haskell Indians won from the Kansas State Normal here this afternoon, 27 to 14. The Indians used the forward pass and wide end runs advantageously. Haskell scored four touchdowns on the teachers two. The Normal rallied in the last quarter, scoring all its points then.

Missouri Tigers Crush Piker Team, 27-0; Bond Scores Three Touchdowns for Victors

Halfback Gains Total of 157 Yards, Averaging Five Yards Each Time He Carries the Ball.

By Joseph F. Holland,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 18.—Atlas, Hercules and kindred strong men would do well to pay some slight heed to Arthur Bond, a sophomore at Missouri University and a combination battering ram and tractor in the Tiger backfield. It was this comparative "unknown" who tore the Washington University defense to pieces this afternoon at Rollins Field and won the lion's share of credit for Missouri's 27 to 0 victory over the Pikers.

There have been many instances in which a player has scored three touchdowns. Bond did that. But there are few within memory where one man had the power to gain 60 per cent of his team's yardage when that yardage was material and be on his feet to smile about it at the close of the game.

Exclusive of forward passes the Tigers rushed the ball for a total gain of 266 yards. Bond himself, carried the ball 34 times during the game and gained a total of 157 yards, about 60 per cent of his team's punch.

Averaged Five Yards.

There were times that he banged the Washington line and was stopped. Twice he was thrown for losses, once for 10 yards and again for four yards. But even with that he was able to get in an average of nearly five yards every time he took the ball. He was invincible. He crashed through center and guard. He swung out toward end and then cut sharply through tackle. And he skirted those same ends always for telling gains.

His best effort came in the second play of the third quarter. The ball was on Missouri's 38-yard line when Scannell snapped it to him and he cut through tackle for a brilliant run of 42 yards. "Baldy" Thumser, Washington safety man, finally brought him down on Washington's 20-yard line.

They tell a story on the campus at Columbia and the story is that Tom Kelly, who recently resigned as head coach, destroyed Bond's confidence by incessant "riding." It is significant to note that in the first game after Kelly's removal, Bond became the most powerful figure in Missouri's hitherto feeble attack.

Looks Like a New Team.

Bond's work made the entre team look better. It showed the same spark that Old Missouri teams have shown and it played smart football, aside from the tremendous advantage that it had in weight.

Bob Scannell the St. Louis boy playing quarterback, directed his team capably. He sensed the weakness of substitute Washington tackles and plugged away at them with his backs until the Washington secondary defense was forced to come up and back up the line.

The moment the Piker backs were drawn in to protect the faltering line, Scannell opened up a passing attack that had the Red and Green non-plussed. Scannell had two aces and he used them. The pass slipped over the line with no one to stop it and when the defense for it was in position, the weak Washington tackles came in for more pounding.

Pikers Wilt Under Fire.

Washington held admirably in the first quarter and Missouri was unable to score. It was easily seen however, that it was merely a question of time, until Washington would wilt. One touchdown was scored in the second quarter and at the end of the half the score was 7 to 0. It was as good as Washington could hope to do.

Bond made the initial score, but it was really a smart play by Scannell that paved the way for it. Missouri was on the Washington 43-yard line five yards from the right side line. Instead of playing out to the center, Scannell called for a forward pass down that meager five-yard strip. Knight snapped the ball to Fowler for a 23-yard gain and the ball was on the Piker's 20-yard line. From then on it was a drive at those weak tackles and finally Bond crashed through the left side of the Piker line for five yards and a touchdown.

Capt. Bob Denny and Milt Koch, the regular Washington tackles, who are injured, sat on the sideline and watched the Tiger assault upon their old positions. They liked to believe that they could have stemmed that tide.

Allan Lincoln, one of the Valley's greatest players, went into the game for just one minute at this point. He kicked the goal following Bond's touchdown and was immediately withdrawn. His appearance was wildly received.

Bond Gains at Will.

To detail the second half is merely to add to the glory that was Bond's. Twenty times in this period he took the ball and slashed through the Washington defense for 104 yards, slightly better than five yards to the plunge. He added a touchdown in the third period and another in the fourth.

The final touchdown came just before the end. Smith recovered a fumble in Washington territory and after a pass had put the ball on Washington's nine-yard line, Bond cut through left tackle for his crowning effort of the day.

Knight made the third touchdown after Bond had put the ball on the one-foot line for him. Fowler kicked two of the attempts at goal but failed in his final effort.

Missouri's line outweighed Washington's first line defense 11 pounds to the man. Washington did succeed in holding the Tiger attack early in the game but was unable to lend its backs any assistance in advancing the ball. The Pikers' two first downs were gained on a penalty and one of two successful forward passes. Further than that the defending eleven had nothing to say.

Tigers Show Courage When They Halt Blue Attack on 1-Yard Line

Roper's Machine Makes One Long Sustained Advance Yield Three Points, Ken Smith, Left-Footed Kicker, Booting Ball Between Posts for Only Score of Game.

By Heywood Broun.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 18—Princeton beat Yale by a score of 3 to 0 in the Palmer Stadium this afternoon, and the David system is established as the greatest of them all. One punch at the right time and in the right place will win. It did today. Yale was strong and showy and gained almost at will except when the need was vital. The Blue eleven seemed to have the complete run of the field. The Tigers imposed only one restriction on the visitors. The goal line was barred.

Princeton made just one sustained advance during the course of the game, but it did not end until a drop kick had been scored.

Ken Smith did it. He is 21 years old, weighs 171 pounds and is five feet seven inches tall, and he lives in Montclair.

All this seems perfectly regular, but there is something else. Ken Smith is lefthanded. His parents worried about this eccentricity and reasoned with him, but Smith was not to be dissuaded. He knew best and grew up to rout the bulldog with his left toe.

One of the secrets of Princeton's success is the manner in which Tiger teams have been encouraged to believe in their invincibility in the pinches. They don't mind the tight places. To them a crisis is as stimulating as a caress. Yale was allowed to take liberties, but there was always a limit.

Princeton was twice glorious. The Tigers carried the ball in one long sustained advance which gave them three points and they held Yale on the one-yard line.

Yale's Football Fallacy.

There seems to be a fatal fallacy of late in Yale's football tradition. There is a deepset belief at New Haven that games can be won by sheer virility. Fortune, the Elis think, is a jade who must yield if men get rough with her and so the choice of the Blue almost always falls upon a crash straight through center. Accordingly the bell of Nassau hall is ringing and will go on through the night. Hundreds of Princeton undergraduates are waiting in line for a chance to pull the rope and it has been necessary to limit each candidate to five minutes. Ding, dong, goes the bell, ding, dong and ding dong is well enough for bells, but not for football teams.

Jordan tried the center of the line and they threw him back. Yale's great chance came early in the game. After receiving the kickoff, Yale punted to Princeton's 30-yard line and after running one play for a five-yard gain Gorman fumbled. It was Yale's ball on Princeton's 35-yard line. The Blue eleven slashed into the attack with great fury. They sliced and crashed their way to the 10-yard line, and still they kept on. Jordan made three yards, Scott made three and Neale took the ball to the one-yard line. It was fourth down with the goal line to make and the goal line was only three feet away. The Yale team went into conference. They huddled together and talked it over.

Jordan Thrown Back.

Jordan is a big man. Jordan is the captain and a splendid plunging back. And so they gave the ball to him and he tried to cut straight through the Tiger line, or rather he tried to go over. He jumped head first because three feet isn't very far, but the Princeton line did not behave like most hurdles. Up rose Jordan in the air and up rose Princeton. The Yale captain hit a mass of men and bounced back. Yale had lost the ball on downs.

Beattie Displays Fine Left Jab in Paving Way for Princeton's Score

And now for Prenceton's winning march. It came at the very beginning of the third period. Yale kicked off badly to Treat, who was downed on his own 40-yard line. The Tigers scrambled into place and Cleaves shot a forward pass to Smith which was good for a first down and a little over. Gorman was running his plays off at a furious rate. He and all the other Tigers seemed to sense that here was the break in the game. Cleaves slipped around end for eight yards and on the next play Beattie got loose. Until he began to run few spectators seemed to realize that he was in the game.

Who's Beattie?" asked the men in the press box and back came the answer:

"He's the man who's running with the ball," and he ran with extraordinary power. He showed the best left jab which has been seen on any Eastern gridiron this fall.

Whenever a Yale man came close Beattie put out his hand and knocked him over. He sidestepped a few, but mostly he liked to knock them over. Scott collared him on the 13-yard line, and here is something characteristic of Princeton football. Beattie never loomed up in the game again. In all the rest of the afternoon he gained less than five yards. But he had inserted the long run at exactly the time when it would do the most good.

Smith Kicks One From Field.

They gave him the ball immediately after he had finished his great dash, but the best he could do was a single yard. Then came the famous triple pass which beat Harvard, but this time it was good for only two yards. Cleaves leaped at the Yale line like a mad man, but the Elis tamed him after he had gone two yards. It was fourth down with five to go, and the ball was on the Yale eight-yard mark. Smith dropped back 10 yards and the pass came true. He stepped forward and swung his left foot and the ball went over the bar.

The score was: Princeton 3, Yale 0, and there it remained, although Yale was constantly on the march throughout the last half.

Smith had one other chance to score in the first half when he tried to drop kick from the 35-yard line. He came close, but the ball hit the outer edge of one of the uprights and bounded away. Late in the game O'Hearn came in for Yale and he did some of the most dazzling dropkicking we have ever seen, only it did not count for anything. He tried one kick from the 60-yard line and two from the 55. One of these fell short by not more than five or six feet. And yet on another occasion, O'Hearn had a much easier chance from the 36-yard line, and then he didn't come anywhere near scoring.

The whole game of the Yale team was like that. Around the center of the field it was consistently magnificent. The running attack was beautiful and gained no end of ground, but Princeton managed to spill it when the goal line was in danger and the forward passing of the losers was seldom effective. Almost without exception Yale turned to a pass merely as a last hope. In this part of their equipment they seemed to have no confidence.

There were no less than five well-sustained advances by Yale, but none of them was good enough. Princeton played football as Tilden played tennis. They had a good regulation brand for ordinary distances, and then when they needed it they could turn on something much better. There was always something left in the cellar, rare, fine and potent. Late in the fourth quarter, for instance, Yale struck deep into Princeton territory and seemed irresistable. And then suddenly Princeton decided that things had gone far

WOLVERINES VICTORS OVER BADGERS, 13-6

Conquerors of Yale Have Hard Time in Downing Ohio State Eleven by 12-9 —Locke Scores Team's Touchdowns.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—Three Western conference football teams, Iowa, Chicago and Michigan remain tied for the championship tonight as the result of their victories today. Iowa defeated Ohio State 12 to 9; Michigan defeated Wisconsin 12 to 6 and Chicago won from Illinois, 9 to 0.

The teams may remain tied at the close of the season. Next Saturday, Northwestern meets Iowa in its final game at Iowa City. Michigan plays Minnesota at Minneapolis and Wisconsin will play at Chicago. Michigan is apparently the only team at a disadvantage by playing on a foreign field.

Should any one team lose, the remaining pair will be tied for the championship and two of the three contenders must lose to give the honor to the remaining one.

John Thomas Proves Star in Victory for Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—With Johnny Thomas, the human "battering ram" ripping and tearing the line to pieces, Chicago triumphed over Illinois, 9 to 0, in their twenty-third annual game on Stagg Field today, keeping the Maroons undefeated in the race for the Western Conference championship. The contest was witnessed by a capacity crowd of 32,000, the same number that witnessed the Chicago-Princeton classic three weeks ago.

Illinois, which sprung the surprise of the season a week ago by defeating Wisconsin 3 to 0, proved dangerous on defensive, but lacked the punch to come within striking distance of Chicago's goal to enable Clarke to try for a field goal.

It was Clarke, a brother of "Potsy" Clarke, of Illinois fame who scored the points that upset Wisconsin after playing a very ordinary brand of football at the start.

The Maroons opened with a 40-yard drop kick in the first period and clinched the game when Harry Thomas, a brother of Johnny raced across for a touchdown in the closing minutes of the game after the "Fighting Illini" had three times held for downs inside of their own five-yard line.

Illinois' Line Holds.

Chicago was clearly superior after getting warmed up and carried the ball to Illinois' 28-yard line. Here the Illini line stiffened, but Lloyd Rehrke dropped back and booted a perfect drop kick.

From this point, Illinois turned back the Chicago battering ram by vicious tackling and close work at the center of the line.

A series of bad punts and penalties in the final quarter coupled with a fumbled punt by McIlwain gave Chicago the ball on Illinois' 10-yard line. Illinois held Zorn three inches from the goal line and punted out of danger. Again Chicago entered the 10-yard zone, but the ball went to Illinois when a pass to Strohmeier grounded on the fourth down. A fumble, which Illinois received saved the line a third time, but an intercepted Illinois pass coupled with a double pass to H. Thomas on the fourth down enabled him to score the only touchdown of the game. Pyott failed to kick goal.

Illinois tried desperately in the final moments to recoup with a passing attack, but the Maroons again took the ball and were on their way to another touchdown when the whistle ended the game.

Hakeyes Overcome Lead To Down Buckeye Team.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 18.—Iowa defeated Ohio State today 12 to 9, but after the Buckeye's had twice held the lead and after they had threatened throughout four periods of brilliant play to break the Hawkeyes' long string of gridiron triumphs.

The invaders, making their first appearance here, outplayed the Buckeyes. The fierce line plunging of the Hawkeye backs swept over Ohio's forward wall numerous times, but only once were they able to terminate a series of rushes with a touchdown, their second score resulting from a mishandled punt by Workman, Ohio halfback, who had been injured on the previous play. Meanwhile Ohio State, fighting grimly after three previous western conference defeats, took advantage of almost every opportunity and on several occasions threatened to convert an apparent defeat into one of the last minute victories which entered them conference titles in years gone by.

The Iowans, conquerors of Yale and conference champions of last year, were not to be denied. Their offensive play, which worked with machine like precision overcame a six point lead, obtained by the Buckeyes, when Wilson received a pass and dashed across the goal in the first quarter, topped the second Buckeye bid for supremacy which came with Workman's field goal in the second quarter and succeeded in holding their narrow lead throughout the rest of the game.

Iowans Put Over Long March.

Locke, the Hawkeye quarter back, and Captain scored both touchdowns for his team. The first came a minute after the opening of the second period when the Hawkeyes, surprised by Ohio's ability to score, unlimbered a heavy line attack, interspersed with forward passes which carried them from their two-yard line, the full length of the field and over the goal. The second was scored only a few minutes later. Workman, Ohio State safety man, dropped one of Minnich's twisting punts and Heldt, Iowa center covered it on the two-yard line. Two plunges through the line put it over the goal.

The Hawkeyes played minus the services of Parkin, star quarterback. Capt. Locke shifting from full back to the pivot point and Nugent and Rich taking the place of half back Miller, who was placed at full back. Rich on the play played a brilliant game.

Michigan Team Scored Upon for First Time.

By the Associated Press.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 18.—A driving, speedy attack developing in the second half, and which Wisconsin could not quite check, enabled Michigan to defeat the Badgers, 13 to 6 today, and continue in the race for the Western Conference football championship. The victory, however, carried a measure of disappointment to Michigan supporters, in that it was the first contest in which the Wolverines have been scored upon this year.

More than 42,000 persons crowded the stadium, filling all seats and standing room.

Michigan attack was one of the most brilliant ever seen on Ferry Field. Repeatedly the Wolverine backs plunged through the Badger line or circled the ends for long gains. Only the fighting spirit displayed by the Madison eleven prevented an overwhelming Michigan victory.

W. and J. Team Is Downed for First Time in 3 Seasons

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 18.—Washington and Jefferson's wonder eleven met its Waterloo today. Outgeneraled, outplayed and outkicked by the University of Pittsburg Panthers, Coach Neale's warriors—undefeated for nearly three seasons—lost a 19 to 0 struggle on a muddy gridiron to an eleven that had twice been conquered this fall.

A brittle line and slow thinking by the W. and J. secondary defense had much to do with the unexpected result. The visitors, held two to one favorites, were swept off their feet in the first few minutes of play and with the exception of a spectacular forward pass rally late in the second period, the Presidents usually were fighting within the shadow of their goal line.

ALABAMA; CONQUEROR OF PENN, LOSES TO KENTUCKY

By the Associated Press.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 18.—The University of Alabama, was defeated today by the Wildcats of the University of Kentucky, 6 to 0, in the most bitterly fought gridiron battle in the history of Stoll Field. Kentucky's lone touchdown came in the third quarter and was the result of line plunges by Curtis Sanders, a pass from Fuller to Holowell and an end run by Fuller. Fuller failed to kick goal.

The teams fought on even terms for the first half with the play inside the 40-yard lines. Only two first downs were made in the first half, one to the credit of each team. At the start of the second half, Kentucky started off with a devastating attack and had crossed the Crimson goal line before Alabama got into action.

CALIFORNIA HAS EASY TIME AGAINST NEVADA

By the Associated Press.

BERKELEY, Cal., Nov. 18.—California defeated Nevada 61 to 13 here today, the powerful Blue and Gold machine having but little opposition in the first period, although in the second period the Coyotes' scored twice. They held the Bears to one touchdown in each of the last two periods. Coach Andy Smith sent nearly his entire first team back into the game in the fourth period

O'Brien Challenges Hall.

Tommy O'Brien, California lightweight, who has been after a match with either Lew Tendler, Charley White or Benny Leonard, may take a trip to London before long if he does not hook up with some of the stars in the states. Tommy claims that the top notchers are sid-stepping him and for the reason he has sent a challenge to Seaman Hall, the British champion, for a match before Maj. Wilson's club in London and also with Leon Proeet, champion of France.

Job for Bob Connery.

According to a report from Los Angeles the New York Americans have provided in their deal for Jakey May, to take care of every gap that may occur in the Vernon Tigers, except at first base. Bob Connery is now growing gray hairs trying to figure out some genius who can fill Ham Hyatt's shoes at that corner. Among players named as going from the Yankees to Vernon are Pitchers Oscar Roettger and Gormer Wilson, Infielders John White, Outfielders Hinky Haines, O. D. Tucker, Ed Neusel and Burney Acton.

Kirkwood 30; Collinsville 0.

The undefeated Kirkwood High School eleven continued its triumphant march yesterday, defeating the Collinsville (Ill.) team, 30 to 0, at Kirkwood.

Kirkwood will now point for its big game on Thanksgiving day with Webster.

Touchdown With 3 Minutes to Play Keeps Soldan in the Race for Title

Cleveland Leads, 7 to 6, for 47 Minutes of Play, but Loses by 12 to 7 Score — Central Trounces McKinley Eleven, 34 to 0.

Central and Soldan High Schools remained in a tie for first place in the Interscholastic League football race by virtue of victories yesterday over the McKinley and Cleveland elevens. Central crushed McKinley beneath an avalanche of line plunges and ran up a total of 34 points to the Crimson 0. The Soldan machine downed the Carondelet team by scoring a touchdown during the last three minutes of play, after Cleveland had held a 7 to 6 lead throughout the previous portion of the contest, the final score being 12-7.

McKinley displayed its best football in the opening period of the game when the Crimson gridders held the Red and Black warriors scoreless. In the early portion of the second quarter Central took the ball on the McKinley 20-yard line, due to a 40-yard run by Kittlaus on the last play of the first period, and by means of line plunging advanced the oval to the 5-yard mark, from where Kittlaus carried it over for the first score.

McKinley, after the kickoff, advanced the ball to the Central 10-yard line. At this point Bill Heffern, the McKinley ace, was injured and forced to leave the game. This blasted the McKinley morale and the Crimson was held for downs. An exchange of kicks gave Central the ball on its 40-yard mark and then Kittlaus reeled off 60 yards for touchdown Number 2. A forward pass plus a short buck at the line gave Walker's aggregation its third score, which also was registered by Kittlaus.

Mansfield Scores Twice.

Mansfield was responsible for the next two touchdowns made by Central. No. 1 came as the result of a 35-yard run through the entire McKinley team. Benny Kessler was the ald on the last score. He carried the ball on a series of line plunges until it rested on the McKinley doorstep. Mansfield then carried it in.

This was the final appearance of the McKinley team for the 1922 campaign.

The second game was a battle. Cleveland led the 1921 champions during 47 of the 50 minutes of play, but was nosed out as victory appeared within the Carondelet reach.

In the opening minutes of play both teams displayed a tendency to exercise caution. Then Cleveland opened with a heavy bombardment of short passes over the Soldan line. Capt. Max Starkloff stood behind the line and hurled five short shots over the center and ends of the line, gaining a total distance of 60 yards and bringing the ball to the West Enders' 10-yard mark. Once more did the aerial play work as Pickering grabbed the pigskin and fell over the Soldan goal. But he fumbled. The ball was batted around several times until finally Sheller, center of Cleveland, held on to it and scored a touchdown. Pickering converted the goal.

One Point Looked Large.

Soldan came to life in the second period. Capt. Meston whirled around the Cleveland end for 40 yards. Hill and Link hit the wavering Carondolet line and brought the ball to Cleveland's 10-yard line. Eichler then wiggled through center for a touchdown, but Meyer failed to kick the tying point. Cleveland stiffened and held the Union Avenue eleven even during the remainder of the period.

In the third quarter Cleveland attempted to score a field goal, but Pickering's boot was wide. An exchange of kicks favored Soldan and the ball was slightly in the Cleveland territory when Starkloff kicked short and Eichler returned the punt to the Cleveland 25-yard line. Soldan hit the Carondelet line until the ball rested on the Cleveland 10-yard mark. Capt. Meston then fumbled and Cleveland recovered and immediately kicked. Soldan again took up the line plunging and rested the oval five yards from the Cleveland goal at the end of the quarter.

Hidden Ball Trick Wins.

The Cleveland line held and Starkloff kicked out of danger. After several minutes of even play Soldan started an aerial game. Capt. Meston hurled two passes to Meyer and G. Meston and the ball was again in the shadow of the Cleveland posts. On the next play 21 players massed a center and pushed, heaved and shoved, while the twenty-second player, Craig, a substitute halfback for Soldan, slipped out of the throng and waltzed to a touchdown. It was the old hidden ball trick and it won the game for Soldan.

By the Associated Press.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 18.—IN A GAME marked by clean playing, the football team of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute defeated Centre College of Danville, Ky., here this afternoon 6 to 0. The only scoring came in the third period when Capt. Roberts of Centre failed to get a punt away from his own goal line, the kick being blocked by several Auburn players. Moulton, for the Alabamaians fell on the ball behind the goal. On a try for placement after the touchdown, Moulton failed to kick goal.

Approximately 15,000 fans crowded Rickwood Field for the game which was played in threatening weather.

Centre's famed lockstep attack failed to develop gains against the Auburn team and in the final period, after Covington resorted to short forward passes for several small gains, Auburn braced and smothered Centre players, to recapture the ball.

Hoppe Wins Third Straight Game in 18.2 Tournament

Former Champion Defeats Conti, 500 to 203, and Averages 35 10-14.

HOREMANS TRIMS COCHRAN

Unfinished Run of 207 Enables Belgian to Beat U. S. Player, 500-405.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Willie Hoppe, former champion, and Edouard Horemans, the Belgian title holder, were the winners in the matches played today in the International 18.2 balkline tournament. Hoppe in winning his third straight game, defeated Roger Conti, the French player, 500 to 203, while Horemans, by virtue of a sensational run of 207, unfinished, downed Welker Cochran, 500 to 405. The big run for Horemans came, when he was trailing the Iowan, 403 to 293. For his match tonight, Hoppe averaged 35 10-14.

Hoppe led off with three, after winning the bank, in his match with Conti. He missed on a spread down to the side rail. Conti failed to score. On his second turn at the table Hoppe put forth his concentrated effort for an exposition of the short-table game that produced a run of 109. The greater portion of this run was collected at the foot of the table. He had frequent nurses that again uncovered the fatal stroke that has appeared in his handling of the cue. It was possible to overlook this, however, because of the masterful manner in which the former champion held the balls rolling before him, or went behind the second object ball to avoid the penalty of the balkline. He missed on a three-cushion shot. Conti counted 33 and then a short three-cushion miss sent the Frenchman to his chair, with Hoppe leading, 103 to 33.

Hoppe Plays Spectacularly.

For spectacular billiards, Hoppe surpassed himself during a completion of 61 collected in his sixth inning. At the beginning he had some tough breaks because of his poor judgment in gauging the speed and distance of his shotz. These bad caps made things interesting. At he had the cue ball tight in the corner, the red just in front of it on the white further out. To avoid kiss he had to set off a skyrocket the way of a three-cushion drive, cue ball circling the table to complete the count. He had rolled the globes when at 61 a single-cushion again went astray.

Hoppe backed this run with one that tallied 86 of much closer character. His gathering shots, brief in of nursing and with a more delicate of touch, sent him along so that he led Conti at its close by 283 to 61. this last run Hoppe had a mania, fiddled so long over it that a little laughter began to run through the crowd. Catching the sound, he down and changed his position play the shot from the other side But it unnerved him and two shots later he missed a simple carom, a nearly so difficult as dozens of others he had previously played.

Hoppe entered his final inning by way of a run of 122. It was his best sustained effort for end to end method that he had shown. But former King of Caroms dodged a masse whenever he could avoid it. He missed on a bank of no great length at the foot of the table, his total moving to 406 with Conti at 203.

Conti had another experience of not getting the balls out of balk at the finish of 75, his best and cleanest piece of work, in his tenth inning. Hoppe was not to be overtaken, however, his eleventh inning Hoppe made 94, and then after an unremunerative turn closed his string to clinch the victory with the score as follows:

Willie Hoppe—White ball: 2, 19, 0, 24, 0, 61, 94, 1, 122, 16, 27, 12, 10. Total 500 points. Average 35 10-14. High runs: 122, 109, 61.

Roger Conti—Spot ball: 0, 33, 0, 9, 0, 47, 75, 0, 0, 0. Total 203 points.

The two matches for Monday are Willie Hoppe and Elrich Hagenlacher, the German, in the opening game; Jake Schaefer and Welker Cochran at night.

Ring Runs Wins for Horemans.

One massive run of 207 by Horemans turned defeat into a triumph in his match against Cochran, this afternoon. Up to that time the prospects of the European appeared doomed, for he had touched the heights of brilliancy and mediocrity in his earlier innings.

For some reason, Horeman's cue was without any of the smoothness of excellence that he had displayed in his defeat of Jack Schaefer, the champion, on the previous night. That was evident when he bungled many of the identical character that had carried him along so bravely in the other match. His stroke was also inclined to vacillate. It kept him hitting practically all the way, sometimes near and more often far behind Cochran.

The result of this failure to quickly adjust his cue to the ivory, however, to show captiousness at the end of periods, sent the average of Horemans down to 29 7-17. The high runs were 96, 81 and 24. As it turned out the unfinished run of 207 stood as the second of the tournament, and his record cluster of 244 counted in his match against Hagenlacher, was more astonishing than that masterpiece for it came as a complete unlooked for climax.

Score by innings:

Edouard Horemans.		Welker Cochran.
0, 25, 2, 9, 81, 2, 5, 96, 7, 0, 4, 0, 2, 15, 207 (unfinished). Total points. Average 29 7-17; high run 207 unfinished, 96 and 81.		Welker Cochran, white ball: 14, 0, 93, 9, 105, 11, 24, 2, 1, 4, 87, 65, 24. Total 466 points. Average 33 14-17; high run 105, 93 and 87.

Principia Victor Over Western 26-0

Al Marquard's Team Makes Excellent Use of Forward Pass.

By Davison Obear.

The Principia Academy football team continued its winning streak by defeating the eleven from Western M. A., 26 to 0, on Francis Field yesterday afternoon. The Principia band entertained the crowd during the game.

Owing to the muddy field play was slow in the opening quarter. The field dried out somewhat as the game progressed. It was the first victory ever scored by a Principia team against Western.

At the start of the second quarter Clark caught a long forward pass from Berninger and ran 30 yards for the first touchdown of the game. Garland kicked goal. Western received and after several plays fumbled the ball. Berninger skirted the visitors' left end for the second touchdown. A forward pass, Clark to Niemoeller, gained the additional point. The half ended with the score, Principia 14; Western 0.

Play was in the Principia territory during most of the third quarter. Principia on a series of runs and passes carried the ball to Western's 12-yard line. Berninger went around left end for a touchdown. The kick for goal was blocked.

The Western team opened the fourth quarter with grim determination and for a while swept the Principia team off its feet. Principia had the ball on its own 20-yard line. On the first play Berninger passed to Clark who ran 70 yards for a touchdown. This was the feature play of the game. The kick for goal was blocked and the game ended.

The score by quarters:

CHANGES UNLIKELY IN YANKEE BATTLE FRONT

It is reported that very few changes will be made in the Yankees ball team next year. Despite the loss of the world's series in successive games the Yanks have a formidable team. They have the players. What the club needs is to have its players play ball.

Trades might help the Yankees by getting rid of stars for players of lesser reputation who might be willing to play ball. There is little chance of improving the infield unless Ward should be replaced by a more consistent hitter. There is a possibility of Bob Meusel being traded, but the probability is that the Yanks will string along another year with this erratic slugger. While Meusel never got over his indifferent manner, in justice to the player it must be said that he is a 100 per cent better fielder than he was when Huggins first used him in the outfield in 1920.

While Ruth remains the great drawing-card he is there is little chance of his getting away from the Yankees. He either will make a strong comeback next season or go completely to smash.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 18.—Georgia Tech lost today's game to the New York, 17 to 0, the North Carolina State players bewildered the Engineers' Jackets in the last seven minutes of play, by marching 60 yards for a field when they completed a series of 23 forward passes.

Nebraska Breaks Down Forward Passing Game Of Aggies to Win, 21-0

Coach Dawson Starts Second-String Men, but Is Forced to Call for Regulars When Aggies Sweep Through by the Aid of Brilliant Passes.

By the Associated Press.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 18.—Nebraska University desperately fought its way one step nearer a Missouri Conference championship this afternoon in a hard-fought game with the Kansas Aggies, winning 21 to 0. The Cornhuskers early found themselves up against a tough proposition when time after time the Kansas Farmers gained much ground by successful forward passing.

Dawson, mentor of the Nebraska squad, in an effort to save the resources of his team for the harder contest against Notre Dame, had sent in a team composed of a number of second-string men, but when the game was carried into Nebraska's territory by the forward pass attacks of Swartz to Spark and Swartz to Munn, he was forced to substitute liberally with first-team players.

Nebraska scores were gained by touchdowns, two by Lewellen and one by Noble. The first came toward the end of the second period when Lewellen plunged through the line from the two-yard line. The second was on an intercepted forward pass by Lewellen, who ran 26 yards for a touchdown. The last counter was made by a series of line plunges by Noble, after he had carried down the field for a distance of 25 yards.

The Kansas team made a touchdown early in the game, but the play was called back.

Critics here say that the forward passing of the Western Farmers was one of the best exhibitions of aerial game ever seen on the Nebraska field.

Drake Ends Valley Season Without Defeat.

DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 18.—Drake pushed over three touchdowns against Grinnell in their annual football game here this afternoon where the Bull Dogs ended their first Missouri Valley Conference season without defeat. The score was 21 to 0.

Drake made its first touchdown in the first period and added another in the third and still another in the fourth periods. The feature of the game was the work of the right side of Drake's line, Capt. Marsh starring.

For Grinnell, the playing of two substitutes, Kingery and Kitchen, negro halfback, was outstanding. These two were the only Grinnell backs who could penetrate the Drake line or circle the ends for yardage.

Kansas Scores Six Touchdowns and Wins.

LAWRENCE, Kan., Nov. 18.—The University of Kansas football team scored its touchdowns in the game with Colorado University here this afternoon. The score was 39 to 6. The Coloradoans scored two place kicks. Crushed by the heavy line plunging attack of Kansas, the visitors resisted gamely, occasionally flashing a brand of forward passing that was good for gains.

It was by this means that they twice pressed near enough to the Kansas goal line to enable Quinlin to kick. Straight football, varied by an occasional pass, was the play of the Kansans in their successive marches upon the Colorado line.

The line-up:

Kansas (39)	Pos.	Colorado (6)

Oklahoma Falls Before Texas Longhorns, 32-7.

NORMAN, Ok., Nov. 18.—Meeting little opposition in keeping the play near Oklahoma's goal through three-quarters of the game, Texas ran up a total of 32 points to Oklahoma's 7 on a muddy field here today. Four touchdowns, a field goal and a safety accounted for the Longhorns' scores.

Taking the lead on a touchdown in the first period, Oklahoma fell in the second before the rush of the Texans and was never again dangerous.

Robertson was the star of the game. His passes to Ward scored two of the Texans' touchdowns and the other two came when he was carrying the ball. The big halfback also sent a place kick over Oklahoma's goal in the second period.

Oklahoma's touchdown was scored after a 41-yard run by Hammert.

Bill Roper May Aid Missouri Coaches for Contest With Kansas

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ROLLINS FIELD, Columbia, Mo., Nov. 18.—It is rumored here that Bill Roper, head coach of Princeton University and former Missouri U. coach, will be asked to come here following Princeton's game with Yale today and aid in conditioning the Columbia eleven for its Thanksgiving day game with Kansas.

Athletic Director Clevenger told a Post-Dispatch representative that he had made no direct request to Roper, but said that he understood that members of the Missouri alumni had done so.

The Missouri Valley conference rules prevent the engagement of paid coaches for less than a season, but Roper will come here without compensation.

Georgia Tech Marches Through N. C. State

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 18.—Although they lost today's game to Georgia Tech, 47 to 0, the North Carolina State players bewildered the Yellow Jackets in the last seven minutes of play by marching 80 yards down the field when they completed eight of 11 forward passes.

Henry Reeves, a Tech substitute, in the fourth quarter, dropkicked a field goal from the 40-yard line.

Barron scored both touchdowns for Tech after he had gone around the ends for long runs. Tech used its second-string team throughout the second half of the game.

U. S. G. A. Plans to Send Cup and Team Abroad

Fearing that because of the heavy expenses coincident with the financing of foreign golf teams, few, if any, will be able to visit this country in 1923, the Executive Committee of the U. S. G. A. has about decided to raise a team which will be given a trophy and sent overseas. In other words, the lion will be bearded in his den.

To finance a team from here next season approximately $10,000 will be required, and that is what the association's officials will have to face. By consenting to play for the Walker cup in Great Britain the way will undoubtedly be opened for a more general gathering. Teams from other nations would incur much less expense than would be required were they all to visit this country.

So far as is known the financing of an amateur team will be the only thing in an international way that the U. S. G. A. will attempt next year. Professionals who go across will probably have to travel as individuals.

Forward Passes Win for Shurtleff College

Coming from behind to score two touchdowns in the final period, Shurtleff College of Alton yesterday defeated Central Illinois Normal of Bloomington, (Ill.,) 12 to 9.

Forward passing featured the last minute rally by Shurtleff. Quarterback Zoll of Shurtleff found that his opponents had no adequate defense for passes and he called for three successive aerial plays for the winning touchdown. There were but 36 seconds to be played when Fullback Shrout went over with the ball.

The game was hard fought but neither team suffered a penalty.

When They Outbox Britton They're Clever

By Edgren

'Mickey' Walker Likely to Rank With Greatest Welters---Edgren

Conqueror of Britton a Better Boxer Than Terry McGovern—New Champion Displayed Great Skill When He Blocked Two Out of Three of Britton's Jabs and Figured Ways to Hit Jack.

By Robert Edgren.

(Copyright, 1922.)

The Mickey Walker-Jack Britton fight was finished and with the decision of two judges and the referee the veteran's long-held welterweight championship title had passed into possession of the youngster from New Jersey.

Victor and vanquished left the ring. The crowd, buzzing with excitement still surged toward the exits. Behind me at the deserted ringside an old-time sport, discussing the fight with a knot of friends, exclaimed, loudly: "Well, Walker has the title, but he won't keep it long. The first guy that comes along with a little boxing will get him. The kid doesn't know why they put gloves on his hands."

Funny how some people can look at a fight without seeing it! There were thousands in the Garden that night who talked about the match afterward as if Britton had lost solely because of old age and disappearing vitality. They saw all the cleverness of the old champion, and none of the skill shown by the youngster.

For my part, I'll be surprised if Mickey Walker doesn't hold the welter title for some time to come. He has everything that makes a champion. As for boxing, any man who can block two out of three of Britton's swift jabs, and who can figure ways to hit Britton when Britton is using every trick at his command to save himself is a boxer.

Better Boxer Than McGovern.

In many ways Mickey Walker shows a trace of Terry McGovern's old fighting style. He looks like McGovern, with his round build, full muscles, strong legs and constantly aggressive movements. His face is like McGovern's, and like Terry the Terror, he doesn't back up.

But Walker is a much better boxer than McGovern ever was. He knows more about blocking punches than any other youngster I've seen in the ring in years. He keeps his hands up—a thing that few modern boxers do—and he very seldom leaves an opening for a dangerous punch. Walker's footwork is first-class.

He doesn't skip and hop around the ring trying to imitate Benny Leonard, like a lot of modern scrappers who imagine that they're boxing when they're only kicking up a cloud of dust and wearing out their shoes.

As for his hitting, he wastes very few punches. And he hits hard and cleanly to the mark.

Walker came within an ace of knocking out Jack Britton in the first round. It was in a swift mixup along the ropes. Britton was rushing in at close quarters when Walker's right glove came up and grazed his chin.

Sometimes a grazing punch has more kick in it than one that lands solidly. This one had. Britton staggered a moment, and turning his head aside blinked rapidly and seemed to be dazed. But the veteran fought fast to keep Walker from following his advantage.

Here Walker showed a fighting head by shifting his attack to Jack's body, doubling him over with a clean punch in the solar plexus. It looked as if Britton would go down, and his weakening began with that punch. Walker slipped in a good body punch every now and then, and each one was effective in reducing Britton's resistance.

By the sixth round Britton was bending low and turning toward the right, to keep out of range of Walker's right hand and covering up to avoid his left. With every attack by Walker, Britton shifted around farther to the right, leaving the youngster no mark to hit at.

But Walker showed the same thing that makes a good quarterback on a college football team—ability to figure a new attack on the field. He began stepping swiftly around Britton to the left, at the same time hitting at Jack's head rapidly with swinging lefts.

Often his first punch would be blocked, but the second would catch Britton on the side of the jaw and shake him up badly. Whenever Britton straightened up, Walker changed his attack to the body.

Britton Dropped in Ninth.

It was his circling attack and series of sharp left hooks to the head that dropped Britton in the ninth round, the time the bell rang when he was down. The nine-second knockdown in the twelfth round came when Walker drove a thumping left hook into the champion's body. Britton was entirely unable to fight when he got up, and saved himself only by covering and turning away.

Walker's fighting head was shown in the eleventh round, when Britton, knowing that he was whipped unless he could knock Walker out, came out in desperation to use every last ounce of his strength and all his fighting skill to put the punch over.

Britton had been resting by covering up and making Walker do all the fighting. When he opened the eleventh by rushing straight at Walker and shooting punch after punch at his chin the Elizabeth boy must have been taken by surprise.

For a moment Britton hit him with every kind of a punch on his list, but Walker quickly began blocking punches and standing on the defensive until Britton wore himself out—which happened in about two minutes.

After that Britton weakened so much that he dropped to his knees when he missed a jab. The rest of the fight, on Britton's part, was merely a wonderful exhibition of gameness and defensive skill. He managed to stick it out, but there never was a moment when he was allowed to take the aggressive again.

Considering what Jack Britton has been doing to all other rivals for his welter championship honors, what Mickey Walker did to Jack stamps Mickey as a real fighter. Britton gave Benny Leonard a boxing lesson—made Benny look foolish. But he didn't give Walker any boxing lesson. He was too busy trying to stay on his feet and avoid a knockout.

Walker is a clean-cut kid. He went to the high school in his own town, Elizabeth, N. J., played baseball and football and competed in other athletic sports. He and George Ward, another very good welter and probably a challenger for the title, were schoolmates and started in the ring about the same time. They have met in one no-decision bout in New Jersey, and Walker had the best of it.

Mickey has been fighting about two years. The only time he lost a fight decisively was when he was a novice and weighed 128 pounds. He knocked K. O. Delmont down, and Delmont got up and swung one from his heels that struck Mickey on the chin and dropped him for a 10 count.

"Mickey," by the way, isn't Walker's real name. He is Edward Walker. They called him "Mickey" in school because he was always fighting for the fun of it.

Walker fought Britton a year ago. Britton nearly knocked Mickey for a goal in the first round, but by the sixth the champion was in such distress from Walker's heavy punches that he began stalling and talking. "I thought you could punch," said Britton, "why don't you start?" Of course when Walker rushed Britton had his movement measured and a defense ready. Walker got at least an even break in that battle.

The new champion's father trained him for his early battles, and all of his training has been patterned on his father's advice. But the old gentleman never saw Mickey in action. The nerve strain was too much for him. He waited outside.

"Glad I Didn't Stop Him."

Naturally, Walker is a home boy. He went straight home on the first train he could catch after beating Britton for the title. He lives like a college athlete. This is another reason why he is likely to last for some time as champion.

Incidentally Walker will improve while he holds the title. He has the stuff in him to become one of the best welterweight champions in years. He's only 21, has a fair education, has perfect physical equipment for fighting, and likes the game so much that even in the hardest mixups he never loses the smile that shows he's enjoying himself.

Moreover, Mickey is a real sportsman. On the way home after beating Britton he said to a friend:

"I did my best to stop him, but now that it's over I'm glad I didn't succeed. He put up such a game fight that he didn't deserve to be knocked out."

Walker can't yet be classed with such great welter champions as Joe Walcott, Mysterious Billy Smith, or Matty Matthews. But you have to go back a long way to dig them up. And Walker is only a youngster of 21. He hasn't yet come near the top of his form.

Drop-Kick Gives Princeton 3 to 0 Victory Over Yale enough. On the next three plays Yale lost 17 yards.

Tigers Great Opportunists.

Any suspicion that Princeton is a team unduly favored by fortune was dissipated today. They are the greatest opportunists the game has ever seen. But they make their own opportunities. Yale had the best of the luck today. No break came to Princeton such as Gorman's fumble in the first period. Yale had the chance and carried the ball to the one-yard line, but they don't begin to score points for you until three feet further on.

Neidlinger ran the Blue team during the greater part of the game, but O'Hearn came in for the last quarter. Within the limitations already stated the Yale backfield was impressive. Jordan plunged magnificently and Neale was also a good ground gainer. Scott played an excellent defensive game.

The big Yale line was exceedingly staunch. For Princeton, Baker was the best man from tackle to tackle, with Treat almost as good. Cleaves was the best running back on the Tiger team. Throughout Princeton played with great daring. They had no compunctions about forward passing in their own territory. Snively threw some beauties. Not much came of this attack, but on several occasions some distant outpost Tiger came within a fraction of an inch of completing a pass for a long gain. To our eye the Yale material seemed much better than that of Princeton, but the Princeton team was better.

Bill Roper is one of the greatest coaches the game has known.

This is the first time since 1911 that Princeton has won from both Yale and Harvard and the snake dance which followed the last play was the wildest the town has ever seen. And so the bell goes on ding, dong, ding, dong, for a glorious Princeton team which didn't have a thing except courage and imagination and knowledge and brains.

Bond Stars as Mizzou Crushes Pikers, 27-0

Athletic Director Clevenger said after the game that Missouri was a new team.

"We could have beaten Oklahoma today," he declared.

Pikers Injured in Battle.

Missouri came out of the game unscathed. Washington was not so fortunate. Halfback Ralph Walsh suffered a broken right ankle and Thumser sustained a badly bruised and wrenched shoulder. Mathes was badly bruised and shaken up.

About 1000 students and alumni of Washington University attended the game and besought the Pikers to "Give 'em hell." The spirit was there but the Pikers werb on the receiving end. Washington was never inside Missouri's 30-yard line.

Oklahoma Aggies Beaten.

STILLWATER, Ok., Nov. 18.—Baylor defeated the Oklahoma Aggies here today, 10 to 6, in a field goal and a touchdown accounting for the Texans' scores. The first counter was made in the opening period when Weathers booted the ball between the Oklahoman's goal posts and the second in the last minutes of play when Pittman went over after a series of line plunges. Strickland kicked goal.

Midget Smith Wins.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 18.—Midget Smith of New York won a shade over Young Montreal in 10 rounds here last night, newspaper men decided. Smith was fouled in the fourth found and the bout was halted 5 minutes to allow him to recover.

Eagen, Former Yale Boxing Star, Wants to Meet Battling Siki

EDDIE EAGEN, former Yale student, who gained fame by winning one of the American Expeditionary Force championships and later won the amateur light-heavy title at the Olympic games, not to speak of intercollegiate honors, is an enterprising young man. He wants to box Battling Siki.

Eagen won a Rhodes scholarship and recently took up his residence at New College, Oxford. Oxford hailed him as a great asset to university boxing. But Eddie's ambitions evidently looked beyond the mere pummeling of Cambridge rivals.

"What I should like to do," he is reported to have remarked, "is to take a crack at Siki. I knew him in France. He doesn't know the first principles of boxing. His one qualification is that he can take punishment."

Army Runs Over Light Bates Eleven, 39 to 0

By the Associated Press.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 18.—Bates, with a light team, was completely outclassed by the Army's steamroller today and failed to score while the Cadets were piling up 39 points. Although the Bates defense proved stubborn for the first two periods, the slashing attack of the Army backs tore huge gaps in opposing line and scored with ease in the closing half.

Moose Victor in Bout With Wirtz

Referee Heisner Rules Against W. A. A. U. Champion in Municipal Boxing Feature.

Of the six amateur bouts staged by the Municipal Athletic Association at the Armory last night three resulted in knockouts, two were decided by the judges and the windup was decided by the referee when the judges failed to agree.

The feature bout of the evening was between Charley Wirtz, the Western A. A. U. 135-pound titleholder, and Joe Moose of the Business Men's Gymnasium. Moose was given the decision by Referee Walter Heisner when the judges failed to agree after three rounds of splendid fighting. Wirtz's inability to avoid Moose's left hand gave the latter the decision. Moose led and countered with left hooks to the body and head and landed on Wirtz's jaw repeatedly, while the majority of Wirtz's swings were wide of their mark, landing on the sides of the arm and on the gloves. Moose's splendid blocking enabled him to avoid many of Wirtz's well-directed blows.

Another good bout came in the semiwindup when Eddie Kaiser of the South Broadway A. C., gained the judges' decision over Gus Pirrone of the Business Men's Gymnasium. After fighting evenly for two rounds Kaiser scored heavily in the final round to gain the decision. These lads fought in the 112-pound class.

Gus Seals of the St. Louis A. C. outclassed Nick King of the South Broadway A. C. and scored a knockout in the second round.

Mike Mazur of the St. Louis A. C. gained a knockout over Sam Shanker of the South Broadway A. C. A left hook to the chin scored the winning blow for Mazur.

Charles Pancho of the Business Men's Gymnasium gained the judges' decision over George Polas of the same club after three rounds of interesting fighting.

Al Leslie of the St. Louis A. C. scored a knockout over Jack Corey of East St. Louis in the third round. Corey showed his gameness by resuming the battle after being knocked down for the count of nine but he was unable to continue.

Hurley Parker, who was booked to meet Al Burns, was unable to go or when the latter failed to appear.

Last night's bouts were the opening events of the tournament. The finals will be staged at the Armory on Wednesday evening.

Summary:

100-pound class—Gus Seals (St. Louis A. C.) won from Nick King (S. B. A. C.) on knockout.

112-pound class—Mike Mazur (St. Louis A. C.) won from Sam Shanker (S. B. A. C.) on knockout.

112-pound class—Eddie Kaiser (S. B. A. C.) won from Gus Pironne (Business Men's Gymnasium) on judges' decision.

135-pound class—Joe Moose (Business Men's Gymnasium) won from Charles Wirtz (St. Louis A. C.) on referee's decision.

Harvard's Eleven Is Defeated by Brown Team, 3-0

Buell and Owen Only Crimson Regulars Out of Game—Adams Kicks Field Goal.

By the Associated Press.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 18.—Brown's football eleven, beaten by Yale a few weeks ago, won from Harvard today. The score was 3 to 0, the points being made on a field goal, kicked as the first play of the fourth period by Fullback Adams from the 16-yard line.

Crimson supporters, considering Harvard's defeat, 3 to 0, by the team trounced by Yale, 20—0, in the light of its effect on the big game of next week, could find as source for hope only the fact that neither Captain Buell nor George Owen was in the game today. Otherwise, it was Harvard's varsity team, and all the efforts of the Crimson coaches who departed from the usual policy of sending substitutes only against Brown, failed to avert defeat against the Brunonians' strength offensively and on the defense.

The Harvard attack went into sustained action only once. It was good for a touchdown, then Coburn crossing the Brown goal line with the ball, but holding by Hubbard of Harvard caused officials to recall the play, and to penalize Harvard 15 yards. Harvard had to try for score by field goal, and Hammond, kicking from the 16-yard line, failed. This situation in the second period, developed out of Coburn's recovery for Harvard of Quarterback Myers' fumble on Brown's 35-yard line, from which Hammond's and Churchill's rushes advanced it to the goal.

Adams Boots Field Goal.

In the closing periods was Brown that was always pressing the play. Three times in the third period the Bear pushed down, the first time forced to kick, the second time trying for field goal from the 25-yard line, Sweet's kick failing when it struck the goal upright; the third time advancing to Harvard's seven-yard line. The advent of "Bubbles" Payer, a Brown freshman, marked the beginning and proved the sustaining influence of the last drive of 52 yards. It was from the limit of this third period advance that Adams, nine yards behind the scrimmage, kicked the field goal that gave Brown victory.

A gain in the last period, Brown brought the ball up to a position to score, but Sweet failed again on a drop kick from the 46-yard line.

Harvard.	Position.	Brown.
Clark	Center	Eckstan
Hubbard	Right guard	Speare
Eastman	Right tackle	Gulan
Holder	Right end	Sayward
Spalding	Quarterback	Myers
Hammond	Right halfback	Faulkner
Churchill	Fullback	Adams

Score by periods:

Brown	0	0	0	3	— 3

Brown score—Field goal, Adams. Officials: Referee—J. A. Evans, Williams; umpire—W. R. Okeson, Lehigh; field judge—William Hollenback, University of Pennsylvania; head linesman—M. D. Williams, Wesleyan.

Athletic Federation Will Hold Meeting

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—The program of the Board of Governors' meeting of the newly organized National Amateur Athletic Federation of America, to be held in Washington next Monday and Tuesday, was announced today and indicates that the Federation is planning close cooperation with other athletic bodies.

Of particular interest to every amateur athlete is that part of the program which provides for arranging a basis by which the Amateur Athletic Union may be invited to join the Federation. It is pointed out that the A. A. U. claims jurisdiction in several branches of sport and that, unless an understanding is reached, every athlete entering a federation meet to compete in these branches would disqualify himself as an amateur so far as the A. A. U. is concerned.

Another point to be discussed is that basis upon which the federation and its constituent members may consistently join the American Olympic Association. It will also be considered as the promotion and organization of local and State units of the National Federation. Ways and means of initiating and carrying on a program of widespread activities will be taken up.

Knute Hanson Is Fine Heavyweight Title "Prospect"

19-Year-Old Racine Youth Stands 6 Feet, 4½ Inches, Weighs 210 Pounds.

WORKED IN TRACEY'S CAMP

Young Giant Needs Experience Before He Will Be Ready for Title Go.

By T. S. Andrews,
International Authority on Boxing.

Knute Hansen of Racine, Wis., considered one of the bright "prospects" among the white heavyweights, returned home this week from South America, where he went as sparring partner to Jim Tracey, Australian heavyweight, who fought Louis Firpo, champion of South America. Hansen was to have fought on the same card, but the fellow he was booked to meet got cold feet when he saw Knute step into the ring and called off the fight.

According to Hansen, Firpo was a lucky individual to win over Tracey. "The day before the match," said Knute, "the officials of the club, the principals and judges met to discuss the rules. It was definitely understood that the 'rabbit punch' must not be used. This fact was impressed on all those attending, but when the men faced each other in the ring Firpo used the 'rabbit punch' on Jim right off the reel.

Tracey Hurt by Fouls.

"Firpo is a powerful hitter and three of these punches on the back of the neck had a telling effect on the Australian. In the second round Tracey had Firpo in a bad way against the ropes, having delivered two hard uppercuts to the chin. I really believe Jim was afraid to try and finish the fellow then and there on account of that bunch of Spaniards. Had Tracey beaten him I believe they would have annihilated Jim.

"Well, in the third Firpo used the 'rabbit punch' again with deadly effect and that is what put Jim in bad. The next round saw the end, Firpo putting over a left swing to the jaw after Jim was practically out standing up. He was game to the core and under different circumstances would have beaten Firpo. I am not making excuses for Tracey, but giving cold facts.

"The native element must have liked Tracey, for he was given a match with a big fellow named Rodriguez at Montevideo to be held early in November. I left the next day and cannot say whether it went through or not.

45,000 Persons Attend.

"The arrangements for the match in Buenos Aires were very good, indeed. The ring was pitched in the center of a big football field and it was estimated that over 45,000 people attended, so the promoters must have made a bunch of coin. After the match the authorities claimed it was a prize fight and refused to give further permits to hold contests. I was told, however, that the boxing game would be resumed under more strict rules. If it is permitted there is a great field for American promoters and boxers. The people seem to like the sport and there are many young men taking up the art of boxing. If it is opened up I may go back there for a match myself, as I was offered a good purse to meet one of their heavies."

Hanson is 19 years old, stands 6 feet 4½ inches and tips the scale at 210 in shape. He needs more experience, but is gaining rapidly and looks like a wonderful prospect for the heavyweight ranks. He may go to the Coast for a few heavyweight bouts of the four-round variety, unless he is recalled to New York for some matches there which have been in the making. He is also wanted at Dayton, O., to meet Tut Jackson, who was recently beaten by Harry Wills. Give Knute a little more experience and he may be meeting the best on even terms.

PENN STATE BEATEN BY U. OF PENNSYLVANIA, 7-6

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 18.—The University of Pennsylvania football team today defeated Penn State College on Franklin Field, after a gruelling battle, 7 to 6. The missed point after touchdown was the margin of victory, the unusually reliable Mike Paley failing to get his drop kick across.

There was not much to choose between the teams, though Pennsylvania showed much improvement in the attack and seemed better able to detect the weak spots in State's defense.

UNBEATEN MARQUETTE ELEVEN TRIMS DETROIT

By the Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 18.—Marquette University still remains unbeaten for this season after its defeat of Detroit University on the local field today 6 to 2. The local school placed two drop kicks after Detroit had taken the lead with a drop kick in the first quarter but failed to score again.

Passes Beat Ames

AMES, Ia., Nov. 18.—Central Normal of Edmund, Okl., by a series of forward passes and long end runs, scored its second touchdown of the game with less than two minutes left to play and won from Iowa State, 14 to 13, here today.

The Cyclones had much the better in straight football, but the barrage of passes started by Herndon of the Oklahomans completely swept the Ames man off their feet.

Lucky Hour Wins Feature at Bowie

Fair Phantom Second and Bunya Buck Third in Southern Maryland Handicap.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 18.—Lucky Hour, the 3-year-old son of Feroleor Hourless and Lucky Catch, added another stake to his list when, under a burden of 115 pounds, he took down the $5000 Southern Maryland Handicap over the mile and a sixteenth distance. It was the opening feature of the most ambitious meeting ever attempted by the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association, and back of the sterling 3-year-old there finished a remarkable field, including the Quincy Stable's Capt. Alcock, winner of both the Bowie and the Pimlico Cup Handicaps of the Maryland Jockey Club.

It was Montfort Jones' Fair Phantom, another 3-year-old, but under the feather of 99 pounds, that raced to the place, and third went to Mrs. H. Dattner's sturdy 4-year-olds campaigner, Bunga Buck, while Hephaistos was a good fourth. The others in the order of the finish were Blazes, Careful, Capt. Alcock, Tippity Witchet, Polly Ann, Surf Rider, Irish Kiss and Stoto.

From a good start Fair Phantom was rushed into the lead. Schuttinger hustled Lucky Hour into second place and was content to rate the colt there back of the lightly weighted filly. Careful was a close third and Bunga Buck was showing the way to the others.

This order was fairly well maintained through the back stretch run and Schuttinger had Lucky Hour under slight restraint. Then, leaving the straight, he moved up and soon wrested the lead from the pacemaker. Swinging for home, the colt was well clear and showed a disposition to come again. Schuttinger drew his whip at the final furlong mark and struck him twice sharply.

Lucky Hour responded to the call and a vigorous hand ride brought him home winner by half a length while Bunga Buck was only half a length further back in third place. When Bunga Buck made his move he interfered slightly with Blazes, but when the Cosden horse was going exceedingly well.

Vesper-Buicks in National Soccer Cup Game Today

St. Louisans Meet Wilsonville, "Old Country" Team at High School Field.

The first out-of-town soccer team to play in St. Louis this season, the Wilsonville (Ill.) kickers, are here today to engage the Vesper-Buicks of the St. Louis Soccer League in a second-round U. S. F. A. cup match. Play will start at 2:30 at High School Field. The Vespers, having attained the second-round by trampling on the prostrate necks of the battling Barrett-Hoovers, are in no mood to be eliminated by an outside aggregation and will put their strongest lineup in to force the fighting.

According to the lineup sent out from Wilsonville, it will be a foreign-born team that will face the native St. Louisans. There is a Perardi, a Bertuchi and a Leonatto on the Wilsonville team, the captain being Mike Pomatto. The invaders also lay claim to having a man with the most appropriate name in the soccer world in John McKicken. They will probably "play the ball," as do all teams trained in the old country, while the Vespers will "play the man" with their customary accuracy. This is the vital difference in the styles of play between American teams and those who learned the game abroad. So far, the advantage has been with American teams. However, the record made by the out-of-towners is rather impressive and the local representatives cannot afford to play at any but their highest notch of speed.

Speed is the "middle name" of the Vespers. A look at McCarthy's forward line discloses the names of Joe McCarthy, Lee Bergin, Ryser, Grant Brannon, "Jake" Wimer and "Yatz" Corrigan—about as fast a combination of forwards as could be gathered under one St. Louis banner. Corrigan, at outside right, has found his proper position and is moving faster than ever before, his centering having been of the highest caliber in games thus far played. Joe McCarthy has proved the biggest pointgetter of the team this year. He has a wonderful "boot" and is regarded as one of the most promising of the younger players. There be those who believe he already has achieved stardom even with the keen competition in the St. Louis League.

The customary cup-game price of 75 cents will prevail.

ST. PAUL CLUB TO REMAIN INTACT FOR 1923 RACE, OWNER NORTON ASSERTS

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn.—There is every indication, according to John W. Norton, president of the St. Paul club of the American Association, that the same organization which won three association championships out of four starts will remain intact for the 1923 season.

Whatever sale of players or purchases that are to be made will not be completed until after the annual meeting of the minor leagues at Louisville Dec. 6, 7 and 8.

Manager Mike Kelley of the pennant winning club has had several offers from different baseball organizations, but has declared "they will have to be considerably better than St. Paul before I will leave."

Kelley took a team which baseball experts thought might head the second division in the early season predictions, and developed into a championship machine. None of the men were particular stars, with the exception perhaps of Mike Gonzales, who is considered by many to be the class of the association catchers.

"There will not be any change in policy in 1923," President Norton said. "Three championships out of four starts speaks well, I think. We hope to add some new material; in fact, we have several promising youngsters now. I am not certain yet that we will sell or trade any of the old players, all of whom proved their worth in the last campaign."

By the Associated Press.

ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 18.—In a punting duel in which the Vanderbilt backfield excelled, the Commodore's today defeated the University of Georgia 12 to 0.

Except for a spurt in the second quarter when Georgia carried the ball to Vandy's goal line and there lost it on a fumbled forward pass the Commodore goal was never in danger.

The entry list for the tournament closes Nov. 20 and a new local record is looked for, as more than 500 quintets are eligible to compete.

Whitehead Gets 268 Game.

There was some great shooting in last week's round of the Major City League on the Washington alleys. In the first place, the 40 men competing averaged 186 54-120, which is some rolling. There were two team totals of better than 2900, the Wooster Lamberts totaling 2959, with games of 924, 1001 and 1034, while the Witter's Razz five rolled 2949, with 1020, 956 and 964. The Palace Alley five rolled 2813 and the Budweisers 2861.

Oscar Whitehead turned in a high game of 268. He started with a spare and then put over eight strikes in a row. Next he had a perfect hit, but the 4-pin stood. This robbed him of a gold watch offered by Wooster Lambert. Whitehead totaled 658, his other counts being 164 and 254.

Hank Bippen, however, had the high three games with 690, which included games of 256, 226 and 198. Other 600 totals were Syl Heibert, 617; J. Heibert, 614; Healy, 609; Deen, 605, and Pflueger, 602. Totals of 590 were common.

Jule Schmitt of the Heiberts hit for 247, 153 and 220 for a 650 count, while Heibert had 612, with games of 211, 227 and 175. The Heiberts totaled 2848 scratch and the American Zincs 2804.

There were seven other bowlers with 200 averages for the round. They were Hesse, 605; Bob Meinhardt, 649; Pitts, 607; Tavenner, 631; Smith, 602; Hammann, 605, and Obenhaus, 610. Totals of 550 or better were common.

The results: Heiberts 2, American Zinc 1; Schumachers 2, T. & L. 1; Victor Drug 3, Ziegenhelms 0; National Biscuit 2, Laclede 1; Union Fuels 2, Fort Smiths 1; East St. Louis 3, Rutgers 0; Medarts 3, Schaper Stores 0; Americans 2, Lafayettes 1.

Local Promoters Offer $9000 for Title Mat Match

Sum Is an Increase of $1500 Over Offer Rejected by Champion Lewis.

CHICAGO IN THE FIELD

Jim Londos May Appear on Card if Zbyszko-Lewis Match Comes Here.

By John E. Wray,
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Determined to land the Stanislaus Zbyszko-"Strangler" Lewis world's championship wrestling match for St. Louis, John Contos, promoter, yesterday wired Lewis that he had increased the purse offer for the event from $7500 to $9000. Contos told a Post-Dispatch representative that he hoped to bring the event here despite Lewis' refusal to accept the amount first offered.

Several cities are bidding for the event. Contos showed a telegram from Joe Coffey, Chicago, former member of the "wrestling trust" and promoter of the Gotch-Hackenschmidt matches of several years ago, in which Coffey offered Contos a bonus of $5000 for the event.

"I understand you have closed this event," the telegram read, "so the Coliseum Athletic Club of Chicago is ready to take it off your hands at a profit of $5000 to yourself."

Contos stated that he had spoken to Zbyszko, but that Lewis had refused to sign.

"Zbyszko is ready to go on at any time. The old fellow lost his belt to Lewis last season and that hurt him more than the loss of the money. He has agreed to wrestle for a small sum in order to get a chance at Lewis. The belt is worth $15,000, and whenever a match is on the promoter who displays it must put up a bond of $15,000.

New York Game Is Dead.

"Zbyszko has trained for months for the chance to win back his honors, but thus far Lewis has shown no disposition to meet 'Zibby.' Lewis is always careful to explain that he can get $25,000 in New York. And yet there has been a match in New York for a year that has brought in a dime."

Lewis is wrestling two or three times a week. While in St. Louis manager Billy Sandow (Benny), brother of the manager of the wrestler Pesek, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that he and Lewis, while in Kansas City, intended to appear. Jack Dempsey with an offer to wrestle on the proposed plan of Fighter vs. Wrestler, to see which was the better man, Dempsey or Lewis.

An interesting sidelight on the proposal is that Zbyszko and Pesek have trained together near Boston several weeks and the world's no champion learned many valuable pointers about the wrestling game.

Lewis, while here, said that Dempsey would not last three minutes in front of him, unless Jack turned on the tincanned around the ring.

"There is nothing to this argument," Lewis contended, "although many persons seem to think that a boxer has a great

DEMOCRATS HAVE 83 SEATS IN HOUSE, 19 IN THE SENATE

Majority in Both Branches of State Legislature Gained in Last Election, Figures Show.

GOV. HYDE FACES A ROUGH VOYAGE

Retribution Likely to Be Exacted for Manner in Which Democrats Were Turned Out of Office.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 18.—Democrats will control the lower house of the next Legislature, having 83 seats, as against 67 won by Republicans, on complete unofficial returns compiled today for Secretary of State Becker by Charles Pear, one of his department heads. This assures Democratic mastery of legislation, as 19 of the 34 State Senators will be Democratic.

In the House, where 76 votes will be a constitutional majority, the Democrats will have seven above that margin, while in the Senate 18 is a constitutional majority, giving the Democrats one to spare.

Rough Voyage in Prospect.

This assures a rough voyage for Gov. Hyde and his appointees, for remembering the manner in which the last Legislature, Republican by an overwhelming majority in the House, and held to an iron-bound solidarity in the Senate by Lieutenant-Governor Hiram Lloyd's caucus combine, hammered through administration legislation which turned out practically all holdover Democrats to make way for Republicans, the Democrats are expected to exact retribution from the administration. They can easily do this, for their hands will hold the purse-strings. And while their majority is not large enough to pass over the Governor's veto without Republican aid measures by which for instance they might seek to abolish offices held by favorite appointees of Hyde, they can refuse to appropriate funds for such offices. The latter then would die for the time of malnutrition. Two-thirds, or 100 votes in the House and 23 in the Senate are required to override the gubernatorial veto.

The upcoast has swept a pall of gloom over the winter outlook for Republicans who populate all of the State offices and practically all of the State institutions except these under the Eleemosynary Board. Visions of legislative investigations such as that of the Public Service Commission promised by Senator McCawley of Carthage, overhang every one of the Republican departments. And whether their houses are in order or there is something to hide, legislative investigations are apparitions from which political office-holders shrink convulsively. There is also the equally disquieting probability of scant appropriations to those on the political "unfair" list.

Gov. Hyde Undecided.

Gov. Hyde has not decided whether he will take up golf and leave the field in possession of the Democrats, whether he will map out a legislative program and try to pull it through by bargaining for the votes of enough Democrats to put it over, as other Governors have done at times when faced with similar situations, or whether he will sit tight and fight along the lines thrown up by him when he came to the executive mansion two years ago.

The feeling of partisan hostility toward Hyde by Democratic politicians is so bitter that the Governor can extract no voluntary concessions from the Legislature for which he does not pay dearly in patronage or other favors.

Some legislators always can hear a Governor better after he has suggested jobs for some of their relatives or constituents and doubtless Hyde will have this door opened to him. That sort of thing is directly contrary to the code on which he was elected and as a practical matter the Governor has few jobs left to distribute. Practically all of the plums were shaken off the tree long ago by Republicans who had been waiting under it all of their political life, hoping for something to happen in almost like the 1920 landslide. And the only force Hyde has at his command is his veto power he is practically at the mercy of the vic-

Slight changes may occur in the new House, by reason of contests, or the official tabulation, but nothing of the kind is expected to disturb Democratic control. Republicans are seeking to overthrow election of Democrats in Nodaway and Dallas counties, where the margins were narrow, and Democrats have given notice that they will contest the seat of William Turbett of Jefferson City, Republican, elected by seven votes after about 35 supposed ballots had been thrown out by ruling of a Republican county court. Democrats here also charge that more than 100 illegal ballots were counted in one ward. These cases will go before the Legislature for determination, it being the final judge of the election of its members.

Gray-Haired Motherly Senator From Georgia Invades the Capital

Expects to Be Sworn In Monday, and Will Give Up Seat to Successor Tuesday.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
No. 20 Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—A little, gray and silver haired old lady, a bit reminiscent of Whistler's portrait of his mother, but keen and merry of eye behind her gold-rimmed spectacles, stepped off a train at the Union Station this morning and went unnoticed to a hotel where she vigorously inscribed her name as Mrs. Rebecca Latimer Felton, Cartersville, Ga.

Whereupon she told the clerk not to let anybody disturb her and went to her room to rest, for she had ridden 700 consecutive miles and her eighty-eighth birthday is impending.

Within 10 minutes or so the distraught clerk went down to defeat before the first shock troops of reporters, camera men, movie delegations and sundry other intensely interested and importunate would-be callers.

Came Through Smiling.

Mrs. Felton from that moment on had no rest, peace, or privacy until she had been interviewed within an inch of her life, photographed, snapshotted and posed and ordered about until she was breathless. But she survived, so did her smile and her wit. By the time the besieging forces had retired, she could safely be said to have carried off the day.

"What I want," she said, with determination, when the barriers to her retreat first gave way, "is to get my commission as United States Senator ratified by the Senate, because I am as much a Senator now as I could ever be. I am doing this for the womanhod of the country. It is for them I am blazing the way."

Senator Walter George of Atlanta, duly elected 10 days ago and hence usurper of the seat to which Mrs. Felton was appointed by Gov. Hardwick of Georgia to serve out the all but expired term of the late Tom Watson had told her, she went on to say, that he would do all he could to get her sworn in so that womankind could lay claim at last, to having one of their sex a Senator. Moreover, the Senate procedure specialists, including Vice President Coolidge, conferred about it and agreed to administer the oath to Mrs. Felton in case no objections are raised.

Will Invade Senate.

So on Monday morning Mrs. Felton will invade the Senate, hand over her credentials and unless some dissenting voice is heard, and none so daring or unchivalrous is expected, she will be constitutionally sworn in as the first woman Senator of the United States. The Senate will adjourn forthwith in honor of her predecessor and Tuesday Mrs. Felton will give way to Senator George. But she will have triumphed—for her sex, not herself, as she takes pains to specify, andl that is what she is here for.

"I'm not a stranger to the Capitol," she carefully informed her inquisitors today. "I came here first almost 50 years ago, when my husband was a member of the House of Representatives in the Forty-fourth, Forty-fifth and Forty-sixth Congreses. I was his private secretary. I talked over the first telephone installed in the Capitol. It ran to the Government printing office."

"Would you mind looking this way?" interrupted one of the camera corps.

"Sure, sure. I'll sit and look any way you say," came a quick answer. "I'm the best sport you ever saw. I can't look pretty, though. Age has its limitations, you know."

Whereat she smiled indulgently.

"Take as many as you want," she added as the clicking chorus progressed.

Disappointed in Women.

To another barrage of questions she replied that she was disappointed about the apathy of women toward politics; that "motherhood is next to godliness," though women should be more actively interested in public affairs; that public life needs those who stand for high principles; that she does not altogether admire Woodrow Wilson, and that Gov. Hardwick of Georgia is "the most chivalrous Governor in the world," having first offered Mrs. Watson the vacant seat and then offered it to Mrs. Felton when Mrs. Watson declined.

As for prohibition, Mrs. Felton is for dryness with a "very little modification."

And when a little later she was whisked up to the Capitol as background for another assault of questions and cameras, and instructed to smile, she remarked:

"Its pretty hard to get a 'smile' these days," and offered a be coming one of the sort she did not refer to.

Here more questions and still more were asked, and the patient old lady unwaveringly responded. It was in the course of the incessant grilling that her inquisitors came abruptly to a realization—a somewhat disconcerting word that fixed the little Georgian lady in their minds as the "Grandmother Type."

"Children," she said—the word suddenly explained her patience and indulgence. "It's been a long fight, over a rough and rugged road, but its all over now and we have won. We've 'fit' the good fight to a finish."

"Do you think there'll be any more wars?" came a last question.

"Son," said Mrs. Felton, "I've heard it talked for years that there are to be no more wars. I'm just a bit skeptical."

CHARLES CIPOLLA HELD IN TWO ROBBERY CASES

Photograph of Associate of E. J. Hogan Jr. Recognized by Express Messenger.

Charles Cipolla, 21 years old, an associate of Edward J. (Jelly Roll) Hogan Jr., principal in the Hogan-Egan gang feud, was arrested yesterday afternoon, and is held for further identification as a participant in the holdup of an American Railway Express messenger in St. Charles Nov. 10 and the theft of an 800-pound strongbox from the safe of the Manchester Theater last Monday.

Cipolla's photograph already has been identified by a deputy sheriff at St. Charles as that of a man he observed lounging near the scene of the express messenger holdup and by the express messenger as that of one of the men in the holdup. The safe stolen from the messenger was thought by the robbers to have contained a $50,000 payroll. They miscalculated the date of the payroll shipment, however. The safe contained only a silver watch.

The photograph of Cipolla also has been identified as that of one of several men seen by Herman Kramer of Bonfils, Mo., to unload the Manchester Theater strongbox at St. Charles and Natural Bridge roads. Between $700 and $1000 was obtained from the strongbox.

Hogan frequently has been arrested on charges of carrying concealed weapons. Invariably Cipolla has been in his company and on other occasions has been arrested while patroling Hogan's home. He is known as "Green Onions." A brother, Joseph Cipolla, bore that sobriquet prior to his murder last year. His body and that of another gangster were found in Shaftesbury Lane, University City.

Cipolla denies participating in the holduns. Those persons who have identified his photograph and two others will be asked to look at him.

PENSION DECISION BY CODE BODY TOMORROW

Wide Range of Opinion Among Delegates on Matter of Aid for Firemen and Police.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 18.—Whether cities shall be permitted to establish pension funds for firemen and policemen and retirement funds for teachers and what language shall go in the Constitution to enable them to maintain institutions such as the Harris Teachers' College in St. Louis, occupied debate this morning at the Constitution Convention. These matters all went over until Monday for decision. They are involved in Section 10 of the recommendations of the Committee on Counties, Cities and Towns being considered by the convention in committee of the whole.

Sentiment ranges between extremes, one school of thought among delegates opposing all pensions or retirement funds; while another, of which Joseph B. Shannon of Kansas City is the most outspoken, is in favor of generosity in that direction. Shannon wants to write into the organic law a provision to permit the payment of old age pensions to all. The bulk of the delegates shade off between these two extremes.

Committee's Recommendation.

The committee recommended that the section in question read as follows:

"No county, city, municipality, township or other political corporation or subdivision of the State shall be authorized or have the power to lend its credit or grant public money or things of value in aid of or to any individual association or corporation, or to become a subscriber to the capital stock, or a stockholder in any association or corporation; provided, that this shall not be so construed as to prohibit the General Assembly from authorizing the creation, maintenance and management of a fund for the pensioning of crippled and disabled firemen and policemen and for the relief of widows and minor children of deceased firemen and policemen by such cities or villages as may have an organized fire and police department—said fund to be taken from the municipal revenue of such cities or villages."

Four members of the committee, however, being opposed in principle to pensions, held reservations as to the section. During discussion yesterday, Mrs. W. W. Martin, of Fayette, chairman of the Committee on Education, asked that a clause, "except as hereinafter provided" be prefixed to the section to enable incorporation of a teachers' retirement fund enabling act for school districts later, when her report comes up.

Substitute Presented.

Paul Conwell, of Kansas City, presented a substitute which undertakes to prohibit all cities from giving financial aid to such institutions as the Harris Teachers' College.

Supporters of his measure took the position that it is all right for St. Louis to maintain such a school, which is a part of the St. Louis public school system used to train teachers for these schools, but that it should be done out of the school revenues of the St. Louis district, and not out of city or State revenue.

A. M. Clark, of Richmond, chairman of the Committee on Employes and Expenditures, reported that the convention, to Nov. 15, had spent $276,062, of which $154,740, was for salaries of members. The convention adjourned at noon to Monday morning.

Scout Fund Campaign Ends.

Clarence H. Howard, president of the Boy Scouts' Council of St. Louis, sent a telegram yesterday to James E. West, chief executive of the Scouts organization, in New York, announcing the successful closing of the Scouts' fund campaign here through the $60,000 guarantee of the Society of Forty and Eight.

A cup offered to workers in the Scouts' fund campaign, was won by the "battalion" headed by Thurman W. Payne, with Henry Giessenbier, Milton Miller, A. A. Joraschky, Paul Burg and Paul A. Ebbs. A company cup was won by the company headed by Giessenbier, and a cup offered to the American Legion post doing most effective work was won by Fred W. Stockham Post.

SWEDISH INVENTOR HAS NEW OIL LIGHT

Claims Whiter and Much Cheaper Light Than Electric or Gas.

Edison enables us to enjoy the benefits of electric light, Count Welsbach's mantle made it possible to have the incandescent gas light; but it remained for a Swedish engineer named Johnson, now living in Chicago, to devise a lamp that would burn ordinary, everyday kerosene oil and produce a light said by the many scientists who have seen it to be whiter than electric. The lamp is as simple to operate as the old style oil lamp, burns without odor, smoke or noise and is proving a sensation where oil light is needed.

Mr. Johnson offers to send a lamp on ten days' free trial and will even give one to the first user in each locality who will help introduce it. A letter addressed to L. D. Johnson, 609 W. Lake Street, Chicago, Illinois, will bring full particulars about this wonderful new lamp. He has an interesting agency offer, too.

Meeting of Progressives Summoned by La Follette

done all that could be done at this election to express their will that this Government shall be genuinely progressive.

"Time Is Opportune."

"It is apparent, therefore, that the time is opportune for a conference to discuss a definite plan for the co-operation of all the Progressives in Congress."

Just what senators and representatives will join in the Progressive move was not revealed but several have pointed out recently the desirability of some such a step. Among others, Senator Borah, Republican, of Idaho, has said that he planned to meet in conference with Progressive members of the Senate and House with a view to co-operation in legislation.

"Ultimately there will be a line of cleavage separating the conservatives and progressives," said La Follette, "but you can't hasten it. It has moved forward considerably during the last few years, but when it will come no man knows. I'm not chasing any will o' the wisp.

"Necessity for Action.

"The announcement program of the administration makes plain the necessity for action. It is explained that, disregarding the expressed will of the people, and ignoring the necessity for immediate and tangible relief for prostrate American agriculture, President Harding is about to demand the passage of the ship subsidy bill by the present Congress. Administration leaders have indicated also a desire to rush through a program accelerating the merger of the railroads into a small number of monster systems and giving the Railroad Labor Board coercive powers to prohibit and punish strikes and other lawful activities of employes.

"Great interests are employing their influence with high officials in the administration to effect the immediate transfer of the national forests to the control of the Secretary of the Interior, whose declared policy and practice is to turn the natural resources of the nation over to exploitation by private monopoly.

"These measures must be defeated.

"Direct Challenge."

"Wherever the ship subsidy bill was an issue in the campaign as in the great Republican States of Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin, Nebraska and North Dakota, it was overwhelmingly repudiated. The action of President Harding in forcing the ship subsidy bill at this time is, therefore, a direct challenge not only to the progressives, but to the people."

Investigation by the Senate Manufactures Committee of the oil industry will be pressed during the coming session of Congress, Senator La Follette declared today, adding that he hoped to include the inquiry by next March. He expressed a belief that already it had held down gasoline prices to the consumer. Senator La Follette said he also planned to go into the leasing to the Sinclair oil interests of the Teapot Dome Wyoming naval reserve.

Capper's Constructive Program.

"If the Republican party is to continue in power," said Senator Capper in commenting on the recent elections "it must finish a constructive program including the following acts:

"Put through the complete rural credit program, to provide farmers and stockmen with an adequate financial system.

"It must reduce freight charges.

"It must repeal section 15-A, giving the Interstate Commerce Commission control over State rates, and other objectionable provisions of the Esch transportation act.

"It must carry out the policy for a better system of marketing.

"It must put the development of the Muscle Shoals project in hands of Henry Ford.

"It must make undisturbed surpluses and stock divisions pay their share toward the maintenance of the Government.

UNVEILING OF MONUMENT TO WAR DEAD TODAY

Parade to Precede Ceremony at Cemetery in County in Afternoon.

The memorial monument erected at Oak Grove Cemetery, Carson and St. Charles roads, in memory of the American soldier, sailor and marine dead in the World War, will be unveiled at 3 p. m. today by Edward J. Barrett of Sheboygan, Wis., vice commander of the American Legion.

The unveiling will be preceded by a parade of veterans' organizations and their auxiliaries, led by the Jefferson Barracks Band. The parade will form at Hanley and St. Charles roads at 2 p. m.

Five-minute speeches will be made following the unveiling by Col. John H. Parker, representing the Army; Commander H. T. Hays, on behalf of the Navy; and Captain Gilder D. Jackson, for the Marines. Maj. Clinton H. Fiske, Director of Streets and Sewers, will respond on behalf of the city.

The monument is of stone, 40 feet high, and was erected at a cost of $25,000. It rests on a massive pedestal set in the center of a shallow stone basin into which water pours from four lion heads. The monument was designed by T. P. Barnett, and has been under construction for six months.

KENTUCKY YOUTH KILLS FATHER

Verdict of Self Defense Returned by Coroner's Jury.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TAYLORVILLE, Ky., Nov. 18.—The Coroner's jury has returned a verdict of self defense after an investigation of the killing of Cal Goodwin, 40 years old, by his son, Otis Goodwin, 19, at their home. Goodwin had been drinking, according to the boy and a neighbor, Ed Cook, a witness to the killing. He drove Otis and his bride of a week away from home, the boy said, and the couple took refuge at Cook's home. Following a quarrel with the boy, according to the latter and Cook, the elder Goodwin struck his son with a shovel. The boy picked up Cook's shotgun, which was standing in the room, and fired one barrel, tearing off the muscle of the right arm. Goodwin turned to go and the boy said he thought his father was going for a shotgun and he fired again, the second charge striking his father in the back and causing death in a few minutes.

It developed that the boy was a favorite son and that his father had just finished building a house for the boy and his bride.

GERMAN PARTIES TRY TO DICTATE CABINET

Efforts of Chancellor-Designate Fail Temporarily—Plans No Further Parleys.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 18.—The efforts of Wilhelm Cuno to form a Cabinet have temporarily foundered on attempts by the leaders of the middle parties and united Socialists to dictate the Cabinet appointments to him. Cuno this afternoon wrote to President Ebert, asking that he be relieved of the task, and incidentally rebuking the party leaders for crossing his plans after having previously assured him of their good will.

Cuno demands that he be not interfered with in his selection of Cabinet assignments, and, on the strength of this requirement, the President renewed his mandate to the Chancellor-designate, who now undertakes to make a slate without further inter-party parleying. He will risk acceptance or rejection of such a Cabinet by the Reichstag, to which he will submit his Cabinet list in open session next week.

FACTIONALISM IN SCHOOL BOARD LED JOHNSON TO QUIT

Member for Last 25 Years Declares in Statement That St. Louis Has Fallen Behind.

"ABSENCE OF VISION AND FORESIGHT" CITED

Boardman Handed in Resignation Yesterday and Departed on a Tour of World.

Christopher W. Johnson of 3680 Hawthorne boulevard announced his resignation from the Board of Education, of which he has been a member for 25 years, yesterday, coincident with his departure at noon on a six months' tour of the world.

In his letter of resignation to the board, made public after his departure, he charged that St. Louis schools are not keeping pace with the development of modern school systems elsewhere, and traced the reason for this to factionalism in the board and absence of vision. The letter follows:

"I desire to and do herewith tender you, for immediate acceptance, my resignation as a member of the Board of Education of the City of St. Louis. You will, of course, know that I am doing this after much consideration and with much regret, for, in the 25 years that I have been a member of the board, our schools developed so rapidly that some few years ago our school system, taken all in all, was generally conceded to be certainly the equal of the best, if not the best in the whole country. In that rapid development of our school system, I, just as every other member of the Board of Education and every other citizen having the interests of our schools at heart, took great pride and found great pleasure.

"But, within the last six or eight years it has seemed to me at least, that we are no longer developing as we did in the period prior to that time. We are, in fact, not keeping pace with the development of modern school systems in other progressive cities in this country. True, during this time we have built some very finely constructed, modern school buildings of which we can justly be proud, but we have failed in the very thing which is more essential to the welfare of our future citizens and that is, we have not retained our prestige in the educational world.

Lays Responsibility.

"The members of the Board of Education, as representatives of the public school system of our city, are directly responsible for this condition as it exists today. Reasons for this obstruction of progress can be found in the lack of co-operation among members of the board for the best interests of the public schools and in the absence of foresight and vision so necessary in an organization charged with the responsibility of the future development of an educational system that should predominate. However, this unfortunate condition exists and must be remedied if our foremost position in public educational matters is to be regained and maintained.

"My record as a member and former president of the board will reveal that I have given much of my time and earnest thought during the past years to the administration of the affairs of the board, not simply because the public had entrusted me with this official duty, but also because I realized the need of conscientious effort necessary for the successful fulfilment of this important office.

"Now, however, the enthusiasm and progressive ideas of former members of the board seem to have given way to a more factional spirit, a working for individual recognition which opens a breach between members that is widening instead of becoming welded by the common thought of service to the community, and I feel, I cannot remain as a member of the Board under these conditions—conditions that I have earnestly striven to prevent from becoming dominant, but to no avail. In spite of very sincere efforts to promote the high standard of the great trusteeship, I find myself striving against alien purposes and must, therefore, in justice to myself and the public, resign the office to which I was re-elected in 1921."

Home Case Recalled.

Johnson, who is a Republican, was a leader of the group in the board which supported the policies of Dr. John W. Withers, when the latter was Superintendent of Instruction. There was a decided tendency to factionalism in the board at that time and the same groupings of members have been observed since. This situation was referred to by Dr. Henry L. Wolfner, when he resigned from the board last June, after nine years' service. It became known then that Johnson planned to resign, because of his impending tour, and he said then that "everybody on the board was quarreling."

The dismissal of Miss Rosa Hesse as a teacher, in May, 1921, grew out of statements she was charged with making about Johnson when he was a candidate for re-election the previous month. She was charged with saying that he ran a sweat-shop and was interested in a real estate firm which handled most of the business of the Board of Education. She admitted repeating reports she had heard to this effect. Johnson seconded the motion to dismiss Miss Hesse, which was made by Dr. Wolfner.

Johnson is president of the St. Louis Basket and Box Co. He was born near Chicago in 1863 and began his career as a newsboy. He was first elected to the Board of Education in 1897, was its president from 1907 to 1911 and recently has been chairman of the Finance Committee.

Accompanied by Mrs. Johnson and their infant son, he departed for New York yesterday, and will sail from there to Havana, Cuba. They will go through the Panama Canal and to the Orient, and possibly to Europe, returning about May.

"I'll Hang Orrie Cross," Says Preacher-Sheriff

"Would Rather Cut Off Right Hand—but I'll Do It," Iowa Officer Says in Statement.

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 18.—Sheriff W. B. Robb, former A. E. F. chaplain, issued a statement here today announcing that he would spring the trap hanging Orrie Cross, condemned slayer of George Fosdick, Des Moines grocer, sentenced to be executed at 7:30 o'clock Friday morning.

In his statement the sheriff declared hanging is "A clumsy method" and that the act is "grewsome and the effect is not permanent." He said that "It accomplishes its purpose only for the day, adding "It is not a thing of high motive, but it is the only way that the State has yet devised to deal effectively with the crime of murder. It is the people's own effort to deal justly with themselves."

"Brainless men and women," said the statement, "who have no ability to think—such as Debs, who has neither brains nor sense, who condemn everything and create nothing and respect neither man nor God, who believe free license and rebel against all law—those will condemn and rave, and spout as usual.

His Arraignment.

"Unthinking religious fanatics will plead and pray and forget that God is a god of justice and mercy and that judgment is as much a duty of love as mercy is the delight of love. They forget that love, while the greatest of all laws, is the most perfect in its working and the most exacting in its demands. It is this law that demands the straight gait, the narrow path and the crucifixion of one's self, that demands the disciplined life as the only means of obtaining the eternal city.

"America is cursed today with a lot of spineless, unthinking, cowardly, would-be reformers, editors, speakers, and politicians who have neither the courage to face the facts nor the willingness to contend for the right who have not the nerve to brave defeat, they who crave public approval more than they crave to be right. These are they who drift with the tide and, with loud voice, condemn the trend of the times.

"I Shall Do My Duty."

"The above with one accord will all condemn a minister of the gospel for performing the duties of the State. They think of a minister as a sissy, sexless, spineless creature, with lily-white hands, who spends his time attending ladies' societies and 'pink teas.' They forget the example of the minister Moses, the lawmaker; of Samuel, the reprover of kings; of Elijah, the messenger of Death; of John, the Baptist, whose fearless life led to his own death, and of Paul, the peerless thinker of all times.

"Taking another's life hurling someone over the precipice into eternity, is the most terrible of all tasks. One instinctively shrinks from death or from causing death and even though I know that I shall be condemned by hordes of people, I am going to hang Orrie Cross, because it is my duty and because there is no way to evade that terrible task except the way of the coward, which way I shall not take. I would rather cut off my right hand than to perform this execution and the memory of it will be with me always. I would to God that there was some way out of it but there is none that is honorable and, so, I shall do my duty."

TWO NEW MEMBERS PLACED ON HOSPITAL COMMITTEES

Benjamin Gratz and John B. Kennard to Fill Vacancies Left by J. C. Cabanne and Walker Hill.

The executive board of the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association, which is preparing for the thirtieth annual collection for the needy sick confined in hospitals, on Dec. 2 and 3, has elected Benjamin Gratz a member of the Distribution Committee, to fill the vacancy left by the death of J. Charles Cabanne, and John B. Kennard to the Committee on Trades and Professions, to take the place of Walker Hill, who also has died. Several new members also have been elected to the Churches and Sunday School Committee.

The Churches and Sunday Schools Committee will meet at the State National Bank tomorrow afternoon to complete its plans, and the Executive Committee expects to make its final arrangements at a meeting on Tuesday afternoon at the Noonday Club.

Hospital costs are as great as ever, and the gradual increase in population increases the need for funds with which to meet the charity work. The amount collected in the two tag days last year was more than $59,000.

PRISON REFORM HEAD GIVES ADDRESS BEFORE CITY CLUB

Condemns Practice of "Hounding" Released Prisoners by Constant Surveillance.

B. Ogden Chisolm, president of the Prison Reform League of New York, discussed prison ills before the City Club yesterday, laying stress upon his contention that long prison terms do not help the crime situation.

Among the wrongs visited upon those who are punished by the law, Chisolm alleged, are the practices of "hounding" released prisoners through constant surveillance by detectives and the persecution of those serving terms in the penitentiary.

Chisolm advised "more humanity in dealing with convict brothers," less politics in prison management and more sanitary living conditions within prisons.

"Forty years in the penitentiary will not redeem a man twice as thoroughly as 20 years," Chisolm argued. "We must come to the realization that redemption, not punishment, should be the chief aim of the prison."

Chisolm has gone to Jefferson City to inspect the State Penitentiary.

PREDICTS RETURN TO POWER OF LLOYD GEORGE WITHIN YEAR

Isaac F. Marcosson Says Former Premier Is Consummate Politician and Opportunist.

Prediction that David Lloyd George, until recently Prime Minister of Great Britain, will be returned to power within 12 months was made last night by Isaac F. Marcosson, journalist, author and lecturer, in an address at Principia School, Page and Belt avenues.

"Lloyd George is the most interesting, the most dynamic and the shrewdest personality before the public today," Marcosson said. "He is a consummate politician and opportunist and despite the fact that he has just been turned out of office, I believe he will be back at No. 10 Downing street, the residence of the Prime Minister, within 12 months.

"I have been little given to predictions during and after the war, but I will tell you tonight that I honestly believe that Lloyd George will return to power."

Marcosson's talk was on characteristics of a number of the world celebrities whom he has interviewed in recent years.

He will succeed Archbishop Bonzano, for 10 years Apostolic Delegate to the United States. Archbishop Bonzano will sail from New York tomorrow on his way to Rome to receive the red hat of a Cardinal.

ACQUITTED OF ROBBERY CHARGE

Mike Josam, 28, Had Been in Jail Since Arrest Last May.

Mike Josam, 28 years old, who said he was a horseshoer in the Army and stationed at Jefferson Barracks, was acquitted of a charge of robbery Friday in the Circuit Court at Belleville. Josam had been in jail at Belleville since his arrest in East St. Louis last May, following the charge by Stephen Franks of Junction City, Ill., that Josam had robbed him of $235 on May 26.

Josam said he and Franks and another man had been together in a saloon in East St. Louis and that it was on May 23, instead of May 26, as the indictment alleged. After leaving the saloon, he testified, Franks said he had lost $235, which was in his pocket prior to entering the place, and accused Josam of taking it. Josam said he intended to return to Jefferson Barracks.

PASTOR DECLINES CALL HERE

It Had Been Understood He Had Accepted Local Pastorate.

The Rev. Hugh Gordon Ross of Pittsfield, Mass., who was called to the pastorate of Pilgrim Congregational Church recently, has declined the call, because of pressure by his Pittsfield congregation to remain there. At the time when the call was extended, it was understood that there was no question as to his acceptance.

The church's committee on selection of a pastor, headed by Chancellor Hall of Washington University, has resumed its work.

PUBLIC SERVICE BOARD MAKES ITS BIENNIAL REPORT

360 Rate Increases, 74 Advance Rate Refusals and 40 Decreases Ordered, Are Noted.

DATA COVERS 9 1-2 YEARS OF EXISTENCE

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 18.—The Missouri Public Service Commission has granted 360 increases in rates to public utilities of the State, ordered 40 decreases and refused 74 applications for advanced rates during the nine and one-half years of its existence up to July 10 last, the commission's biennial report will show.

This report, which is quite lengthy and which will be received from the printer in a day or two, contains a detailed accounting of the commission's stewardship intended as a defense against the shafts of those who have declared they will ask the next session of the Legislature, which will convene in January, to abolish the commission.

The commission, which was established in 1913, has handled about 3500 formal cases and disposed of innumerable informal complaints as to matters of service without formal action. The commission has jurisdiction over about 1500 utilities.

Plants of 44 utility companies have been appraised by the engineers of the commission at a total of $126,073,000, as compared to the $206,068,000 at which the companies contended they should be appraised. A total of the valuations fixed by the commission is not available at this time, as valuation cases are pending on a number of the properties included in the foregoing comparison. Books of 40 utility companies have been audited by the commission's accountants since March 1, 1921.

Other Statistics.

Rates on electricity were higher in 1921 than in 1914 in 102 Missouri cities and lower in 23 cities, according to the report, and 18 cities had higher water rates, 26 cities had higher gas rates and 27 cities had higher telephone rates.

Operating costs for 1913-1921 increased about 100 per cent, according to the tables included in the report, but the increases in rates averaged only slightly more than 50 per cent.

Samples of the increases in costs of operation, given, are: Gas coal at St. Louis, $3.23 in 1918 and $9.10 in 1921; common labor, 19 cents an hour in 1913 and 43¾ cents an hour in 1922.

Cost of fuel generally in 1920 was 238 per cent of that in 1913, metal products 186 per cent and building materials 308 per cent, the report asserts.

The chronological chart of increases and decreases by the commission shows that of the seven cases the body heard in the first year of its existence no advance was granted, two decreases were ordered and five applications for increases were refused. In 1914, one increase was granted, 10 refused and six cuts made. Business picked up in 1915 with four increases, four refused and five decreases.

In Other Years.

The other years brought the following: 1916, 14 increases, 21 denied, 10 decreases; 1917, 19 increases, seven refused, five decreases; 1918, 68 increases, six refused, no decreases; 1919, 68 increases, eight refused, four decreases; 1920, 89 increases, three refused, four decreases; 1921, 87 increases, five denied, six decreases; 1922, (first six month) 10 increases, five refused, seven decreases.

This discloses that the four years, 1918-1921, were the big years for rate increases. This the commission reminds was the peak price period of war times.

Of the 348 cases handled in that period 312 or 89 per cent were decided in favor of the utilities. The commission points out the more normal ratio as between the public and the companies which prevailed during the first four years of its existence when business was on a more rational basis, and that of the 22 cases decided during the first half of this year, after a decline in prices had become effective, 10 or 47 per cent were decided in favor of the companies, and, of the remainder, more than half, in favor of the public.

The combined investment in Missouri utilities in 1920 was $415,000,000, they employ about 33,000 person and pay to labor and expend for supplies annually about $90,000,000 it is estimated. Their taxes in 1921 were $6,492,290.

Harding Gave $1000 in Ohio.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 18.—Expenditures of the Republican State Executive Committee in Ohio during the recent election amounted to $93,314.20, according to accounts filed with the Secretary of State. President Harding contributed $1000, the accounts showed.

SMITH EXPLAINS ATTITUDE ON GAS RATE QUESTION

"PERMIT COMPANY TO RECOUP LOSSES"

Says Laclede Is Entitled to Opportunity to Make Up for Post-War Lack of Stock Dividends.

An explanation of his recent statement to the Public Service Commission, which seemed more to support the plea of the Laclede Gas Light Co. that it be permitted to maintain its present rates than the desire of household consumers that the rates be reduced now that the gas company is earning more than a fair return, was sent to Director of Public Utilities Hooke yesterday by C. E. Smith, consulting engineer for the city, in response to a request from Hooke.

The statement reiterates much that Smith said before the commission as reported in the Post-Dispatch of last Tuesday. He declares that gas rates should not be reduced at this time as the company is entitled to recoup for post-war lack of dividends on common stock, frequently asserted to be represented by no investment in property in the service of the public.

As is known, Laclede high operating costs in 1921 were due largely to coal contracts which the Public Service Commission declared should be modified, and which subsequently were modified to an extent that the company was enabled to earn an equivalent of 10.35 per cent on a tentative fair valuation as fixed by the Public Service Commission during the first seven months of this year.

Company Objected.

During and since 1919 the city's opposition to the applications of the Laclede Gas Light Co. for increased rates, and for decreased B. T. U. content in the gas, has resulted in the fixing by the commission of a tentative value of $30,000,000 for the entire properties of the company and an annual depreciation allowance of $400,000, both of which have been continually objected to by the company as insufficient allowances.

"The city's opposition to increased rates resulted in the company neither earning nor paying any dividends on its common stock during 1919, 1920 and 1921. The net earnings of those three years were barely sufficient to pay interest on its bonds and preferred stock dividends.

"The city's insistence that the company did not need increased revenues caused the commission to deny the company's application for a reduction in the B. T. U. constant until the company should be in a position to accompany such reduction by a corresponding reduction in the price of gas.

"In the various hearings during those three years, the city has repeatedly contended that during the period of high costs the stockholders should be compelled to bear a part of the burden of increased costs in order that the entire burden of increased costs would not be passed on to the public. The company contended for rates of $1.25 per thousand for domestic gas, but the city's objection resulted in the commission decreasing rates to $1.05 per thousand, 20 cents less than the company claimed it was entitled to. The city contended that any deficiencies in the earnings of the gas light company during the period of high costs should be made up to the company during periods of decreasing costs before reductions should be made in the rates. The city having profited by that position during three years, its witness could not change his position over night and insist that the commission pre-emptorily take away from the gas light company, at the very beginning, all increased earnings due to decreased costs.

"The city's continual objection to the company's contract with the Consolidation Coal Co., for coal at $5 per ton during 1921, and $4.25 per ton during 1922, caused the company to cancel that contract sometime during 1922 and to substitute for it a revised contract for coal at a much lower rate which acounts in a large measure, for the company's increased net earnings during 1922.

"Since the time in 1919, that the commission placed a tenative value on the company's property, the company has placed before the commission a detailed appraisal prepared by Mrs. James E. Allison which, after being before the commission over two years, was revised to date and placed before the commission again Nov. 13.

"That appraisal shows the original cost of the company's properties to have been about $43,000,000, and the reproduction cost today about $60,000,000. No doubt those figures will be somewhat reduced by further detailed consideration of the company's valuation, but in view of those appraisals by Mr. James E. Allison, whose standing is well known, the conclusion is inevitable that the tentative value of $30,000,000 placed by the commission is conservative and that a higher value might be established.

What Records Show.

"The records show that, although gas coal has cost less during 1922, the coal burned under the boilers for fuel has been constantly increasing in price, also that the cost of gas coal was increased 76¼ cents per ton August, 1922, which will have the effect of reducing the net earnings during the remainder of 1922. However, the company's new coal contracts provide for a reduction of approximately 50 cents per ton Jan. 1, 1923, on a portion of its gas coal from the Consolidated Coal Co.

"The records also show that the Consolidated Coal Co. has not been able to deliver the entire amount of coal for which it was under contract, and the gas company has purchased other coal to make up the deficiencies at much higher rates.

"It further developed at the hearing Nov. 13, that no one was willing to venture a guess as to future trends in the cost of coal, especially during the coming winter and spring, as the shortage that was brought about by the last coal strike and the possibility of another coal strike next spring, has completely unsettled coal prices for some time in the future.

"However, taking the returns of the company during the first nine months of 1922 in connection with the tentative value and the tentative depreciation allowance fixed by the commission, the city showed that a reduction of 6 cents per thousand in the price of gas would be possible, but was forced to admit that the reduction would be largely offset by increase in coal costs during the remainder of 1922, and that because of the fact that, the company is claiming a higher value, a higher depreciation allowance, possible further increases in the cost of coal, and by reason of the city's position that deficiencies in the company's earnings during the last three years should be made up by earnings during the period of declining costs, the city could not show the justice of an immediate reduction in the price of gas without reversing the position it has maintained for over three years to the great advantage of the citizens."

COMMISSION TO GIVE RULING IN FEW DAYS

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 18.—Members of the Public Service Commission feel that the impression of City Counselor Hald of St. Louis that the commission is about to turn away from public utility affairs in the larger cities to the problems of the smaller cities is erroneous.

The commission points out that it is anxious to reach the question of valuation of the Laclede company, but that the limitations of its field and office force compel a certain sequence and attention to immediate tasks and routine that cannot be interrupted.

The commission feels that the city had its opprtunity to present its objections to present Laclede rates and whether it did or did not in the city's business, not the commission's. It resents what it feels is a tendency on the part of certain public officials in St. Louis to "pass the buck" to it. However, it feels that it has facts in the case well in hand and is proceeding to an opinion which likely will be announced in a week or 10 days.

BOGY'S PETITION FOR RECOUNT DENIED BY ELECTION BOARD

Recount in 11 Wards in Which Miss Bernie Watson Alleged Irregularities Also Refused.

Bernard P. Bogy's petition for a recount of votes cast in the general election in the Eleventh Congressional District in his contest of the election by a plurality of 7000 of his Democratic opponent, Harry B. Hawes, to Congress, was denied yesterday by the Board of Election Commissioners.

The board also denied a recount in Wards 1, 2, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15 and 16, asked for in a petition filed today by Miss Bernie Watson, 5496 Kingsbury avenue, who claimed that a true count would show Democratic instead of Republican candidates elected in those wards. Chairman Edwards asked the clerk of the board to inquire among precincts concerning irregularities she alleged in the four precincts of the Twelfth Ward and one of the Tenth. Commissioner Plager said that in making a round of Twelfth Ward precincts on election day he observed none of the irregularities she referred to.

The ceremony of laying the cornerstone of the new $165,000 Church of the Holy Rosary, at Clarence and Margaretta avenues, will begin at 2 p. m. today with a procession from Fair and Kossuth avenues to the church, headed by mounted police, followed by Knights of Columbus, members of Holy Name societies and other Catholic orders.

NOLTE WOULD OPPOSE ANY NEW CITY JOBS

Comptroller Disapproves Psychiatric Clinic Bill, Saying Costs Must Be Cut.

Efforts to create new city jobs should cease and the energies of city officials should be directed to decreasing the cost of government, Comptroller Nolte told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday in declaring his opposition to the psychiatric clinic bill now before the Board of Aldermen.

This measure, introduced by Alderman Niederluecke, at the request of Director Cunliff of the Department of Public Welfare, would establish a psychiatric clinic with a staff of several experts and an annual payroll of about $14,000. It would be under the Department of Public Welfare.

The bill now is in the hands of the Public Welfare Committee of the Board of Aldermen. Before it comes up for action it must receive the approval of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, which passes on all bills involving appropriations. Mayor Kiel, Nolte and President Aloe, of the Board of Aldermen, comprise the board.

Would Oppose All New Jobs.

Nolte said he was opposed to and would continue to oppose all bills seeking to create additional divisions in departments, and, as a matter of course, more jobs, as long as there is a deficit in the revenues applicable to the city's operation.

He pointed out that a deficit exceeding $300,000 existed at the close of the last fiscal year, April 10, last, and predicted this deficit would be increased to $600,000 by the close of the present fiscal year, April 10, 1923.

Reductions in operating cost will be necessary, he said, in order to increase the tax levies year after year. Even after such increases have been made, the books have been closed at the end of the year with the balance on the wrong side of the ledger, Nolte added. He recalled the close of the fiscal year, April 10, 1921, when the deficit exceeded $1,000,000. Economy required of departments by the Comptroller reduced this deficit the following year.

"This is not the time, when many departments are confronted with the necessity of laying off employes to stay within their appropriations, to be considering the creation of more jobs," Nolte stated.

100 Laborers Laid Off.

The Park Department, under the control of the Department of Public Welfare, last week laid off 100 laborers to keep within the salary appropriation. Two other departments, Streets and Sewers, and Public Safety, have found it necessary to give "enforced vacations" to about 150 employes.

"If the work of a psychiatric clinic is so essential as claimed," Nolte said, "it should be so directed as to classify its subject years before it is possible for them to become offender before the Juvenile Court, or inmates of the jail or other reformatory institutions. At the present time adult cases can be well taken care of by the medical staff of the Health Department or the Hospital Commissioner.

"In other words, I believe if the psychiatric clinic is a necessity, the proper place for it to function is in the schools, not the city courts."

Mayor Kiel and Cunliff now are on a tour of Eastern cities to inspect similar clinics and get information on public parks and public welfare activities.

HYDE'S PROCLAMATION FOR THANKSGIVING

Calls on All Missourians to Praise God for "Unfailing Bounty" During Year.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 18.—Gov. Hyde, acting in conjunction with President Harding, today issued a Thanksgiving proclamation, setting apart Thursday, Nov. 30, as Thanksgiving day and calling upon all Missourians to repair to their altars of worship and there render thanks to Almighty God for His unfailing bounty." The proclamation follows:

"Whereas, By the reverent custom of our forefathers, one day in each year has been set apart for and dedicated to public acknowledgment and thanksgiving to Almighty God for His many blessings and mercies to us as a people, and

"Whereas, The President of the United States, Warren G. Harding, has officially designated and set apart Thursday, Nov. 30, as a day of thanksgiving and devotion for the year 1922, and

"Whereas, In common with the people of the other States of the Union, the people of this State have been blessed with bountiful crops, with richnes of natural resources and wealth of material possession. During the past year no war has disturbed us. No pestilence has afflicted us. No national disaster has overwhelmed us. Peace and plenty surround us. It is therefore appropriate that for one day we lay aside our daily tasks, humbly and reverently to give thanks to our Creator and Supreme Ruler for that He has showered upon us blessings and preserved us as a people:

"Now, Therefore, I, Arthur M. Hyde, Governor of the State of Missouri, acting in conjunction with the President of the United States, do hereby set aside Thursday, Nov. 30, 1922, as Thanksgiving day, and I earnestly urge the people of the State of Missouri to repair to their altars of worship and there render thanks to Almighty God for His unfailing bounty. It is also appropriate that, having rendered thanks for our material blessings and possessions each of us should give thought to the condition of unrest and of class consciousness, which is ominously growing among our people, and highly resolve that through the regeneration of our own hearts we shall diligently and partiotically labor during the ensuing year for a broader justice and fraternity among all the citizens of our State and nation.

(Signed) "ARTHUR M. HYDE,
Governor."

Rambling Observations by Henry Ford Gathered During an Interview

Suggests Way for St. Louis to Save Interest on Its Coming Big Bond Issue—Insists More Credit Is Worst Thing Could Happen to Farmer.

By WILLIAM F. ALLEN.

The following random observations by Henry Ford were gathered by a Post-Dispatch reporter during his visit to Ford in his motor manufacturing plant at the time Ford told him of his plan to build a great factory in St. Louis. This announcement was made last Sunday in the Post-Dispatch.

HENRY FORD, who has ideas sometimes mistaken for notions, has been mentioned as the leader of the new farmer power which the recent election injected into a hitherto complacent Congress. It is even suggested that he may be a presidential candidate with the backing of this untractable vote which flits from Democratic to Republican camp and back again and accepts no brand.

Ford is fundamentally a farmer. His price cuts are all hewing toward the day when the farmer can get a tractor, a truck and a pleasure automobile for $1000. He has the farmer in mind when he thinks of Muscle Shoals. He farms still himself—enough grain to fill a sizable elevator which he has erected at Dearborn.

But Ford has few of the theories which the farmers had in mind when they united to send sympathetic representatives to Congress. What can Congress do for the farmer? Chiefly, nothing," Ford says. It may remove some of the artificial barriers which other Congresses have set up, such as the money system, and it may improve transportation, but the farmer must look for his panacea in his own dooryard. Government has an overinterest in transportation now.

"It is putting the burden on the backs of the people instead of on the brains of the railroad managers," Ford thinks. "Congress can't do anything for the railroads except to give them enough cash to carry on their mistaken ways."

No more can Congress subsidize the farmer with prosperity and do him any lasting benefit. One of the first suggestions for the exercise of this farmer balance of power was to increase his borrowing power through a rural credits law providing long term loans.

"Better take away his borrowing power, instead of giving him more credit," Ford says. "When you borrow, you must pay interest." Ford abhors interest. He had an experience with it not long ago. Some bankers wanted their interest to be an interest in the Ford company. The Ford company is a closed corporation and Ford threw the bankers out. He paid $15,000,000 for a coal mine last week and paid cash. Ford thinks the cash basis will carry the farmer much better than long term loans—and interest.

The salvation of the farmer lies within the industry, Ford is sure. He thinks that some principles of making automobiles can be applied to farming.

"Now," he says, "the farmer wastes a small percentage of his time with his crops and lavishes the rest of the year on a few cows and chickens. Better let the cows and chickens to someone else, do up the farming with machinery and then get real busy at something else for the rest of the year."

"I have a notion we do as much work here on our Dearborn farm in 200 days as the ordinary farmer would stretch over a year," he added.

Ford is interested in the proposal of St. Louis to issue $88,000,000 of bonds for public improvements. He thinks St. Louis can achieve world-wide distinction by making that expenditure—without interest.

"What's the usual plan? Take Springwells, for example (Ford's home is just over the line from Springwells, a 12,000-population suburb of Detroit). Springwells has just completed a $175,000 city building. It issued bonds in that sum. Before Springwells is rid of those bonds the interest upon them will have run the cost of that building up to at least $300,000. Who gets the difference? The money brokers. The thrifty Germans of St. Louis have kept the city out of debt until now it is juicy picking for the money brokers.

"I tried to tell my brother, who is on the Springwells board, and the other members who are my neighbors, that there was another way to do, but they went ahead.

"Maybe St. Louis will try it. Now, I don't know what the terms of your bonds will be, but it is certain that the money brokers will get a large slice (the plan, as prepared, will entail an ultimate payment of about $200,000 in interest.)

"The bonds will be good. If the bonds are good, why wouldn't any money the city might issue be just as good. Suppose the bonds, instead of being in large denomination, with a donation to the money brokers, be in small denominations with no interest—the city's promise to pay as taxes for their retirement came in. Citizens could use these small denomination bonds as a medium of exchange among themselves."

"Would they be good for Ford automobiles?" the writer interjected.

"Why not," Ford replied. "Surely."

"Let's see, how is it? The people of St. Louis give their money to the bankers and then when they want to build something they go to the banker and say: 'Lend us the money we gave to you.' The banker says, 'Certainly, with interest.'

"I'd like to see St. Louis beat that game. The details? Somebody down there could figure that out."

That's the order of things in the Ford plant. The command goes out. The manner of fulfillment is left to the man below.

Ford forever laid to rest one calumny against St. Louis that has persisted many years. Whenever some ructionist desires to flay what he chooses to call the city's lack of aggressive enterprise, he says:

"Look at the Burroughs Adding Machine Co. and Ford. Both of them had to leave because no one would play ball here."

It is a frequent assertion that Ford wanted to locate his original plant here, but could get no backing, so he went to Detroit.

"That is not true," Ford said. "I never considered St. Louis. I wanted Dearborn, but when I couldn't get the land here, Detroit was the second and only other choice."

Probably no individual has better claim to chortle at Michigan's rebuke to Newberryism than Ford, who was defeated by a small vote by Newberry in the campaign that caused all the scandal. Yet an inquiry brought only the response: "I forgot that a year and a half ago."

The efforts of Michigan newspapers to get Ford to comment upon that phase of the election failed, so they have taken to praising him for his silence.

Ford will have a new four-door sedan automobile ready for delivery on Jan. 1. The models are being shipped to agencies at this time. It will sell for $135 more than the old sedan. The body will be all-aluminum and 83 pounds lighter and less top-heavy than the old.

The story of how Ford came to take over the Lincoln Motor Car Co. was only partially told at the time. As is known, Mrs. Ford's persuasion was influential. But Ford's reasons for his reluctance to save his old acquaintance were not explained. Ford is not a philanthropist. Nor is he a democrat. He is essentially an autocrat, albeit benevolent in many ways. One of the impulses which led him to rescue Leland of the Lincoln company was entirely impersonal. Leland, he felt, was about to fall into the clutches of the bankers. Ford, the only man who has become bigger than the money power of the nation's financial centers, detests that money power. Through Leland he was able to balk what he felt was money tyranny—an effort to take all that Leland had in worldly goods from him.

One reason for his reluctance was that Leland was only one of many appealing to him for aid. Others were nationally known institutions which were feeling the stress of the period. He declined all. Mrs. Ford was interceding for Leland alone, and she was persistent.

Mr. and Mrs. Ford were on their way east in Ford's car. Late at night, they alighted at a station for a breath of air before retiring. Mrs. Ford again broached the subject of Leland. As before, Ford was unresponsive, but after pacing back and forth a time, he said:

"Mother, that old man is too old to need any money. I guess all he wants is a good job for the rest of his life. I guess I'll give it to him."

Ford's closing of his plants for several days recently because of the shortage of coal was in reality a curb to profiteering in a way not made clear.

All the coal for the Ford River Rouge coking ovens comes from Ford coal mines in Virginia. It is a Former Premier Represents Violent Jingo Government Born in the Hysteria of War and Dedicated to the Twin Principles of Rage and Spite, Very Well, Former Member of Chamber of Deputies Declares.

By Charles W. Wood.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.

GEORGES CLEMENCEAU does not represent France. That is the burden of Jean Longuet's message to America. M. Longuet, unlike M. Caillaux, has no personal animosity toward "The Tiger." But France, he says, is very much alive. The mind of its people has changed perceptibly since the signing of the armistice, and it is still changing from day to day; but the only France which Americans seem to know about is a militaristic, jingo Government, born in the hysteria of war and dedicated to the twin principles of rage and spite. Clemenceau, says Longuet, represents that France very well. But the France of today, he says, is a France which longs for peace and is desperately looking for a leadership which will point the way to peace; not by the path of conquest and revenge, but through the establishment of such international co-operation that world friendship may take the place of world suspicion.

JEAN LONGUET.

Americans, he said, seem to think of France as a nation still in the throes of fright and of England as the nation which has recognized that the war is over and is willing to listen to reason in dealing with its former enemies; but the main difference between France and England in this respect is that the British Government is more responsive to the changes which occur in its national life. France has no system by which its Parliament may be dissolved. The world will have to wait until 1924 for any true expression of the French people's will. If Central Europe does not break down before then in collapse or revolution, introducing factors whose influence cannot be calculated just now, the present Government will find itself buried in a political landslide.

Sketch of Jean Longuet

Jean Longuet, during the war and after, was a member of the Chamber of Deputies and leader of the middle-of-the-road Socialists. He is the grandson of Karl Marx and a believer in the Marxian philosophy. There is nothing suggestive of the emotional radical in his appearance; no sign, in fact, of that "excitable temperament" which we have come to associate with French political leadership. One wonders, while he is making his calm analysis of the international situation, if Marx himself would be considered much of a radical today. One also wonders why the United States Government, only two years ago, refused to vise H. Longuet's passport when he first contemplated bringing this message to America. In the eyes of our Government, evidently, although the armistice had been signed two years before, it was unsafe to permit the American people to get this view of France. Perhaps it was because Longuet, during the war, was echoing in France the speeches made in this country by Woodrow Wilson.

The war lords at the time called him a defeatist. They said he stood for peace at any price. What he actually did stand for was "peace by negotiation," but in those days any attitude toward Germany short of complete annihilation was looked upon by many as near treason. When President Wilson came out with his 14 points, he gave the French Socialist a better chance to articulate. There was no insincerity on their part, M. Longuet assured me. Only in one respect did they take exception to Mr. Wilson's program: He had given great emphasis to the idea of nationality. They were internationalists. Inflamed nationalists, from their viewpoint, could only work toward the continuance of militarism. "But the Versailles convention," said M. Longuet, "followed Mr. Wilson in this one respect and threw the rest of his program overboard. The Versailles treaty was written in hatred and fear and naturally could not restore the peace of Europe. Before this became evident, the present Government went into power; and, unfortunately for itself, for France, for Europe and the world, it went into power under conditions which made it less likely than ever that the Government would be modified by changing public opinion.

Estimation of Present Government

"The present is the least representative of France of any Government she has had for 100 years," Longuet said. "This was made possible, strangely, under the pretense of reform. Juares, the greatest Socialist leader, who was assassinated at the outbreak of the war, had worked for years to institute proportional representation in the French Parliament. In this he was backed by many of the conservative leaders and opposed by many who were otherwise radical. So great was the demand for proportional representation, however, that a compromise measure was eventually carried giving proportional representation unless one party should secure an actual majority of the votes. In that event all the candidates on the majority ticket would be seated; and France, not having the system of dissolution which obtains in England, would have to wait four and one-half years before any genuine opposition to governmental policies could make itself felt."

It was under this arrangement that M. Longuet lost his seat in the Chamber. A coalition of all elements, he said, Conservative, Radical, Clerical and others, united against the Socialists in the district around Paris. This coalition received 140,000 votes against 114,000 for the Socialists. There were 14 seats to be filled, and under proportional representation the Socialists would have had five or six. As it was the anti-Socialists won them all. M. Longuet spoke of this as a step away from democracy which the French people would assuredly not stand for very long. But when told that we Americans did not understand any other principle, he refused to make any comment.

The Socialists today are a negligible quantity in the Chamber of Deputies, but M. Longuet could see no permanent setback to the Socialist movement, either in France or in the rest of Europe. It will be a most fortunate thing for France, he said, if the Labor party makes a good showing in England and the Liberals return a sufficient number of men who are able to see Europe as a whole and not merely as a clash of nations. France, he said, will inevitably respond to the political events in other countries; for politics throughout Europe is necessarily international.

Greatest Danger Now of France

"The greatest danger facing France today," he said, "is the collapse of Central Europe. I am not an alarmist and I don't say that such a collapse is imminent, but everyone who has studied the European situation must admit that it is possible. But the nations are interdependent and such a calamity might tear us all to pieces. Internally, France is still sound. There is a lot of suffering and there will be more if the Government persists in its stupid policy of floating loans instead of imposing taxes for the expenses of enterprises it is constantly undertaking. The bourgeoise naturally is violently opposed to increasing the taxes and therefore will continue to subscribe to such loans for some time to come. But with each loan up goes the cost of living and down goes the value of the franc. Nevertheless, the economic situation in France is fundamentally sound; and, barring an all-European catastrophe, we will be able to get along. The great crime of the present Nationalistic political clique in France, which is represented eloquently by M. Clemenceau, is that it is doing nothing to guard France against such a universal debacle."

Throughout the interview, M. Longuet emphasized internationalism rather than Socialism. Not that he believed in one more than the other; but internationalism, he said, is necessary whether we have Socialism or not. It is necessary for the resumption of capitalism. Business throughout Europe is strangled today by an absurd plague of tariffs and commercial regulations. It is impossible to travel throughout Europe, no matter how urgent the business is, and it is equally impossible to ship goods from producer to consumer, without interference at every step on the part of Government agents, Government assessments, Government holdups. By this process, according to M. Longuet, the trade of every nation is being stifled. Inflamed nationalism is leading only to national strangulation.

"Whether one is a believer in Socialism or in capitalism," he said, "he must see that there can be no prosperity in Europe until there is some sort of co-ordination. The tariffs should be abolished by all-European agreement; for, under the present system, every tariff imposed by one nation is met by a corresponding tariff imposed by another, and the interests of no nation are really served. All along the line you will find that the truest patriot is the thorough internationalist."

Nationalism Poisoning France

"Do you mean," he was asked, "that this feeling is really strong in France today?"

"I do," he said. "And it's only a matter of a short time when it must become dominant. The vital question is whether or not a European crisis can be averted during the period when a nation must endure the stupidities of the present regime. Nationalism, instead of glorifying France, has been poisoning it. But France is strong and will, I am sure, throw off this poison."

M. Longuet reviewed the war from a point of view which will seem strange, coming from a French leader. The war, he admitted, could

Entente Must Be Re-Cemented Through Sincere Discussion of All Issues, Says Tardieu

Defeat of Lloyd George Lessens Feeling of Irritation in France Against England—Writer Says Allies Go to Lausanne With Kemal Holding Advantage.

By Andre Tardieu.

Former French High Commissioner to the United States.

PARIS, Nov. 18.—For three years there has been a constant feeling of irritation against the British policy throughout France. Lloyd George's fall rather lessened it, and today the dominant sentiment is that the entente must be re-cemented through sincere and complete discussion of all matters at issue.

Those who, like Matin, let loose most furiously against Britain, today are reproaching Poincare for not going far enough toward meeting Bonar Law's, Curzon's and Derby's overtures toward an understanding. It is a significant symptom.

Poincare Weakened.

The Chamber, at its recent session, weakened Poincare appreciably. The Premier, by again refusing to repudiate the radical Socialists, who so often vote with the communistic Socialists, profoundly annoyed the Republican liberal majority. If Lausanne were not already set for the twentieth, yesterday might have meant the end of the Cabinet.

The majority, who always have been faithful to the Premier in his difficulties, are getting tired of his flirting with the Left bloc which so often betrayed him. The great majority now are ready to insist that in return for co-operation Poincare really represents it in the Chamber and before the country.

The Cabinet crisis in Germany and the English election results emphasize that Europe is facing an unknown future.

What can we say about the Lausanne conference? It is announced that everybody is in agreement on the course to be taken, yet the English and the French press for the past week have emphasized the Franco-British tension which hardly promises well for common action.

The principal obstacle between France and England is Curzon's idea that the Powers should adopt toward Turkey the same attitude they took toward Germany in 1919—namely, peace conditions agreed on in advance by the allies and imposed on the adversary. Unfortunately, there are two conditions lacking for such a procedure.

Kemal Has Advantage.

First, there is France's attitude since the Angora accord of 1921 and Poincare's present position today of seeming opposition toward any prior allied agreement; secondly, the allies seem to have no political or military means of imposing their terms.

Consequently, Kemal would seem to be in a good position at Lausanne to blackmail the allies. That is the great danger and it does not seem to have been averted.

Moreover, it is obvious that England and France do not see the Turkish happenings of the last fortnight with the same eyes. Kemal's repeated and provocative statements that Angora wants conditional peace, his offensive against the capitulations and allied occupation of the straits and Constantinople, added to the Turkish persecution of Europeans and Christians, has produced a lively reaction in England. There the question is raised, what is the use of Lausanne if the Turks are to settle all questions beforehand by force?

On the other hand, the Quai d'Orsay has concealed or belittled these reports that Poincare's chamber speech of Nov. 10, after copiously criticising the previous English Government did not have a single word against Kemal. This difference of attitude casts doubt on the agreement announced in the press which everybody here desires.

This desire for an agreement is worth nothing.

Strong Appeal to France Needed Says English Writer

Britain's Greatest Liberal Editor.

Special Cable Dispatch to the Post-Dispatch. (Copyright, 1922.)

LONDON, Nov. 18.—My forecast of the election result has been fulfilled. A tidal wave of almost unprecedented magnitude has swept the Conservatives into power and Lloyd Georgeism into the abyss.

The chief cause of this grand slam is the revolt of the country against the methods of the past four years. There was a profound ground swell of hostility toward the dictatorship of Lloyd George which subverted Parliament by a mixture of corruption, opportunism and levity, and which ended by nearly plunging the nation into war single handed.

Throughout the Liberal party opposed the coalition and its methods, but by a strange irony all credit for the overthrow falls to the Conservatives, who were its main support and who only destroyed Lloyd George when he had ceased to serve their ends.

Lloyd George an Outcast.

The result of the election leaves Lloyd George an outcast with a trivial band of personal supporters. He has smashed the Liberal party, has been rejected by the Tory party, and his future must be that of a free lance.

No such sudden catastrophic fall ever was recorded in the history of British politics. For six years dictator of England, almost dictator of Europe, now he is discredited and broken, without a following, repudiated alike by Tories, Liberals and Labor.

The single monument of his work is the wreckage of the Liberal party and the overwhelming rehabilitation of the Conservatives. The present feeling is that the election has sounded the death knell of the hopes for the revival of the Liberal organization and it is doubtful whether it ever will be constructed as a first-class fighting instrument. It has been crushed between the upper and nether millstones of conservatism and labor. Asquith passes into final eclipse along with the lieutenant who engineered his fall six years ago. In him passes a great Englishman, wise, disinterested but lacking in initiative to meet great situations.

Most significant is the growth of the Labor party. It now takes the place of the Liberals as the most powerful opposition to Conservative control. Its aim was to crush the Liberals, and this was nearly achieved last Wednesday. Not only are its numbers more than doubled but its personnel is enormously enhanced so that it will be, intellectually, the most formidable element of the new Parliament.

The election disclosed the deplorable inefficiency of our present voting system. The vast majority of the Conservatives are returned by a minority vote, the majority being split between the Labor and Liberal candidates. The chief victims of the system were the Liberals, whose total vote in the country should entitle them to more than double their actual representation.

Women Aided Conservatives.

It also generally is agreed that the women's vote was a dominant factor. Last election, when the women voted for the first time, they were almost a unit for Lloyd George. This time they supported the Conservative ticket. It seems clear their influence will be exerted mainly on the side of reaction.

Yet the fact is remarkable that only two women were successful, Lady Astor and Mrs. Wintringham retaining their seats. The experience of this election indicates that a woman will not vote for a woman.

What will Bonar Law do with his majority? He has promised tranquillity, but I venture to say the voyage will be stormy. The passage is strewn with the rocks of unemployment, bad trade relations with France, taxation crushing, reparations question unsettled.

The overshadowing question is France! England is being ruined by the present continental policy. Will England now plainly face the issue with her ally and put to her the alternative that either France will agree to let Germany have a chance at recovery or England must adopt other means of restoring Europe to peace and prosperity? A strong appeal to France is urgently needed. The moment is favorable in view of Loucheur's advocacy of a more reasonable policy. Law's handling of this great issue will be the acid test of his statesmanship.

The Curse of Bumper Crops.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I HAVE just read an editorial in your issue of Nov. 8, entitled, "A Railway Executive's Speech," and I am quite certain that as the writer has misrepresented me personally, you will give me space to reply.

The purpose of my speech before the Traffic Club of St. Louis was not to deny that freight rates are too high to satisfy our farmers, but to show, with figures assembled by the American Farm Bureau, the farmers' principal organization, that these high rates should not be blamed for all the troubles of agriculture because, according to those figures, the farmer's freight charges aggregate only 8 per cent of his total expenditures.

It is necessary only to examine the statistics in the "Statistical Abstract of the United States for 1921," issued by the Department of Commerce at Washington, to find ample support for my assertion that bumper crops do not mean prosperity for the farmers, and that is all I said. Farmers themselves, unless they are prejudiced beyond all reason, know that except during abnormal periods, such as the world war, prices go down as production goes up.

The largest corn crop ever grown in this country, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, was in 1912, when we produced 3,124,746,000 bushels. Farm value of corn Dec. 1, 1912, was a trifle more than 49 cents a bushel. In 1913 the corn crop fell off nearly a billion bushels and the farm value rose to a little more than 69 cents a bushel. I have not yet found any economist of standing who contradicts the law of supply and demand.

In my speech before the Traffic Club I did insist that farmers should adopt more sensible methods of marketing their crops. Failure to do this has been responsible for nearly all the farmers' troubles for many years, as most of us know who are familiar with the subject. It is pretty well-established also that the growing of wheat and corn year after year instead of the growing of diversified crops has cut down the farmer's income except in abnormal times, such as the war period.

There is no more self-sustaining citizen in this country than the farmer, if he wishes to be, just as there is no more patriotic citizen. But he is precisely, as much or perhaps a little more susceptible to outside influences than other people. The speeches of political and distinctly radical candidates for office, whose idea and ideal of citizenship is to run for office on an antirailroad platform, are responsible for the farmers' disturbed and distorted viewpoint.

Forty Years for a Boy.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

TODAY'S paper gives an account of a boy 19 years old being given a sentence of 40 years in prison. I know nothing of the particulars of this case, but I do know that a boy 19 is still a boy.

In the same paper my eyes catch the lines, "What is more important than a boy?" There is something wrong with our civilization when such a thing is necessary.

The Clean Election League.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

A RUMOR has reached me that many of the Clean Election League members are under the impression that our work as a clean election league is finished, now that we have won our first great victory.

I feel that the work of the Clean Election League is only begun in St. Louis County and we must hold together as a powerful organization for good in the civic and political life of the citizens of St. Louis County.

What the Soldiers Got.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I HOPE Mr. Freeman in your Sunday publication states the truth when he says that should there be another war for the United States that "we will all get back in like good little boys to get our slum soup, lice and lead." He is right as far as I am concerned, but it has occurred to me that possibly I could be of greater help to my country by not enlisting, in case of war, but rather stay home and defend the freedom and liberty of the State of Missouri against Federal pirates and blue law fanatics.

They slipped prohibition over on us while we defended our country on the field of honor and those who profited most by our sacrifices thanked us by defeating the Federal soldiers' bonus bill, but presented us with the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill in its stead.

It has also occurred to me whether the common people and workingman could have shared worse had we lost the war, and were compelled to live under the Kaiser's freedom and liberty.

PHIL SULLIVAN.

THE FARMER'S PROBLEM.

In a communication which appears in today's Letters From the People Mr. Charles Dillon takes exception to the Post-Dispatch's comment on a speech he recently made to the St. Louis Traffic Club. As quoted, Mr. Dillon observed that bumper crops always lower the price of farm products, that the farmer mistakenly blames freight rates for his troubles, that the farmer pays but 8 per cent of his total outlay for freight, that what the farmer needs is better marketing facilities.

The fact is obvious, of course, that bumper crops reduce prices, but such statement, in our judgment, ought to be elucidated. Left by itself the implication is that the farmer, as a matter of business policy should curtail his production. Such counsel is dangerous.

Mr. Dillon thinks a reduction in freight rates would not help the farmer much. He may be right. But we do not accept the statistical conclusion that only 8 per cent of the farmer's total outlay goes for freight transportation. Nor is that conclusion supported by the figures from which it is drawn. Those figures place the farmer's total expenditures at $9,784,000,000. Of this amount $1,103,000,000 is charged to transportation, of which $800,000,000, or 8 per cent, is apportioned to freight. But the same figures place the "farmer's purchases at wholesale figures" at $7,018,340,000. Just what the freight rates amount to in that huge bill we do not know, but it must be considerable. If added to the acknowledged freight bill it would, of course, increase the proportion very much beyond 8 per cent.

Mr. Dillon's solution for the farmer's problem is better marketing facilities. Such betterment is desirable and necessary, but it would be far from a solution. Parenthetically, it might be remarked that so long as the railroads oppose the development of river transportation they are obstructing the better marketing facilities which the farmer needs. But if the farmer had perfect marketing facilities today—and such facilities include economical freight rates—he would still be beset by difficulties. A market for his surplus, not marketing facilities, is the American farmer's primary requirement. Our farms produce a surplus, which must be advantageously disposed of for the farmer to enjoy a sound prosperity. And that shifts the burden to our statesmanship. Specifically, the Government at Washington must develop a foreign policy which will promote and develop foreign markets for our farm surplus.

In that vital respect the present administration has failed fearfully. It not only has failed to promote foreign markets for our farmers but by an indefensible tariff act it has largely destroyed the purchasing power of such foreign markets as the American farmer has had.

In supporting America's entrance into the League of Nations the Post-Dispatch has frequently stressed the economic reasons as well as the humanitarian reasons for such action. The 3000 miles of water that separate us from Europe may sound big in the turgid rhetoric of the anti-Wilson politicians, but the fact is that the prosperity of the American farmer, and, therefore, the prosperity of the United States, is bound up with Europe and Europe's rehabilitation. We reiterate that counselling against bumper crops, even by implication, is a mischievous preaching and fallacious economics. The paradox that abundance impoverishes the American farmer can logically be read into Mr. Dillon's speech, and there is dynamite in that paradox.

THE BIBLE AND STRONG DRINK.

A controversy has arisen over the statement of a letter writer in "Letters From the People" that the Bible advises to give drink to the poor. He has been challenged to produce the quotation. "Just a Minute," commenting on the challenge, cannot recall any quotation touching giving the poor drink, yet he recalls Paul's advice to Timothy to take a little wine for his stomach's sake. Doubtless the quotation for which the original letter writer was vaguely reaching is in the sixth and seventh verses of the thirty-first chapter of Proverbs:

> 6. Give strong drink unto him that is ready to perish,
> And wine unto the bitter in soul;
> 7. Let him drink and forget his poverty,
> And remember his misery no more.

In Ecclesiastes Solomon repeats several times in several forms the advice contained in Chapter 9, verse 7: "Go thy way, drink thy wine with a merry heart," and in Chapter 2, verse 24: "There is nothing better for a man than that he should eat, drink and make his soul enjoy good in his labor."

The original Hebrew word for strong drink means intoxicating liquor or wine—wine of the kind which Noah and Lot drank when they became drunk. The same word is used to designate the wine made by Jesus at the marriage feast in Cana, when the guests were "well drunk." That Jesus Himself drank wine is indicated by His reference to John the Baptist and Himself, when he said: "John came neither eating nor drinking, and they say he hath a demon. The son of man came eating and drinking, and they say, Behold, a gluttonous man and a wine bibber, a friend of publicans and sinners."

We believe in temperance and we do not know a line of the Bible which advises or countenances drinking to excess. On the contrary, there are many injunctions against drunkenness as evil and foolish. For the sake of truth and accuracy, however, we submit the correct quotations.

GAS CONSUMERS MUST BE HEARD.

Acting Mayor Aloe, though handicapped by the fact that his incumbency is only temporary, has done all St. Louis a service in demanding of Counselor Haid an accounting of his apparent half-heartedness in presenting the case of the city, particularly the small consumer, at the gas-rate hearing before the State Public Service Commission. The inability of Mr. Haid to controvert statements in the Post-Dispatch editorial of Thursday, when laid before him by the Acting Mayor, indicates the strength of the challenge of his stewardship.

The hearing before the commission, which was, or should have been, based on the phenomenally increased earnings of the company made possible by one of the highest rates in the country, has been closed, but may be reopened on application of the city. Failure to reopen the case will react bitterly on the city administration and the city itself. The matter will not be forgotten. The monthly gas bill will be an ever-recurring irritant until relief is at hand or until the people are satisfied that an honest, competent effort has been made to represent their case. Disappointment they could bear with resignation had they been adequately represented. They will not be resigned so long as they are convinced, and with justice, that laxity of their own paid officials failed to afford them proper representation.

The reported statement of the commission that St. Louis public utilities are occupying too much of its time is surprising. St. Louis pays 42 per cent of the expenses of the State government. Are St. Louis public utilities taking 42 per cent of the time of the Public Service Commission? While it seems impossible that the city could ever be forcefully represented by an attorney and a consulting engineer who supply only reasons for not pressing the cause of the city, it remains with the city administration, specifically the Mayor, who appoints the City Counselor and his consulting expert, to see that the gas consumers of St. Louis get adequate representation.

ITALY'S MAN ON HORSEBACK.

Benito Mussolini is a bright and glamorous figure, but a sinister one in the eyes of those who believe in representative government. In his opening address to the Italian Parliament the new Premier dramatically revealed himself in the character of "the man on horseback." He told the people's representatives that his government would live and have its way with or without their approval, because it had the force. He did not ask for their confidence; he demanded the formality of a vote, cynically implying that they could give it or not, without affecting his intentions. For those who believed in the orderly forms prescribed by the law of the land he coined the sneering term, "melancholy super-constitutionalists."

The chief argument against red revolution has been that it was neither right nor necessary. Believers in democracy have advised the Communists to seek redress with ballots, not bullets. The Socialists of Italy acted, on that advice. They sought and obtained reforms by winning elections. They made their program of state ownership and universal franchise effective by enlisting the support of the voters. Mussolini, backed by the bayonets of the "Black Shirts," sets that program aside. He nullifies the mandate of the electorate—because he disagrees with it. And in doing so, he vindicates the creed of the Third Internationale. He justifies the grim Trotzkian maxim that the workers will retain their rights just so long as they have enough rifles.

Mussolini's course is less defensible than that of Lenine, because Italy had a constitutional democracy. The Russian Communists overturned one autocracy to establish another. The Fascisti overturned a free and representative Government to set up a dictatorship. We can see no hope of good in such a program, achieved by such a process. If we have learned anything at all, it is that progress in government comes from the wisdom of the people, slowly and laboriously expressed through their chosen representatives, and in spite of the occasional recurrence of knightly figures in armor. Facismo's triumph in Italy is a "throwback." Italy is indulging in the momentary luxury of hero worship. It will not escape the day of payment that always exacts its blood and tears. Helmeted heroes win the populace only to lead them into despotism and anarchy.

CONTRADICTION.

I do not want to cease to be,
But, still, you graves with headstones white
Are dear, you speak of peace to me,
Of rest, of refuge from the strife
And pettiness of human life.
I'm sure I would not cease to be
But, oh, the bitterness of strife,
The weariness that living brings.
And so the graveyard seems to me
To promise from all cares surcease,
Relief and rest and perfect peace.
And yet my mind to living clings,
I'm sure I would not cease to be.

RECONCILIATION.

The rest that sets the spirit free
Is all the rest the body craves,
For bodies rest not in their graves,
As atoms quick they upward fly,
To newer uses, not to die;
The pettiness of human life,
Its cares, its weariness and strife
Shall vanish and shall cease to be
In your new life's vast ecstacy,
And you shall laugh with joy to find
No rest you'll need when you arise,
Born to the stature of the skies.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publications, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

CANADA'S INDEPENDENCE.

From the Brooklyn Eagle.

IT is announced semiofficially that hitches have been untangled and that Canada is to have an "Envoy" at Washington under the title of High Commissioner, who will not be the subordinate of the British Ambassador. In other words, Canada for the first time gets a definite place in diplomacy. It cannot be correctly said that she has had part in diplomacy for the first time. Her development has for many years been important as a factor in the settlement of all questions with the United States, and her statesmen have lent their services, and more than once have dominated the course of the mother country. Thinkers whose minds are occupied with real things rather than with the technicalities anticipate no friction between a British Ambassador and a Canadian High Commissioner; or between the British embassy on foreign policy and that of the Dominion. Theoretically, the power that makes war and peace for a nationality should have exclusive control of foreign relations. Canada cannot make war. There, however, gets lost in a labyrinth when it would into the constitution of the British empire. The empire actually governed by a Premier, who has the finger of a Parliament in which only about 40,000,000 people in the British Islands are represented, though 10 times as many are "governed." Our State Department will not be embarrassed. It will rather be convenienced by direct relations with the Dominion. Yet is the precedent a pregnant one for Great Britain. Australia and South Africa may soon demand the same sort of recognition that Canada gets, or cognate recognition. And we can imagine that few British statesmen would view with perfect calm any immediate establishment of a High Commissioner of the Irish Free State at Washington. It is a good thing to remember in this connection that Britain, hampered by a written Constitution, may try all sorts of experiment freely and recede from them as freely. Her forms are elastic. Her spirit conservative. Her future will be governed by dynamics, not by mechanics, just as her past has been governed. She is in this respect unique among the world's nationalities.

A PUBLIC LECTURER'S DUTY.

Sir Philip Gibbs in Harper's Magazine.

MY lecture was only one episode toward the end of a long and busy day, during which I had met many people at luncheon, tea, dinner, or in newspaper offices, hospitals, clubs and clubs. A lecturer must not go into a town and give nothing but his lecture in return for a certain number of dollars collected by his agent with deductions of fees and expenses, from the balance of which he afterward hands over a few cent to the income tax authorities of the United States, and 33⅓ per cent to the British Government. "It's not all honey," as they used to say on the music stage. He must give more than that, in common decency. He must give his mind, his health, his mental vitality, his sympathy and understanding. He has to give himself, what is in him, without stint. That is easy enough in the first six towns. He is beginning to wear rather thin, feel that he is not giving quite all and has no more to give, by the time he is in the teens of towns. It is not altogether his fault if hosts find him a dull or nerve-edged figure. He has become a man who shrinks back from the tinkle of a telephone as though it had come to him a blow. There are times when I have groaned aloud in anguish when the telephone rang, and then again. As a rule it began at 8:30 A. M. when, often after a night journey, I was trying to steal an hour's extra sleep. But no matter for that!

Lane's Posthumous Letters Show Estimate of Wilson Extracts Had Failed to Reveal

Sharpness of Comments Made During Stress of War Absorbed in Loyalty and Admiration Expressed in Letters Preceding and Following That Period.

THE letters of Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior in President Wilson's Cabinet, published posthumously by the Houghton-Mifflin Co., as collected and arranged by his widow, Ann Minter-mute Lane, and Louise Herrick Wall, present an estimate of Wilson which in its totality is greatly at variance with the impression created by extracts which have been published. The estimate contained in the letters covers the period before Lane's appointment, when he was not personally acquainted with Wilson, and antedating the war and Lane's resignation, and on through the illness which caused his death.

Although, during the war stress, differences of opinion developed which are reflected in certain of his letters and memoranda of Cabinet meetings, the sharpness of these comments is absorbed in the loyalty and admiration which are expressed strongly in letters preceding and following that period. His disapproving comment on certain of Wilson's acts and attitudes during this period have been published in the Post-Dispatch. Extracts from letters which show, on the whole, a very different appraisal and attitude toward the Democratic leader are given here.

Expected Wilson Nomination.

To George W. Lane, July 2, 1912.

"It looks as I am writing as if Wilson were to be nominated at Baltimore. If he is he will sweep the country. Taft won't carry three states. Wilson is clean, strong, high-minded and cold-blooded. To nominate him would be a tremendous triumph for the anti-Hearst people."

To Oscar S. Straus, July 3, 1912.

"As I write, word comes that Woodrow Wilson has been nominated. I do not know him, but from what I hear he promises if elected to be a real leader in the war against injustice. The world wants earnest men right now—not cynics, but men who believe, whether rightsly or wrongly; and the reason that the East is so much less progressive, as we say, than the West, is because the East is made up so largely of cynics."

To Timothy Spellacy, Sept. 30, 1912.

"I don't want a position in the Cabinet. I am not looking for any further honors, but I want to help Wilson make a success of his administration, for I think he will be elected. I am afraid that he will become surrounded by Southern reactionaries—men of his own blood and feeling, who are not of the Northern and more progressive type. We have got to cut some sharp corners in doing the things that are right. By this I don't mean that we will do anything that is wrong; but from the standpoint of the Southern Democrat it is illegal to have a strong central government—one that is effective—and we have got to have such a government if we are going to hold possession of the nation. People want things done. Wilson is a bit too conservative for me, but maybe when he realizes the necessity for strength he will be for it."

Proved to Be Poor Prophet.

Lane proved himself a poor prophet with respect to the permanence and power of the Progressive party. To Adolph C. Miller he wrote, Oct. 18, 1912: "Politically things look like Wilson, though I suppose T. R. will get California and a lot of other states. I think he will beat Taft badly. The new party has come to stay and it will be a tremendous influence for good."

To Senator Francis G. Newlands he wrote, Oct. 28, 1912: "If he (Wilson) can get the Southerners into line with the Northern Democrats he can make over the Democratic party and give it a long lease of life. If he cannot do this, and his party splits, Roosevelt's party will come into possession of the country for four years and hold it for a long time."

To Woodrow Wilson, Nov. 6, 1912: "The door of opportunity has opened to the progressive Democracy. I know that you will enter courageously. The struggle of the next four years will be to persuade our timid brethren to follow your leadership, 'gentlemen unafraid.' I am persuaded from my experience here that no President can be a success unless he takes the position of a real party leader—the Premier in Parliament as well as the chief executive.

"The theoretical idea of the President's aloofness from Congress—of a President dealing with a national Legislature as if he were an independent Government dealing with another—is wrong, because it has been demonstrated to be ineffective and ruinous. We need definiteness of program and co-operation between both ends of Pennsylvania avenue. There is generally one end of the avenue that does not know its own mind; sometimes it is one, and sometimes it is the other.

"Your friends have been made happy through the campaign by the manner in which you have conducted yourself. You spoiled so many bad prophecies."

Willing to Aid Wilson.

To Charley K. McClatchy, Sacramento, Cal., Nov. 25, 1912:

"I would do almost anything to make Wilson's administration a success, for I believe he has faced the right way and the only difficulty that he will have will be in getting strong enough support to carry out his own policies. I think he lacks somewhat in adroitness and that his campaign was much less radical than he would voluntarily have made it."

Lane mistrusted Wilson's currency knowledge and distrusted Bryan's currency influence. To

Lane's Last Words Were Speculation Upon Future Life

LANE'S last word to the world was a manuscript fragment written May 17, 1921, the day before he died, and found in his room. It was a whimsical speculation as to what would have happened if he had passed into that other land and what he would have done and whom he would have sought out.

"But for my heart's content in that new land," he wrote, "I think I'd rather loaf with Lincoln along a river bank. I know I could understand him. I would not have to learn who were his friends and who his enemies, what theories he was committed to and what against. We could just talk and open out our minds, and tell our doubts and swap the longings of our hearts that others never heard of. He wouldn't try to master me nor to make me feel how small I was. I'd dare to ask him things and know that he felt awkward about them, too. And I would find, I know I would, that he had hit his shins just on those very stumps that had hit me. We'd talk of men a lot, the kind they call the great. I would not find him scornful. Yet boys that he knew in New Salem would somehow appear larger in their souls than some of these that I had called the great. His wise eyes saw qualities that weighed more than smartness. Yes, we would sit down where the banks sloped gently, with the quiet stream, and glance at the picture of our people, the negroes being lynched, the miners' civil war, labor's holdups, employers' ruthlessness, the subordination of humanity to industry.

Near Close of Administration Writer Deplored Political Conditions of Land, Saying Wilson "Who Talked So High of Faith in the People Distrusted Them."

Adolph C. Miller, he wrote, Dec. 4, 1912:

"I should like to see you Secretary of the Treasury. There is to be some change made in our currency laws during the next four years, and a man of perfectly sane, level mind is tremendously needed to guide Wilson in this matter, for I guess he is very ignorant on the subject. Especially is this true if Bryan goes into the Cabinet."

To Benjamin Ide Wheeler, president of the University of California, Dec. 23, 1912:

"What you say regarding the President-to-be is extremely interesting. That he is headstrong, arbitrary and positive his friends admit. These are real virtues in these days of slackness and sloppiness. I have just returned from New York where I have talked with McAdoo and House, who are extremely close to him and advising him regarding his Cabinet, and they tell me he is a most satisfactory man to deal with. He listens quite patiently and makes up his mind and then 'stays put.' His Cabinet will be his advisers, but no one will control him."

To John H. Wigmore, Jan. 20, 1913:

"Under all circumstance Wilson regards himself as a free man, and is bound by no ties whatever to do anything or to follow any course; he recognizes no such thing as consistency, or logic, or gratitude, as in the slightest embarrassing him."

Says Wilson Kept Own Counsel.

To Joseph N. Teal, Jan. 20, 1913:

"Wilson is able to keep his own counsel more perfectly than anybody I have ever known and nobody comes back from Trenton knowing anything more than when he went. He has got splendid nerve, and while Washington won't like him a little bit, the country, I think, will put him down as a very great president."

Following his appointment as Secretary of Interior in President Wilson's Cabinet, he wrote to John H. Wigmore, March 9, 1913, asking him to be his first assistant: "The President would be delighted to have you and you will find him treating you with the same consideration and giving you the same dignity that he does all the members of his Cabinet and all the Supreme Court. I have never seen a man more considerate, more reasonable."

To Walter H. Page, World's Work March 12, 1913: "The President is the most charming man imaginable to work with. Most of us in politics have been used to being lied about, but there has been a particularly active set of liars engaged in giving the country impressions that W. W. was what we called 'out West' 'cold nosed.' He is the most sympathetic, cordial and considerate presiding officer that can be imagined. And he sees so clearly. He has no fog in his brain."

To Edwin Alderman, President of the University of Virginia, March 17, 1913:

"I had to introduce myself to the President-elect, the day before the inauguration. I find him consideration itself in Cabinet meetings, and he never seems to be groping. In my mental proceses I find myself constantly like a man climbing a mountain, pushing through belts of fog, but his way seems clear and definite."

Praises Wilson for Speech.

To President Wilson, Jan. 9, 1915:

"That was a bully speech, a corker. You may have made a better speech in your life, but I never heard of it. Other Presidents may have made better speeches, but I have never heard of them. It was simply great, because it was the proper blend of philosophy and practicality. It had punch in every paragraph. The country will respond to it spendidly. It was jubilant, did not contain a single minor note of apology, and the country will visualize you at the head of the column. You know this country, and every country wants a man to lead it, ofy whom it is proud not because of his talent, but because of his personality—that which is as indefinable as charm in a woman, and I want to see your personality known to the American people, just as well as we know it who sit around the Cabinet table. Your speech glows with it and that is why it gives me such joy that I can't help writing you as enthusiastically as I do."

To John Crawford Burns, Rome, Italy, March 3, 1915:

"The President is growing daily in the admiration of the people. He has little of the quality that develops affection, but this, I think comes from his long life of isolation."

To E. W. Scripps, Scripps-McRae Syndicate, a newspaper enterprise, June 1, 1915:

"I feel that at last the country has come to a consciousness of the President's magnitude. They see him as we do who are in close touch with him. My own ability to help him is very limited, for he is one of those men made by nature to tread the wine-press alone. The opportunity comes now and then to give a suggestion, or to utter a word of warning, but on the whole I feel that he is probably less dependent upon others than any President of our time. He is conscious of public sentiment—surprisingly so—for a man who sees comparatively few people, and yet he never takes public sentiment as offering a solution for a difficulty; if he can think the thing through and arrive at the point where public sentiment supports, so much the better. He will loom very large in the historian's mind two or three decades from now."

Censures Roosevelt's Criticism.

To John H. Wigmore, Dec. 8, 1915:

"Wasn't the President's message on the hyphenated gentlemen bully? You could not have beaten that yourself. And your dear friend, T. Roosevelt, can certainly write himself down as one large and glorious ass in his criticism of the message. He hates Wilson so that he has lost his mind. I wish I didn't have to say this about Roosevelt, because I'm extremely fond of him (which you are not), but a poorer interview on the message could not have been written."

To Mrs. Adolph Miller, Dec. 12, 1915:

"Last night we had the Gridiron dinner, and the President made an exalted speech. He is spiritually great, Mary, and don't you dare smile and think of the widow! We are all dual, old Emerson said in his essay on Free Will, and Adolph can tell you what the old Greeks said. And this duality is where the fight comes in and the two people walk side by side. Today is Jekyll's day and tomorrow is Hyde's, and so they alternate."

To Frederick I. C. Lane, June 6, 1916:

"I had a talk with the President which was very touching. He made reference to the infamous stories that are being circulated regarding him with such indignation and pathos that I felt really very sorry for him. I suppose that these stories will be believed by some and made the basis of a very nasty kind of campaign, but there is no truth in them, and yet a man can't deny them. It is a strange thing that when a man is not liable to any other charge they trump up some story about a woman."

To Walter H. Page, March 16, 1918:

"The whole country is solidly, strongly with the President. There are men in Congress bitterly against him, but they do not dare to raise their voices because he has the people so resolutely with him." * * * Don't let any of these people doubt the President or doubt the American people."

To John Lyon, Camp McClellan, Ala., March 15, 1918:

"The President is being bitterly criticised because he has taken every opportunity to talk of terms and of ways out, but I think he is right. He must make the people of the world feel that we are not foolishly and in a headstrong way trying to get anything for ourselves or for anybody else, except a chance to live our own lives."

To Miss Genevieve King, March 16, 1918:

"The country seems strongly with the President, and while his spirits are not gay his purpose is high and his determination is strong. He will do better and increasingly better as time goes on, I believe."

To William Marion Reedy, Sept. 13, 1918:

"Everything goes happily here these days because we are winning the war, and the future of the world will soon be in the hands of a man who not so long ago was a school teacher. A great world this, isn't it? And the greatest romance is not even the fact that Woodrow Wilson is it's master, but the advance of the Czecho-Slavs across 5000 miles of Russian Asia—an army on foreign territory, without a government, holding not a foot of land, who are recognized as a nation!"

To James H. Hawler, Nov. 9, 1918: "The Wilson administration may be judged by the great things that it has done—the unparalleled things—and the election of last Tuesday will get but a line in the history of this period, while the Versailles conference and the 14 points of Wilson's message will have books written about them for a century to come."

To E. C. Bradley, January, 1919:

"I am standing by the President for all I am worth. I talked to the merchants' association, and gave him a great sendoff, but they didn't rise to their feet at all, which is the first time this has happened in two years. * * * I have always thought the President was right in going across and I believe that he will pull through a League of Nations."

To George W. Lane, Sept. 11, 1919:

"I suppose you will not be able to hear the President speak when he is there. You will miss much. He is not impassioned nor a great orator, such as Chatham or Fox, or Webster or Dolliver or even Bryan—but he has a keen, quick, cutting mind, a mind of a really great critic, and his manner is that of the gentleman scholar. He is first among all men today, which is much for America."

To George W. Lane, Nov. 18, 1920:

"I have served him (the President) long and faithfully under very adverse circumstances. It is hard for him to get on with anyone who has any will or independent judgment. Yet I am not given to forsaking those to whom I have any duty. However, we shall see. I write you this that you may not be misled by the thought that there has been or is any friction."

"Little' Wilson Having His Day."

In September, 1920, he wrote, "Things look dark for me, politically. The little Wilson (as distinguished from the great) is now having his day. Cox is making a manly fight on behalf of the President's league, but the administration is sullen, and is doing nothing. Cox will be defeated, not by those who dislike him, but by those who dislike Wilson and his group. This seems mighty unjust.

To Benjamin Ide Wheeler, Oct. 18, 1920:

"What a hell of a condition the land is in politically. Cowardice and hypocrisy are slated to win, and makeshifts and the cheapest politics are to take possession of national affairs. Better even obstinacy and ego-mania! Cox, I think, has made a gallant fight. He is to be beaten because Wilson is as unpopular as he once was popular. Oh, if he had been frank as to his illness, the people would have forgotten everything, his going to Paris, his refusal to deal with the mild reservationists, everything would have been swept away in a great wave of sympathy. But he could not be frank, he who talked so high of faith in the people distrusted them, and they will not be mastered by mystery. So he is so much less a hero that he bears down his party to defeat."

$60,000 PLEDGED TO BOY SCOUT FUND BY THE 40 AND 8

War Society Underwrites at $20,000 a Year Sum Sufficient to Raise $150,000 Sought for Three Years.

A subscription of $20,000 a year for three years, totaling $60,000, was made yesterday by the Society of 40 and 8, of the American Legion, to the extension fund of the Boy Scouts, bringing to a successful close a campaign to raise $150,000 for a three-year Boy Scout budget.

The Society of 40 and 8 carried on the campaign, in conjunction with the Executive Council of the Boy Scouts, and Friday determined to underwrite any amount needed at the close of the campaign to assure an annual income of $50,000 for the three years.

Liberty Bond as Security.

In submitting the subscription and $10,000 in Liberty bonds as security, the society announced that several banks, business firms and individuals are considering subscriptions to the fund. A request was made that if these additional pledges oversubscribe the $50,000 a year, a corresponding abatement be made in the society's subscription.

The subscription has no connection with a twice rejected offer of $15,000 by the Ku Klux Klan, it was stated in response to an inquiry whether the klan had sought to make a contribution indirectly.

A letter accompanying the pledge card was signed by Thomas L. Fekete, president of the Society of 40 and 8; Francis M. Curlee, chairman of the Workers' Committee; Louis J. Portner, chairman of the Executive Committee, and E. J. Spencer, chairman of the Campaign Committee.

How Society Got Name.

The Society of 40 and 8 derives its name from an inscription placed by the military authorities on box cars on French railroads during the war, indicating their capacity for troop transport. The inscription "40 homme, 8 chevaux" meant the car would hold 40 men or 8 horses. The local branch of the society is Voiture 38.

Apportionment of the budget over the three-year period has been outlined by the Executive Council, as follows: 40 per cent for education of boys, maintaining and supervising camps, transportation, and instruction in more than 60 subjects; 25 per cent for training of volunteer Scout leaders; about 17 per cent in camp buildings and equipment; 12 per cent in organization of new troops and extension of Boy Scout work, and six per cent in administration.

TWO MEN HELD FOR INQUIRY IN LANGE MURDER CASE RELEASED

Alibis Offered by Frank Eppelsheimer Jr. and Robert Giesecke Supported by Witnesses.

Frank Eppelsheimer Jr. and Robert Giesecke, who were held by the police for inquiry in connection with the murder of Theodore A. Lange at Tenth and La Salle streets Wednesday night, were released Friday afternoon. This followed a police check-up on the alibis offered by the two men, who were supported by witnesses in their story of their movements on the night of the killing.

The two men are under bond in another case, on a charge of assault to kill, and Lange was a witness against them in that case. Policemen had told Eppelsheimer and Giesecke that Lange had given information against them, though the fact was that Lange had refused to give information which he was believed by the police to have.

1000 GALLONS OF MOONSHINE SEIZED IN MISSOURI IN OCTOBER

State Federal Prohibition Director Reports to National Commissioner on His Activities.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—More than 1000 gallons of "poisonous moonshine whisky" were seized by the forces of Federal Prohibition Director Allen in Missouri during October, according to a report by Allen to Prohibition Commissioner Haynes.

"It is my opinion," Allen said, "that hereafter a large number of violators will receive jail sentences, which will have a tendency to diminish the number of bootleggers in this State. The press of the State, as a whole, is favorable to enforcement."

Class in Public Speaking.

A second class in public speaking will be started at 5:45 p. m. tomorrow by the educational committee of the Sales Managers' Bureau in room 802, Chamber of Commerce Building, Broadway and Locust street. The class will instructed by Prof. Edward P. Perry of the Perry School of Dramatics and Oratory.

PRICE TREND OF SECURITIES AND BUSINESS SURVEY

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"Further reactions in securities in the face of improving business have been leading features of the financial markets of the past week. A number of partial explanations for the market's trend have been available. For one thing it seems that the speculation for the rise was overdone and that weak speculative accounts were built up which left the markets susceptible to selling which coincided with the withdrawal of funds which had been placed in securities pending the revival of trade. Weakness in foreign exchange also served as a disturbing influence, while greater attention has been given to the implications of the recent elections.

"Lobking back for the moment on post armistice days it will be recalled that a great boom was built up on the war-created shortages of goods, a boom which could be financed for the time being. Eventually, the world's depleted purchasing power exerted its effect and trade lapsed back everywhere into deep depression. From the latter condition we in this country emerged on the strength of certain war shortages which deflation having taken place we were again able to finance. These shortages were those in buildings, railroad equipment and structures, and if it may be so described, that in automobiles. The coincident recovery occurred largely in the industrial East. All along there has been a sharp contrast between conditions in the cities and those in the country districts. Business has improved despite the agricultural depression and the demoralization of international trade.

The Industrial Recovery.

"It must be admitted that the industrial recovery has been surprisingly strong. Railroad car loadings, despite the aftermath of the strike, have practically equaled the best performances on record—those of the fall of 1920. Steel production, although only about 80 per cent of war expanded capacity, has materially exceeded anything attained before the war. Automobile output has exceeded all records. Just now the seasonal slackening may be about to set in, but holiday trade according to reports promises to be good.

"Farm products have, to be sure, rallied somewhat. Wheat has risen to $1.20 a bushel. These products remain, however, distinctly below the average for all commodities and the farmer will not, on the present basis, be out of debt for another year or two. Meanwhile we have a tariff which hurts the farmer policy which makes no attempt to improve his foreign markets, which determine, after all, what the price of his products will be.

"A strong sky in the foreign exchanges after extreme weakness meanwhile testifies of an improvement in the political situation in Europe.

"Dullness and irregularity characterized the trading in today's short session on the Stock Exchange. There was no particular pressure on the list as a whole, but bearish interests made an occasional jab here and there in probing for weak spots. Loss of a point or two are recorded in some issues which were subjected to special influences while in others covering of shorts was in evidence. At the close changes in the main body of stocks were mostly fractional with the trend inclining to the upward side. Bonds were quiet but fairly steady. Absence of floor room traders was noticeable.

Small Exchange Demand.

"Currencies of foreign countries met with scanty demand this morning. Along with dullness came a slight leading European recession in rates which was looked upon as only natural, following the good recovery this week. Sterling lost ¼ at $4.47¾, while French francs again fell below 7 cents. At 6.94½ cents the net loss from yesterday's close was 7 points. Italian lire and Belgian francs also somewhat easier. German marks gave up 1-16 at .01 7-16 of a cent. Swiss francs proved an exception to the general trend and moved up at 3 points."

"Business in cotton usually quiet and prices moved within a narrow range. The December future opened 6 points higher at 25.74, reacted nearly 2 points and then recovered to 25.78. Wheat was also dull and practically unchanged during the greater part of the trading. December contracts opened 1c down at $1.20½, rallied feebly and then continued at close to that level.

"The weekly statement of the Clearing House deficit in reserve of $19,642,000. Loans increased $6,577,000 while demand deposits decreased $1,330,000. The reserve in the Federal Reserve Bank of member banks decreased $45,443,000 to a total of $47,274,000.

New York Bank Statement.

EXCHANGE MARKET SHOWS STRENGTH IN WEEK'S TRADE

Many Documents Move Up to Highest Levels Touched Since Market Was Unsettled by Turkish and Franco-German Situations.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange review today, says:

"The foreign exchange market showed a greater degree of strength in leading exchanges during the past week than at any time since the beginning of September and many documents moved up to the highest levels touched since the market was unsettled by the various incidents connected with the Turkish situation and with the creation of acute unsettlement of relations of France and Germany.

"An important feature of the market was the manner in which French exchange moved throughout the week, checks on Paris selling yesterday as high as 7.08 as against 6.43 a week ago. Italian exchange moved over a wide range, but after advances in the first half of the week lires were in better supply and reactions occurred from the highest levels. Attention was called to the fact that at the high rate yesterday francs were up nearly 1 cent from the low price of the previous week, when they sold as low as 6.18. Sterling was steadily bought by bankers here, in some cases representing large importers, for the purpose of remitting proceeds of sales, and demand sold as high as $4.48, a gain of over 2 cents for the week. Advances were made in many other documents.

"Belgians followed French exchange closely, most moving up to 4.35, compared with a low of 6.64 in the preceding week or a gain of over 1 cent to the Belgian franc from the low level. South American exchange developed strength. Brazil being influenced by friendship to the new administration, milreis advancing from 11.82 on Monday to 12.25 yesterday. Indian exchange was unusually active and strong, rupees making a new high for the year with an advance from 29.25 to 30.05. Canadian exchange eased off from ¼ premium to 1-16 premium.

"Currencies of foreign countries met with scanty demand this morning. Rising with dullness came a slight leading European recession in rates which was looked upon as only natural, following the good recovery this week. Sterling lost ¼ at $4.47⅜, while French francs again fell below 7 cents. At 6.94½ cents the net loss from yesterday's close was 7 points. Italian lire and Belgian francs also somewhat easier. German marks gave up 1-16 at .01 7-16 of a cent. Swiss francs proved an exception to the general trend and moved up at 3 points."

HOG VALUES LOWEST IN PAST TEN MONTHS

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

Last Week.	Week Ago.	Year Ago.
Cattle and calves	34,608	37,874	26,928
Hogs	87,790	76,087	88,228
Sheep	10,340	7,188	8,827
Horses and mules	2,469	2,592	1,723
Totals	137,297	123,741	125,706

A heavy run of hogs at the St. Louis National Stock Yards last week forced prices to the lowest point in ten months. Sheep and lambs, under a moderate offering, held to a steady level. Receipts of cattle were also moderate and although butcher stock ruled strong and active, a sharp decline was forced in the market for medium and common beef steers. The greatest showing, the most loss were those selling from $8.50 per cwt. The average was 50c to 75c down with selling draggy virtually throughout the entire week. Choice steers were quotable steady and strictly good kinds showed a loss of only about 25c. Stocker and feeder steers got off to a lower start, but later rallied in the market recovered the initial loss, trade finishing steady to strong. The top for the week and an equal of the year's highest price for cattle was $13 per cwt., paid Wednesday for two cars of choice Angus steers that averaged 1179 lbs. A few other good feed steers sold around $10 and a load of yearlings cashed at $11. The run of Western range cattle fell off to about 25 cars. Fourteen cars of these were from Kansas and brought $5, with the remaining offerings coming from Oklahoma and selling at $4.35 to $6.10. Butcher yearlings at one stage of the week's trade were 25 to 50c higher, although part of this gain was lost on the close with the result late values were about 25c up. Butcher cows also showed a weak trend on the close and the 25c improvement showed at one time was narrowed down to 10 to 15c late. Canner and cutter cows finished strong, beef bulls with weight strong to 15c higher and bologna bulls down to 50c higher. A number of fair-qualified lightweight yearlings were noted at $8 to $9.10, followed by plain grassers at $5.50 to $7.50. The bulk of the majority of butcher cows were noted at $4 to $5.50, the top, 200 lbs. and above in weight. As compared with the close the preceding week, butcher hogs show a loss of 30c to 35c over the period, light hogs, 100 to 180 lbs., a decline of 25c to 35c, light lights, 130 to 150 lbs., a similar drop; pigs, 120 lbs. and down, a decline of 25c and packing sows a decline of 10c to 15c. At the close of the week the general hog market was at the lowest level since that it has been since the middle of January of the current year. Despite the recent break, however, the general quality still stands 50c to $1 higher than it was at this time in 1921. During the week the order demand from the East was fairly active, buying principally for pigs and light hogs, but with some demand for heavies, 220 lbs. and better. Shippers took a fair number of light and light weight hogs, 180 lbs. and down, but later fell off to about 200 lbs. in weight, has been largely from local packers and St. Louis butchers. At the week's close prices for various weights and classes of hogs were: Prime heavies, 250 lbs. and up, $7.75 to $8 (few coming), over. Prime medium weights 190 to 225 lbs., $8 to $8.10; lights, 160 to 180 lbs., $8.05 to $8.20; light lights, 130 to 150 lbs., $7.90 to $8.05; light weights, 100 to 130 lbs., $7.50 to $8.35; packer sows, $6.75 to $7.15; stags, $5.50 to $6.75; immune stock pigs, 80 to 110 lbs., $8.10 to $8.50.

Hog Receipts Increase.

Receipts of hogs for the week just closed total 89,490, a very heavy supply, and with one exception considerably the heaviest week's run of hogs at the St. Louis market so far in 1922. Compared with the preceding week the receipts show an increase of 15 per cent, but they are only a few hundred head above the arrivals for the corresponding week in 1921, when 88,228 hogs were in. With heavy supplies at their disposal, buyers were bearish from day to day and the trend of prices was downward. Quality of the daily runs has been good, taken as a whole, with a better showing of strong-weight butcher hogs, 200 lbs. and above in weight. As compared with the close the preceding week, butcher hogs show a loss of 30c to 35c over the period, light hogs, 100 to 180 lbs., a decline of 25c to 35c, light lights, 130 to 150 lbs., a similar drop; pigs, 120 lbs. and down, a decline of 25c and packing sows a decline of 10c to 15c. At the close of the week the general hog market was at the lowest level since that it has been since the middle of January of the current year. Despite the recent break, however, the general quality still stands 50c to $1 higher than it was at this time in 1921. During the week the order demand from the East was fairly active, buying principally for pigs and light hogs, but with some demand for heavies, 220 lbs. and better. Shippers took a fair number of light and light weight hogs, 180 lbs. and down, but later fell off to about 200 lbs. in weight, has been largely from local packers and St. Louis butchers. At the week's close prices for various weights and classes of hogs were: Prime heavies, 250 lbs. and up, $7.75 to $8 (few coming), over. Prime medium weights 190 to 225 lbs., $8 to $8.10; lights, 160 to 180 lbs., $8.05 to $8.20; light lights, 130 to 150 lbs., $7.90 to $8.05; light weights, 100 to 130 lbs., $7.50 to $8.35; packer sows, $6.75 to $7.15; stags, $5.50 to $6.75; immune stock pigs, 80 to 110 lbs., $8.10 to $8.50.

Sheep Supply Moderate.

Just a moderate supply of sheep and lambs arrived last week and the market, while active each day, was but steady and at the close of the week prices were on very much the same basis as the close of the previous week. A good many of the lambs offered were not as good as they ought to have been, not being fat and some not having quality. Good to choice lambs sold at $13@13.65, these about $1 lower than the city butchers as packers did not go above that price. However, they purchased quite a lot of lambs at $12.50, the bulk of grade lambs sold at $13@13.75, fair kinds $12@12.75, culls principally $9@10, poor ones $7@8. As the week progressed, buyers did not squabble about the sort, so that lots of lambs went in with the main drove that other times would have sold as culls. Most of the sheep sold at $7@7.25, but one lot of choice ones brought $7.40. Heavy ewes, plain ones sold at $4@5, choppers and bucks $2@4, canners $1@2, stockers $4.50@6.50. Not many stockers were offered.

Horses and Mules.

Under a commission offering of approximately 500 head, the horse market ruled slightly uneven at St. Louis this week, with the average about steady. There was a good supply of inferior stuff and these showed a weak undertone. The more desirable offerings, however, ruled full steady with last week's improved trend. Mules out of first hands figured better than 1500 head. As a trade was fairly active at steady to strong prices. Supplies sold to dealers out of commission alleys and also at auctions. Fat, thick-made cotton mules were, as usual, the most sought after.

WHEAT FUTURES HIGHER AT CLOSE BUT CORN IS LOWER

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—New high-price records for the season were made in every kind of grain this week. The wheat market in particular responded to enlarged speculative purchasing, based more or less on opinions that, as a result of talked-of underproduction, if nothing else, European countries would be big buyers all through the crop year.

How to Make Pine Cough Syrup at Home

Has No Equal for Prompt Results. Takes but a Moment to Prepare, and Saves You About $2.

Pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is that pine contains several elements that have a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest.

Pine cough syrups are combinations of pine and syrup. The "syrup" part is usually plain sugar syrup.

To make the best pine cough remedy that money can buy, put 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle, and fill up with homemade sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you make a full pint—more than you can buy ready-made for three times the money. It is pure, good and tastes very pleasant.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. The cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be persistently loose from the formation of phlegm. The cause is the same—inflamed membranes—and this Pinex and syrup combination will stop it—usually in 24 hours or less. Splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, hoarseness, or any ordinary throat ailment.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is famous the world over for its prompt effect upon coughs.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

REGISTRATION DAY FOR BOND VOTE TO BE SET TOMORROW

Election Commissioners to Take Action Following Approval of Ordinance by Aldermen.

The ordinance providing for a special election Feb. 9, 1923, on the proposed $88,272,500 municipal bond issue for public improvements, was signed yesterday by Acting Mayor Aloe and certified to the Board of Election Commissioners.

Twenty-one separate bond issue proposals are included in the ordinance, which was approved unanimously by the Board of Aldermen Friday afternoon.

An emergency clause in the measure made it effective upon signature. Mayor Kiel is visiting several Eastern cities, obtaining information upon public park methods, particularly the joint use of parks by white persons and negroes.

The Election Commissioners will meet tomorrow to select a day for registration of voters for the bond issue election and to make other preparations.

A date early in February was chosen for the election to prevent a conflict with other elections. It was found necessary to hold it after the Nov. 7 general election, and yet avoid interfering with the preparations by the Election Commissioners for the aldermanic election next spring.

Each of the 21 items in the bond-issue ordinance is a separate proposal and the items will be voted upon separately. A majority of two-thirds will be required to approve any item.

The largest item in the program is one of $12,000,000 for extension of the present waterworks and construction of a new plant on the Missouri River, to meet the increasing demand for water through growth of the city. These bonds will be retired from the Water Department revenue and not by taxation.

Other proposals are for street widening and paving, a Union Station plaza, electric lights for the entire city, sewer repairs and extension, the River des Peres sewer, new courthouse, municipal auditorium, new parks and playgrounds, improving present parks and playgrounds, a municipal power plant, hospital extensions, memorial plaza, Fire Department equipment, elimination of grade crossings, two Free Bridge approaches, a new Armory, an aquarium at the Zoo, and reconstruction of public markets.

Numerous Society Events Planned as Thanksgiving Draws Near

Period for Prophesied Lull Contains Formidable Array on Its Calendar—Mrs. George Chopin to Entertain Debutantes Tuesday.

WITH the approach of Thanksgiving day and its attendant festivities, forestalling by a short margin the holiday season, society's atmosphere grows more tense. After a fortnight fraught with fancy dress parties, teas, dances and whatnot for the ever-interesting debutantes, we find other members of the social world making new plans, so that the calendar during the period of the prophesied lull until the coming home of college men and women for Christmas, contains a formidable array of events.

Mrs. George Chopin of the Church road, St. Louis County, will entertain eight of the debutantes at a bridge luncheon Tuesday, at her home. The guests will be Miss Virginia Cabanne Link, Miss Mary Ryan, Miss Nano Goddard, Miss Elizabeth Grayson, Miss Jane Nugent, Miss Celeste Michel, Miss Henriette de Penaloza and Miss Clemence Adreon.

Mrs. Norman Jones, 4635 Pershing avenue, will give a luncheon party for the debutantes Thursday, Nov. 23 at 1:30 o'clock, when Misses Claire Garneau and Miss Mary Leman Sipple will share honors.

On Monday, Nov. 27, Mrs. James Van E. Barret, of 4495 West Pine boulevard, will be hostess at a tea complimenting three of the debutantes, Miss Jane Nugent, Miss Link and Miss Mabel Green Thompson. The affair will be exclusively for the season's buds, who are invited to call from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Luncheon for Recent Brides.

Mrs. Parker H. Woods of 6248 Washington boulevard and her daughter, Mrs. Randolph Lyon, will be hostesses at a bridge luncheon the afternoon of Nov. 20, complimentary to Mrs. Eugene Irwin, Mrs. Richard C. Alt and Mrs. Ray Bolin, three recent brides.

Mrs. Abbott Thomas of Kirkwood will entertain the younger set at a fancy dress party Wednesday evening, Nov. 29, for her daughter, Miss Harriette Thomas, whose birthday falls on that date. Miss Louise Clark of Jefferson City, Mo., who will visit Miss Thomas during the holidays, will share the honors of the evening. The guests will include Misses Isabelle Haley, Jane Leahy, Edith Stockton, Mary Louise Turner, Virginia Korrigan and Geraldine Turner and others, with an equal number of boys.

Tea Planned for Dec. 5.

Miss Marguerite Perry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Perry of 60 Vandeventer place, is planning a tea for Dec. 5, the details of which have not been announced.

The appearance in St. Louis of the Yale University Musical Club Wednesday evening, Jan. 3, at the Odeon, is already being discussed. The men will remain in St. Louis only a day, and arrangements are being made for one entertainment for them, the details of which will be announced later. Edward G. Hotchkiss is chairman of the Committee on Arrangements, assisted by John F. Shepley Jr.

Even the school children, whose activities as belles and beaux are still several years ahead of them, are being initiated into the world called society. Especially is this true of the pupils of Mahler's Fortnightly Dancing Club, whose mothers give dinners for them at frequent intervals. Next Friday evening Mrs. George Lockett Edwards will have such an affair for her daughter, and later the guests will attend the Fortnightly; early in December Mrs. Fred Semple is giving one for her daughter, Miss Nancy Semple, and other hostesses for the same group include Mrs. David Thompson Jr., for her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Thompson, and Mrs. Clinton Whittemore for Miss Elise Whittemore.

Last Friday night Mrs. J. Herndon Smith of 6500 Ellenwood avenue gave a dinner for her young daughter.

St. Louis Folk Traveling.

Miss Rosamond Whiteside of Hastings-on-Hudson, N. Y., and her mother, Mrs. Walker Whiteside, arrived in St. Louis Thursday evening and are guests at the Chase Hotel. They will depart for Milwaukee, Wis., in time to spend Thanksgiving day with Mr. Whiteside, the actor. Several informal parties are being planned for Miss Whiteside. Sunday, Miss Byrd Yore of Clayton, her cousin, will give a buffet supper for her, and Mr. and Mrs. Hanley Yore also will entertain for her.

Mrs. George S. Tiffany of 11 Hortense place will join her daughter, Miss Mary Christie Tiffany, in Italy, for the late winter. Miss Tiffany sailed for Europe last week with Mr. and Mrs. Howard Benoist and their family, and will attend school in Rome.

Mrs. Calvin R. Lightner of 4326 Maryland avenue, has as her guest her niece, Miss Berenice Lightner, of Roscoe, S. D. On Thursday Mrs. T. P. Conant gave a small luncheon for the visitor at the St. Louis Country Club.

Miss Emilie Maffitt of 4540 Lindell boulevard has just returned from an extended tour of Europe.

Mrs. Ralph R. Baldwin of Lawrence, Kan., is the guest for two weeks of Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Hughes of 6040 McPherson avenue.

MAYPOLE-EDWARDS AND TYLER-RYAN WEDDINGS

THE stately edifice of the New Cathedral was the scene of the wedding at noon yesterday of Miss Julia Tyler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Monroe Tyler of 4532 Westminster place, and O'Neill Ryan Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. O'Neill Ryan of 29 Windermere place. The chancel of the church was decorated with white chrysanthemums and roses, as was the Tyler home, where the reception was held. Archbishop Glennon, assisted by the Rev. Father Spencer, performed the ceremony.

The bride's gown was of ivory satin, trimmed with quantities of rare old rose point and Duchess lace. There was a bertha of the rose point about the shoulders and on the skirt drapery, and a large rose point bowknot weighted the long satin court train. The long, flowing sleeves were also of rose point. Tulle, forming the bridal veil, was held in place by a lace coronet, and the bride carried orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Carolyn Tyler attended her sister as maid of honor, and a younger sister, Miss Sara Tyler, a student at the Sacred Heart Convent at Torresdale, Pa.; Miss Grace Taylor, Miss Yvonne Merrell, Miss Eleanor Stanard and Miss Mary Carmen Ryan, sister of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids. They were gowned alike in new shade of blue chiffon velvet, made simply with a boat neck and short velvet sleeves. The skirts were draped to one side and caught with blue velvet roses. Picture hats of brown lace and satin completed the costumes, and they carried chrysanthemums in the autumnal shades of brown and yellow.

Campbell Ryan served his brother as best man, and Kimball Battin, McNair Bakewell, Claude Porter, Frank Hamilton and Willis Broadhead were groomsmen. Four hundred guests were invited to the reception. A table for the bridal party seated 20.

Mr. Ryan gave his bride a platinum bar pine set with diamonds; Mrs. Ryan presented her attendants with cut-steel slipper buckles and the groomsmen received combination

At the Art Alliance dinner at the Chase Hotel Thursday evening was a large and distinguished group of guests.

The guest of honor, W. K. Bixby, talked delightfully of his recent trip to India; of the beauty of its architecture, its scenery and its native handkerchiefs. In Africa he penetrated into the interior, where he was entertained by the world-famous African hunter, McMillan. He reached the source of the Nile River and Victoria Falls.

The Rev. Francis Mannhardt, S. J., brought to mind in a short talk the art beauties of Florence and hoped that St. Louis might also become an art center of note. Another delightful evening is promised by the Art Alliance next year, when a distinguished out-of-town speaker will be present.

Chic, Youthful Lines Easily Achieved

Slim and straight as an arrow—these are the lines of youth and style that will not be denied.

You can have these lines—have them without discomfort with the Flat-O-Form Brassiere that changes unattractive lumping of surplus flesh and gives you a figure profile of cameo-cut that can be accomplished by no other means.

The Flat-O-Form is more than an ordinary brassiere. It can be adjusted to any waistline size and gracefully flattens the diaphragm. The scientific design of the back accommodates the flesh over the shoulder blades and under the arms. The change in appearance is quite noticeable—the brassiere isn't.

Be sure and ask about this lovely garment, designed by Nature's Rival Company, at any of the stores listed below.

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.

The chapter will meet the second and fourth Tuesdays of every month at 7:30 p. m. at the Town Club.

Mrs. L. C. Jones, another directress of the society, gave a short talk on the aim of Delphian, which is to democratize learning, furnish a means by which the individual may refresh her thought in a creational way on subjects forgotten and develop creative thinking. Current topics will be discussed at each meeting.

The first regular meeting will be held Tuesday, Nov. 28, at 7:30 p. m. The topic for discussion will be "Prehistoric Periods."

The regular meeting of the Fortnightly Club of Kirkwood, M. W. C., was held at the home of Mrs. J. H. McKelvey of North Clay avenue, Nov. 16, with Mrs. C. S. G. Boe as joint hostess. Mrs. J. B. Cyton gave a report of the biennial held at Chautauqua this past summer. The paper of the day was given by Miss Clara C. Pullis, who had for her subject, "Canada Our Northern Neighbor."

Mrs. Marc Seguin of 4220 McPherson avenue, will have the next meeting on Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 28, instead of on Thursday, because of Thanksgiving day. Mrs. Robert T. Warner will then read the paper, "Influence of Weather."

Mrs. John M. Wood, 5831 Clemens avenue, entertained the members of the board of the St. Louis Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, at her home on Thursday afternoon, Nov. 9, Mrs. Henry H. Denison, regent, presiding.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the chapter will be held at Jefferson Memorial on Saturday afternoon, Nov. 25, at 2 o'clock. The chapter will take part in the Red Cross drive, and will have charge of the booth in the Merchants-Laclede Building at Fourth and Olive streets, Wednesday, Nov. 22, and throughout the week.

A meeting of M. A. E. McClure Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, was held at the home of Mrs. E. G. Spalding, 571 Maple avenue, with Mrs. E. S. Fry, Mrs. Paul Guerard and Mrs. Linn, assisting hostesses.

This was the occasion of the installation of the new officers. Under the direction of the retiring president, Mrs. W. H. Hudson, the chapter has met all the assessments to the national board and maintained a scholarship in Missouri University and still has a substantial balance in the treasury.

The officers installed were: President, Mrs. H. F. Brey; first vice president, Mrs. Thomas Towne; second vice president, Mrs. J. A. Breen; third vice president, Mrs. T. M. Young; fourth vice president, Mrs. G. K. Warner; fifth vice president, Mrs. W. P. Hawkins; secretaries, Miss Laura Phillippi and Mrs. H. O. Byrd; treasurer, Mrs. J. C. Edwards; historian, Mrs. W. Vivion; custodian, Mrs. Seawell.

Mr. Kitchen and Mr. Autry, who were delegates to the Confederate Veterans' reunion in Kansas City, brought echoes from that meeting to the Daughters. Mrs. Paul Guerard and Miss Junghaus, accompanied by Miss Nicolson, pianist, sang.

Plans are being made for the annual ball on Feb. 9. Mrs. H. S. O'Bannon was made chairman of location.

The Confederate Dames Chapter U. D. C., met at the home of Mrs. J. T. Bodigo, Monday. Assisting were Mrs. J. N. Cornatzer and Mrs. J. W. Harris. The new officers were installed. Mrs. C. B. Faris gave the report of the State conference, which was held at Moberly, Mo. Mrs. Virginia Creel, a member of the Confederate Dames Chapter, was voted as having the best paper presented at the State conference, her subject being "Missouri, the Affinity of Dixie." Mrs. Creel could not receive the medal, as she had received one on a former paper. Mrs. G. F. Bergfeld, Mrs. Robert McCulloch and Mrs. M. F. Watts were elected delegates to the general convention, which meets in Birmingham, Ala.

The Jessie L. Gaynor Choral Club will have a musical bridge party at the Algonquin Club on Tuesday, Nov. 21. Mrs. Dorothy Gaynor Blake has arranged a program which will begin at 2:30 o'clock. Applications for reservations may be made to Mrs. G. R. Graham, 120 South Rock Hill road, Webster Groves.

The Good Will Study Club, M. F. W. C., held its regular meeting Nov. 13, at the Marquette Hotel. Much of the afternoon was given over to consideration of the amendments to the by-laws. Mrs. O. W. Vossmeyer made a report of the donations received by her committee for the Isolation Hospital, and Mrs. E. H. Loffhagen of the social welfare committee told of the work at the House of Detention. Various reports of eighth district committees were READERS, NOTE: The statements below are amazing—almost incredible. Yet thousands of women right here in St. Louis have found them to be true. The much heralded clay pack has been succeeded by a more scientific, more wonderful way. Note that a home test of the Kantol Method is now obtainable at St. Louis stores. Or by mail, by using coupon below.

Is This a Miracle?
Beauty Scientists Call It That

By MARION FRANCES.

Before This girl's skin was sallow, dark, muddy. Blackheads helped make it ugly. Freckles too were noted.

The Same Girl

10 Minutes After —The same girl from actual photograph. Skin lightened at least five shades, blackheads gone, freckles reduced. "A miracle," says world's beauty experts.

The thrill of seeing your skin transformed before your own eyes in 10 minutes. How mysterious blending of certain plants and flowers, without "beauty mud" or artificial bleach, purges face pores and presto!—a skin like a baby's instantly.

Can you imagine a sallow skin, no even marred by blackheads and freckles, cleared up and left soft and white and lovely as a baby's in 10 minutes? It sounds like magic. And beauty scientists call it that.

The inventor is William P. Kahn, internationally noted beauty specialist, whose miraculous transformations have gained for him the title of "The Man Who Works Miracles in Women's Faces." So many thousands are adopting his method that it is said a woman with anything short of a flawless complexion soon will be a rarity.

The photographs above are living testimony. I saw them taken. Saw the girl before and after—a miracle in minutes!

Purges the Pores

The method of which Mr. Kahn is the discoverer is unlike any other ever perfected. Dermatological authorities say it has no parallel in the annals of beauty culture. It is a simple cream-poultice, compounded of plants and flowers, called Kantol. It affects the pores like a laxative does the bowels—cleans out the poisonous accumulations.

Containing no bleach, no harsh chemicals, no clay or "beauty mud," it purges every pore in your face within 20 minutes. You apply it like cold cream and results are unbelievable until you see them with your own eyes.

At the recent Beauty Congress dark-skinned women and girls, women with mottled, ugly skins, were brought in for the Kantol treatment. In one application their skins were lightened from four to seven shades. Blackheads were removed—every one. Freckles and fine lines disappeared as if by magic. Beauty experts from all the world stood awed before what was done, for instant beauty, an unattractive woman transformed, had become a reality.

You could see Kantol work, could see the germ-laden oil being discharged, the blackheads coming out; radiant charm taking the place of drab unattractiveness before your own eyes.

Now at St. Louis Stores

The secret preparation—Kantol—used by William P. Kahn in working these amazing skin transformations is now obtainable, for use at home, at various drug and department stores. In St. Louis at Wolf-Wilson, Judge & Dolph, Famous-Barr, Grand-Leader, Nugents, Vandervoort's and other stores. Or a supply can be obtained by mail, postpaid, for a limited time by mailing the coupon below. Send no money, but pay the postman $1.50 when he delivers it to you.

SOCIAL GOSSIP OF MISSOURIANS AT NATION'S CAPITAL

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Commander and Mrs. Richard P. Bellinger have opened their new home in Woodley, where they will spend the winter with their son, who is in his first year. Mrs. Bellinger was Miss Miriam Benoist, of St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. Dwight F. Davis again have taken the house of Mrs. Reynolds R. Hitt, at 1520 Eighteenth street, N. W., for the season. They will entertain extensively, especially for visiting fellow Missourians who have found this one of the most hospitable of the homes of Missourians in the capital.

Miss Margaret Warner, of St. Louis, was one of the out-of-town attendants at the wedding here Thursday of Miss Helen de Berri Meade, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Brown Meade, to Edward Russell Roberts.

Former Governor and Mrs. Folk of Missouri, were among those invited to While Sulphur Springs to attend the dinner given by Congressman W. Bourke Cockran and his wife in honor of her birthday. Mrs. Cockran was Miss Annie Ide, daughter of the Land Commissioner of Samoa, and at the time she was seven years old she traveled to Samoa and lost her birthday going over the line. Robert Louis Stevenson, who then lived there, consoled her by presenting her with his birthday, Nov. 13, and she always has celebrated it on that day since that time, in memory of the great author who was her childhood friend. He afterward commemorated the transfer in verses which have become well known.

Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant has been joined by her daughter, Princess Cantacuzene, who arrived in New York Tuesday from Europe, where she had been for three months. Mrs. Grant will have with her again this season Prince and Princess Cantacuzene and their two daughters, Princess Bertha Cantacuzene, who was presented to society last season, and Princess Ida Cantacuzene, who is still in school.

SUIT ATTACKS REORGANIZATION OF WAGNER ELECTRIC

Temporary Restraining Order Granted in Behalf of Stock-Owning Estates, in Receivership Action.

A temporary restraining order, returnable Dec. 8, was granted yesterday in a suit for a receiver and an injunction to prevent the reorganization of the Wagner Electric Manufacturing Co., a Missouri corporation, into a corporation under the laws of Delaware. The suit was filed by representatives of the estates of Richard C. Kerens, John J. Raleigh and Jane M. Leahy, who own about 1600 shares, or 2.7 per cent of the stock of the Missouri corporation, against the corporation and its officers and directors.

The plaintiffs allege that the reorganization, if consummated and allowed to stand, would make their stock valueless, and they seek to oust the present management of the company, recover its assets, and have the management vested in a receiver and stockholders of the Missouri corporation.

Already Reorganized, Layman Says.

W. A. Layman, president of the old and the new corporations, said the reorganization had already been effected and that the new corporation had been functioning since Aug. 11. He added that the change was duly ratified by 93 per cent of the stockholders of the Missouri corporation at a meeting Aug. 4, and that the interest of no stockholder was prejudiced.

The plaintiffs ask that the officers and directors be restrained from holding a meeting of stockholders Dec. 29, called for the purpose of voting on a plan to reduce the capital stock. Accusations of misconduct in office are made against the officers and directors of the corporation and their removal is requested so they can be replaced by stockholders interested in continuing the Missouri corporation.

Revocation of License Sought.

It also is asked that the license of the Delaware corporation to do business in Missouri be revoked by the Secretary of State and that an accounting be sued for.

The Missouri corporation had outstanding 15,000 shares of one kind of stock of a par value of $100 a share. At the beginning of this year it had assets of $11,851,606.13 and debts of $4,219,823.75. It had been in financial straits, but since last March the business has been showing a profit. At one time, December, 1920, the company owed $7,139,228.20. The company manufactures single and polyphase motors, transformers and automobile starting and ignition apparatus.

Directors of Corporations.

The directors of the Missouri corporation are John F. Lee, V. W. Bergenthal, Walter W. Smith, Guilford Duncan, W. L. Hemingway, W. A. Layman, R. L. Hedges, Julius C. Birge and James M. Buick. Those of the Delaware Corporation are V. W. Bergenthal, James M. Buick, Guilford Duncan, James H. Grover, John F. Lee, W. A. Layman, Stewart McDonald, E. J. Miller, J. Herndon Smith, Harry J. Steinbreder and Joseph W. Lewis.

The petition alleges that, early in 1920, the directors of the company anticipated a deflation in the value of inventory and proposed to market $3,500,000 of preferred stock through a New York broker at a discount of 7 per cent. This deal fell through, as did a subsequent arrangement to finance the company through G. H. Walker & Co., St. Louis brokers.

Says Inventory Was Reduced.

In 1921, the petition sets forth, certain St. Louis and New York banks and trust companies that had loaned money to the company placed representatives in the directorate. From that time, it is alleged, the inventory was reduced; money derived from the sale of products was paid on the debts to the banks, and the business was operated at a loss.

When the business began to show a profit, in March, 1922, the petition says, the banks and trust companies thereupon demanded payment of their loans, and since then the directors and representatives of the banks have conspired to transfer the assets of the company to the Delaware corporation. The charge is made that the Missouri corporation received no compensation for the assets thus transferred, and that the reorganization was made for the benefit of the obligations to the banks and trust companies, and at a loss to the stockholders.

Replying to the allegations in the suit, Layman today issued the following statement:

Substantially all the steps involved in the reorganization business were effected on Aug. 11, and the Delaware corporation is now and since Aug. 11 has been the operating company owning the business, and the old Missouri company is in effect out of business. This transfer of operations was taken by authority of a special meeting of stockholders of the company, called on due notice, held Aug. 4, at which meeting 93 per cent of the stock of the company was voted in favor of all the steps that had been proposed and taken. Included in the 93 per cent of favorable votes cast was approximately one-half of the shares now asking in the suit mentioned for a receiver. At the stockholders' meeting of Aug. 4, out of a total of 58,277 shares of stock outstanding, only 101 shares, or less than two-tenths of 1 per cent of the total capital stock, was voted against the reorganization plan adopted at that meeting. In various letters to stockholders prior to the meeting of Aug. 4, and in frequent and wide publicity in the press prior to that date, all of the details of the reorganization plan of the company were freely made known to both the stockholders and the public at large, and the overwhelming approval of the plan by the stockholders at their meeting of Aug. 4, is evidence of the soundness of the program, and that the interest of no stockholder was prejudiced by the transfers."

LEADERS OF WETS IN 30 STATES TO MEET IN ST. LOUIS

Gathering Monday to Lay Plans for Perfecting Organization in Every State and Congressional District.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Diametrically opposite interpretations are put upon the election results in statements issued here by Capt. W. H. Stayton, head of the National Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, which will hold a conference in St. Louis next Monday, and Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel and spokesman of the Anti-Saloon League.

Wheeler declares that the elections evidenced no shift in prohibition sentiment. He points out that Ohio voted against 2.75 beer by 188,000 and that California voted for a State enforcement code with a ½ of 1 per cent standard by more than 30,000. The next Senate, he says, will show a gain of at least three dry members, while in the House the wets will not be able to muster 140 votes for any "nullifying" amendment of the Volstead act.

View of Spencer Proposal.

The proposal, sponsored in Missouri by Senator Spencer, to ask for a scientific commission to determine what is intoxicating liquor is characterized by the Anti-Saloon League leader as a "flank movement" against prohibition. He declares that existing state laws are such that Congress could not legalize even 1½ per cent beer in 46 states.

"The public sentiment of the nation," Wheeler concludes, "is stronger today for the Eighteenth Amendment and the necessary legislation to enforce it than it has ever been."

On the other hand, Capt. Stayton, in a statement given out last night telling of plans for the St. Louis meeting, predicts that in 1924 both parties will put wet planks in their national platforms, thereby giving the wets the balance of power which heretofore has been held by the Anti-Saloon League.

Object of St. Louis Meeting.

At the St. Louis meeting, according to announcement, leaders of the wets in 30 states, presided over by Capt. Stayton, will take initial steps to organize the wet forces in every state and congressional district. Where both parties dodge the wet and dry issue it is the purpose of the Stayton organization to put up independent candidates.

Work already done by the association, Stayton says, was reflected in the election returns of many states and had a marked and significant effect on the attitude of the leaders of both political parties.

"No better proof," he asserts, "can be adduced than the statement attributed to President Harding that 'sentiment on prohibition enforcement has shifted.' This, of course, can be interpreted in various ways. I take it to mean that the President recognizes that the general public is disgusted with the Volstead type of bone-dry prohibition, which has proved to be an expensive and dangerous farce.

View of Election Results.

"The recent elections proved that the large law-abiding majority of our population wants a modification of the Volstead law which will permit physicians to prescribe alcohol where indicated, without unrolling miles of red tape; which will allow beverages of light alcoholic content—such beverages being preferred by many people now drinking whisky—and which will put a stop to the scandal, crime, ruin and deaths which result from the Volstead act.

"It is on the basis of such demonstrated facts as these that our plans for the future will be laid down at St. Louis. Before the election our association was new and not well organized in many states. Political candidates lacked definite assurance that wets would scratch their tickets or change their votes. Consequently many of the candidates went with what they thought would be the winning line. With the results of the elections at hand, however, nobody is any longer in doubt that a 'wet' will hereafter scratch as relentlessly as a 'dry.'

Not for Third Party.

"We have no desire to get into anything like a third party movement; we believe that the two great parties will see their way clear to settle the wet and dry question. But it must be obvious now to all that if the two existing parties will not settle it, there will have to be an independent movement that will. We propose, therefore, to be prepared in advance for such an independent movement if necessary. We do not intend to waste any time, but shall have this meeting in St. Louis, where the foundation for future growth and organization may be properly laid."

Home Face Peeling Becomes Popular

No complexion treatment yet discovered seems to have become so generally popular as the mercolized wax process. The reason evidently is that this method actually gets rid of a bad complexion, instead of merely patching it over.

To temporarily hide or bleach the defective skin, cannot compare with the effect of literally removing the skin itself. Mercolized wax takes off the offending surface skin in flour-like particles, a little at a time, until there's none of it left. The new complexion thus produced exhibits a healthy glow and girlish beauty not obtainable by the usual cosmetic methods. This remarkable wax, which you can get at your druggist's in original one-ounce package, is applied at night in the same way you use cold cream, and washed off next morning.

IT IS YOUR DEBT!

IT IS YOUR DEBT to the City of St. Louis to settle the balance of your account with the St. Louis Colored Orphans' Home.

On Sunday, Nov. 14, 1920, a campaign was started to raise funds, through popular subscription, to erect a home for homeless colored children. That the citizens readily recognized the need for a home of this kind was evinced by the fact that at the close of the campaign, Tuesday, Nov. 23, 1920, $60,000, including the $10,000 site for building given by Mr. and Mrs. Aaron E. Malone of PORO College, had been pledged.

The citizens, so far, have rallied admirably in a financial way to make good their pledges. The Orphans' Home office is proud to make the statement that its records show $10,991.43 as having been paid since January 25, 1922.

On the verge of the dedication of the building, which will be THANKSGIVING DAY, Nov. 30, when the doors will be thrown open to the public from 9 a. m. until 9 p. m., we are appealing to the big-hearted, generous people of St. Louis to give $43,000 to complete the task. NOW is the crucial time. HELP!

Mrs. Annie M. Malone, Pres.; Mrs. M. A. Hedgeman, Sec'y-Treas.; Frank L. Williams, Chairman Finance Committee; Aaron E. Malone, Treasurer Building Fund. Headquarters, PORO College, 4300 St. Ferdinand Avenue.

Do not fail those who are standing with outstretched hands and pleading! Reader, they are depending on YOU!

ST. LOUIS ARTISTS' TENTH CONTEST OPENS

179 Paintings Entered in Guild's Exhibition for Seven Prizes.

Ten years ago, the St. Louis Artists' Guild, desiring to awaken understanding an appreciation of the work of St. Louis artists among the city's citizenship at large, held its first annual competitive exhibition.

Succeeding years have been fruitful, the Guild feels, and it threw open its doors for the tenth exhibition last night, confident that in general excellence and range its exhibition need not shrink from comparison with similar exhibitions of longer existence.

179 Entered in Contests.

There are 179 paintings upon the Guild walls entered for the seven standing prizes offered by special donors, together with many exhibits of local sculptoring. The color of the canvases has been keyed up still higher than last year when modernity seemed to have taken quite secure grasp upon the St. Louis colony.

Most of the better known and older of the city's artists have entries, and recent newcomers have by their brushes assumed places of prominence.

Notable among these is Harland Frazer, 26 years old, instructor in the Art School, who first exhibited last year. This year he has a portrait of his preceptor, E. H. Wuerpel, and near it, "The Tea Ladies," a thing of neutral tones which seem to have uncanny carrying powers. Frazer, in his first year, captured the Mallinckrodt prize for portraits.

Work of Leader of Indians.

O. E. Berninghaus, leader of the Taos colony of Indian painters, has five canvases, one of which is "The Bleachers," a curious collection of Indian figures along the foul line at the ball game in Taos. Another, "Showers and Sunshine," a thing of contrasts and beguiling mountain coloring.

T. P. Barnett has "Snow and Ice," daring and full of chill, and a seashore fisher scene painted during his summer visit to Massachusetts.

Charles F. Galt has a portrait of Mrs. Wooster Lambert notable for its likeness and the brilliant green of a sweater worn by Mrs. Lambert.

Frank Nuderscher, ineligible for competition for the Chamber of Commerce prize for the best St. Louis scene, has turned to portraying theg lory of the Ozarks in several landscapes. However, he could not resist the temptation to return to industrial subjects, and his "The Building of the Bridge" has much the same power that he gave his recent mural for the capitol in Jefferson City.

Two Portraits by Newcomer.

Scott MacNutt, a newcomer, showing for the first time in the Guild exhibition, has two portraits conspicuous for their color contrasts.

Kathryn Cherry's "Told With Flowers" perhaps touches the highest key in the exhibition, a riotous mass of blooms of vivid tones. Mildred Bailey Carpenter has nine of her individualistic illustrations with their fine filigree borders, and her husband, F. C. Carpenter, has "Painter to the King," teeming with Oriental warmth and passion.

The jury has not been selected and the works will be on view for at least two weeks before awards will be made known.

LONDON SOCIETY LEADERS SELL CLOTHES TO 'NEW POOR'

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—A few wealthy leaders of London society recently met to consider means of helping their "new poor" sisters when making room in their wardrobes for the dresses which it was essential they should buy if they were to maintain their reputations for never appearing in public in the same dresses more than half a dozen times.

The outcome was a decision to hold a series of sales in their various houses to which they were to send hats, frocks, gloves and shoes they no longer required. These were to be marked at a very low price, with no indication of the names of their previous owners. Only personal friends of the organizers were to be invited to the sale.

Two such sales have been held. All the afternoon a trimly dressed parlor maid was kept busy opening the front door of a well-known house in Mayfair to a continuous stream of eager purchasers. Inside were some 50 or 60 women rummaging among a marvelous collection of models scattered somewhat haphazard on every available piece of furniture.

Couple Celebrate Golden Jubilee.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene C. Thake recently celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at their home, 3814A Greer avenue. About 30 guests were present. The Thakes, who are natives of Germany, were married in St. Louis in 1872. Mrs. Thake was formerly Miss Johanna Vassler. They have three children and four grandchildren.

His "Acute Indigestion" Was Bad Case of Gall Sac Trouble

The "human spider" who climbs the sides of tall buildings has nothing on the person who prescribes his own medicine—that is, as far as taking risks is concerned.

We heard of a man who thought he had "acute indigestion," which, by the way, is an empty name in many instances. This man took a number of things "recommended" by friends who had been "helped in an awful stomach ache."

When all the time he was suffering—and suffering is the right word—from a bad gall sac condition. He found it out when he called the man he should have called first—the doctor.

You take chances in other things, too, when you try to figure out what is wrong.

Our only interest in the matter is to see that the prescription—which the doctor writes—is filled correctly.

PLEA FOR UNITY OF LUMBER INTERESTS

Wholesale Body's Attorney Declares This Would End Chaos in Industry.

Joseph E. Davies, formerly chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, attorney for the American Wholesale Lumber Association, told a group of St. Louis lumbermen Friday that the key to the solution of what he termed the industry's chaotic condition was a federation of the three major interests in the distribution of lumber in America.

In his address, delivered at a luncheon given by the St. Louis organization of the wholesale association and attended by several retail lumber dealers also, Davies told of the work done by the association during the war, when, he said, the wholesaler in the lumber industry was "on trial for his life."

Davies pointed out that he did not favor a monopoly in any way, stating that such a condition would invite Government control of the industry. "The worst thing we could have would be an attempt at a monopoly," he told them. "But what I suggest is a federation of the manufacturer, the wholesaler and the retailer, to gain co-operation in solving the industry's great problems.

"Serve Public as Well."

"There are great problems which require the greatest ability and all the unified strength of the industry, if their solution is to be brought about in a manner to preserve the best interest of the industry itself and conserve the interest of the public as well," he continued.

"It is highly desirable from every point of view that each branch, through association activities, should keep its own house in order. There is, however, great and urgent need that the lumber industry should provide a great central organization adequately financed and thoroughly representative of all branches of the industry.

"The great problems of the industry are not problems alone for the manufacturer, or the wholesaler or the retailer. They are problems common to all and vital to each."

Conservation Question.

Davies then took up the problems of conservation, competition in the industry, standardization of products and inspection and arbitration, giving examples where each of these difficulties was relevant to all three branches of the industry.

"Consider conservation," he said. "With our forests rapidly disappearing, is not the formulation of a constructive conservation policy as much the concern of the wholesaler and retailer, whose business it is to deal in lumber, as it is the manufacturer who mills it?

"All these problems," he summed up, "are problems for joint solution and action. The key to the success of such a federation is the character and integrity of the men who sponsor such an organization. Such a federation must command the biggest minds in the industry. In such a manner, there would be the elimination of effort and waste, and many other savings of value to public interest."

DENVER AUTO IMPOUNDING ORDINANCE REDUCES ACCIDENTS

Mid-West Claim Agents Told of Effect of Law Passed in That City Last Year.

A Denver ordinance impounding automobiles for 90 days for repeated traffic offenses has reduced the number of automobile collisions 25 per cent, said S. G. Shaw of the Denver Tramway Co., in an address yesterday at the convention of the Mid-West Claim Agents' Association, an organization of street and interurban railway claim agents, at the Jefferson Hotel.

The ordinance provides that a driver on the first offense may be fined and prohibited from driving in the city for six months, and on the second his car is impounded and he is sentenced to jail for 10 to 90 days, without the option of paying a fine. It went into effect in September of last year.

C. B. Harding of the United Railways of St. Louis, discussing the comparative safety of folding doors and steps for street cars, said that accidents did not decrease when this type door replaced the old open step on St. Louis cars. Since the new type of car with the stationary step inside the door was adopted two and a half years ago on the Grand boulevard line, he said, the company has not lost a suit on step accidents on that line and has paid out less than $1000 in settlements.

He said that many accidents occur when passengers try to get on or off the old type step and it is not entirely flat, but the only trouble with the stationary step is in educating passengers to avoid falling into the "well" the step makes just inside the doors. "It certainly takes the wind out of a claimant's sails when he says, 'Why, the conductor didn't have the step down,' to show him a picture of the car and tell him the step couldn't possibly be anything but down," he said.

CHARGED WITH EMBEZZLING $2100 OF GOVERNMENT FUNDS

Federal Capias Issued for Arrest of Henry Deninga, Former Postmaster at East Carondelet, Ill.

Henry Deninga, 42 years old, for 10 years postmaster at East Carondelet, Ill., was arrested Friday on a capias from the Federal Court, having been indicted by the grand jury a few days ago on a charge of embezzling $2100 of Government funds when serving as postmaster.

Postoffice Inspector Hitchcock makes the charge against Deninga. The inspector reports that when he checked Deninga's accounts on Aug. 28 last, Deninga was $2100 short in the records. Deninga was relieved of his duties as postmaster.

Deninga uses crutches in getting about. He says he does not know how he came to be short in his accounts. He has a wife and child.

Careful Mothers!---Use Mentho-Laxene

A thoughtful nurse writes: "Almost magical results are secured in acute and stubborn Coughs and Colds.

"The very first dose tends to stop the sneezing and snuffling, check the 'tickle' or spasm that causes severe coughing, loosen the catarrhal phlegm, and stop the 'running' secretions of nostrils and eyes.

"You actually feel its soothing, penetrating, healing action on the membranes of the nostrils, throat and air passages; yet it positively contains no opiates, narcotics or chloroform!

"A tight cough quickly loosens, the phlegm is readily expelled, and further secretions checked. Catarrh of the head is halted, the breathing becomes natural, the feverishness is allayed while the entire system gets the full benefit of the healing, anti-spasmodic laxative and tonic action of Mentho-Laxene. Truly it is a marvel and there is no other like it."

Mentho-Laxene is very inexpensive—costs less than ½-cent a dose. It can be taken in doses of 5 to 10 drops—or mixed with simple sugar syrup, making a full pint when a teaspoonful is a dose. Delicious flavor. Children take it gladly. May be given to infants, it is so pure and good. Relieves coughing in bronchial asthma—bronchitis, spasmodic croup and whooping cough, too. Millions of bottles have been used in the past 12 years. The "best ever sold for cough and cold." Leading druggists sell it, or direct by mail on receipt of price, 75 cents. Send 5 cents stamps for trial bottle and 1923 Almanac free. Add, Blackburn Product Co., Dept. N. P., Dayton.

LAWYER CAPTURES ONE BURGLAR, ONE ESCAPES

Surprises Men in Home and Recovers $800 in Jewelry; $1200 Ring Missing.

E. C. Zully, 1628 North Twenty-fifth street, East St. Louis, an attorney, surprised two burglars ransacking his house when he entered it through the back door at 1:30 p. m. yesterday. He captured one of them after a chase of three blocks and recovered jewelry which he valued at $800. The other burglar got away with a diamond ring valued by Zully at $1200. The thief ran through the back yard and vaulted a fence while Zully was chasing the first burglar through the front part of the house.

The prisoner told the police that he was Lee Horn, 33 years old, of 924 Theresa avenue, St. Louis, and that he was released from the Missouri penitentiary in July after having served a term for theft of whisky in Kansas City. He said he did not know his companion in the burglary.

"I met him downtown this morning," said Horn, "and he suggested that we rob a residence. He had a skeleton key and when we reached the Zully home he opened the front door without any trouble. He seemed to know the lay of the place because he went directly to a room where the jewelry was.

"When Zully came in the back way the fellow with me slipped some jewelry into my pocket and told me to beat it. I ran out the front way and Zully took after me."

HANDCUFFED AND WITHOUT FOOD IN 39-HOUR FLIGHT

Convict, Who Escaped From Train on Way to Prison, Caught Here, Tells of His Experiences.

MADE ESCAPE WHEN SHERIFF FELL ASLEEP

Roy H. Kuehling, Former Government Clerk, Denies Shooting Wife for Which He Was Convicted in Cedar County.

Details of his 39-hour flight half way across Missouri while handcuffed and without food, after escaping from authorities by jumping from a moving passenger train, were related to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday by Roy H. Kuehling, 29 years old, of Washington, D. C., formerly a Government clerk, actor and horse race follower, in a cell at Police Headquarters here.

Kuehling had remained at liberty for two days and a night and traveled about 200 miles under handicap of the handcuffs. He was arrested in front of 8449 North Broadway at 5:45 p. m. Friday within a few minutes after he had freed himself from the manacles and before he had walked three blocks.

Over Caution Caused Arrest.

An overdose of caution caused the arrest. After removing the handcuffs in a vacant lot in the 8700 block on North Broadway, Kuehling, instead of leaving them in the lot, had walked to a corner and thrown them in a sewer. His act was observed and reported to a policeman who had previously learned that a man apparently handcuffed had purchased a steel saw from Louis Bircher, proprietor of a hardware store at 8300 North Broadway.

Kuehling escaped from Sheriff Charles T. Church of Cedar County, between 2 and 3 a. m. Thursday morning, by jumping from a train near Pilot Grove, in Cooper County. Kuehling said the Sheriff was asleep and snoring at the time.

The prisoner was being taken to Jefferson City to serve a five-year penitentiary sentence imposed at Stockton, Cedar County, Wednesday evening after a Circuit Court jury had found Kuehling guilty of shooting his wife Sept. 22, at the home of her parents, nine miles north of Eldorado Springs, in Cedar County.

"What else could I do?" Kuehling questioned, when asked why he had sought to escape. "The Sheriff had been sleeping soundly for about 15 minutes; in fact, he was snoring. I couldn't think of anything else to do except get off the train. I walked down the aisle, opened the door and dropped off. The train wasn't going very fast and aside from a bruised ankle and a bump on the head I wasn't hurt.

Walked Until Daylight.

"I started walking in the opposite direction from which the train was going and walked until daylight. Then I found a field in the corner of which there was a thick clump of weeds. I hid in those weeds all day.

"When it became dark I returned to the railroad track and walked until I came to a water tank. I haven't any idea what the name of the place was.

"A freight train stopped for water at the tank in a short time and I climbed into a coal car, throwing out enough coal from one end of the car to enable me to crouch down below the sides of the car. It was a pretty hard job with the handcuffs on. My principal idea was to protect myself from the wind.

"I had no idea in which direction the train was going, but I knew it was on the way to some place. I remained in the coal car the rest of that night and all day yesterday. About dusk last night I saw many lights and knew we were near some large town. When the train stopped I got out of the car and started walking. Soon I came to what appeared to be a residential section. It had been a long time since I had anything to eat and I was hungry. I had about $6 in my pocket, but I knew it would be dangerous to get food while wearing the handcuffs, so I went to the hardware store, where I bought a steel saw for 15 cents.

Removes Cuffs With Saw.

"Then I went to a vacant lot and sawed off the handcuffs. There was enough play in them to let me use my hands. First I separated the cuffs and then sawed each cuff from my wrists. I guess that took about 15 or 30 minutes. Then I threw the saw and the handcuffs in the sewer and had started in search of food when the officer got me."

Kuehling was being taken to the penitentiary immediately after sentence had been passed because Cedar County authorities considered him a dangerous prisoner. They declare that he had twice attempted to saw his way out of the Cedar County jail and that he had boasted that he would never be taken to Jefferson City alive.

"Oh, I did get mixed up in an attempted jail delivery in Cedar County," he said yesterday. "Some of the boys in the jail were sawing their way out and I helped them just a little, but I didn't try to escape." He denied boasting that he would not be taken to the penitentiary alive.

Kuehling is about five feet five inches tall, of slight build, wears a diminutive mustache and talks and acts in a mild, quiet manner. He readily discussed his escape and subsequent capture and with equal freedom told of his arrest in September, 1920, during an investigation of the death by drowning of his first wife after a canoe in which they were riding overturned in the Potomac River. He was exonerated by both the coroner's jury and a grand jury, he said.

Former Government Clerk.

Kuehling said he met his second wife, who was Miss Kathleen Whitsell, while both were employed as Government clerks in Washington. They were married about a year ago. While in Washington Kuehling said he had taken a correspondence course in dramatics and that he was on the road with a stock company for a short time playing juvenile parts. He said that he had won considerable money betting on horse races, during the past year.

He and his wife went to the home of her parents last July, he said, to determine whether or not she should undergo an operation. Kuehling said he protested against the operation, which his wife wished performed and that her parents also advised the operation. The matter was still being debated when the shooting occurred.

"I had arisen early one morning to get a drink and my wife shot herself as I went out the door," Kuehling said. "I'd heard of lynchings and I knew her father didn't like me, so I hid in the barn until they found and arrested me. At that time my wife said I shot her because I was jealous. She recovered and testified at the trial that I shot her because she refused to give me money. Her entire family testified against me and, of course, what I said didn't count much."

Kuehling is being held for Sheriff Church, who discovered the prisoners' absence a short time after the escape and left the train at Boonville. He organized a posse,

Nothing is further from the truth, as there is no expression so painful to behold as that of someone squinting and peering and blinking in an effort to see.

Indulge your vanity as much as you please—but never neglect your eyes! If you have headaches, or other annoying symptoms, that may indicate defective vision, have me test your eyes at once.

'Lightnin'," More Than Four Years Old, Will Arrive Here Tonight

Thomas Jefferson and Bessie Bacon Head Cast of Famous Comedy—Pauline Frederick in "The Guilty One."

AT last the most popular success in the history of the American stage—the comedy "Lightnin'," which Frank Bacon carried about in his pocket for 10 years without inducing a manager to touch it, which broke all American records by running 1291 performances at the Gaiety Theater in New York and is in its sixteenth month at the Blackstone in Chicago—at last, after more than four years, "Lightnin'" will arrive in St. Louis tonight, at the American Theater.

As a counter-attraction, the Shubert-Jefferson announces Miss Pauline Frederick for a week's engagement, beginning tonight, in a new emotional drama, "The Guilty One," by Michael Morton and Peter Traill. This is one of the rare plays which St. Louis will see ahead of New York. It has been shown previously only in Chicago and Philadelphia, and marks Miss Frederick's return to the speaking stage after four years or so in the movies.

The original company, now in Chicago and leaving next month for Boston, will not be seen here. Instead, a cast has been organized with Thomas Jefferson, son of Joseph Jefferson, in the role of that delectable vagabond and tippler, "Lightnin'" Bill Jones, who was impersonated with so much grace, pathos and humor by Bacon himself.

Author's Daughter in Cast.

INSTEAD of the St. Louis actress, Miss Jane Oaker, who played the vaudeville actress during the divorce court scene in the original company, St. Louis will see Miss Bessie Bacon, daughter of the author. Others in the cast include Ida St. Leon, Charles E. Evans, Robert Keith, Walter Dickinson, Felix Haney, Harry Maitland, Mart E. Heisey, Grace Henderson, Harry Buchanan, Walter Dwart, Johnnie Le Fevre, Eugene Ross, Helena Shipman, Grace Chaplin, Genevieve Michaels, Marguerite Miller and Eva Nelson.

Bacon built his comedy on two vaudeville sketches, one about a G. A. R. veteran and the other concerning a divorce scene in Reno, which he, his wife and daughter acted for years at variety houses on the Pacific Coast. Thus every line was tested and tried until it became sure-fire. Winchell Smith was the adaptor who saw the possibilities of the sketch and rewrote it; John Golden was the manager who, after a decade, brought it upon the stage.

Prior to "Lightnin'," the American record for longevity on the stage was held by Charles K. Hoyt's farce, "A Trip to Chinatown," which ran 657 performances in New York. This record has now been broken not only by "Lightnin'," but by "The Bat," "The First Year," "The Gold Diggers" and "Irene."

The Comedy's Plot.

ACCORDING to the story, the wife and adopted daughter of "Lightnin' Bill"—so named because of his fabulous reluctance to move—run a hotel on the State line between California and Nevada. The line runs through the lobby, and on the Nevada side is a colony of women there establishing legal residence for purposes of divorce.

Bill is beset by a fraudulent lawyer, and by his own wife, who sues him for divorce after he refuses to sign a paper deeding away the hotel. He learns about it for the first time when he appears in court as a witness in a timber suit. In the meantime there is a scene of hilarious action in which an attractive variety actress testifies in her own divorce suit, and is promptly married by the judge as soon as he gives her a decree. Needless to say, Bill foils the swindling lawyer and earns his wife's forgiveness, but declines to reform his ways in the slightest degree. The character of "Lightnin'" has often been compared to that of Rip Van Winkle.

Miss Frederick's Career.

LITTLE information is forthcoming concerning the plot of "The Guilty One," save that it is of strong romantic character, permitting Miss Frederick excellent opportunities for dramatic expression. It comes here after an engagement of three months in Chicago. Miss Frederick began her career as a singer and had the prima donna role in the touring company of "It Happened in Nordland." Her first dramatic appearance was in the "Little Gray Lady;" then she was leading woman to Francis Wilson in "When Knights Were Bold," and to William Gillette in "Samson." Her first starring adventure was in "The Fourth Estate," by Melville Patterson.

As a highly successful cinema actress, Miss Frederick has been featured in such productions as "Zaza," "Madame Donna," "The Spider," "Audrey," "The Woman in the Case," "The Slave Market," "Sappho," "La Tosca," "Mrs. Dane's Defense" and "Madame Sans-Gêne." Her supporting company in "The Guilty One" promises to be unusually well. It includes Charles Dalton, seen here as leading man to Mrs. Fiske; Charles Waldron, Noel Tearle, Henry Warwick, Ethel Intropodi and Florence Edney.

The Shubert-Jefferson's announcement for a week's engagement, beginning tonight, in a new emotional drama, "The Guilty One," by Michael Morton and Peter Traill. This is one of the rare plays which St. Louis will see ahead of New York. It has been shown previously only in Chicago and Philadelphia, and marks Miss Frederick's return to the speaking stage after four years or so in the movies.

Zoe Akins' Latest Play Journeys to Broadway

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.

THE latest play by Zoe Akins, which was tried out in Chicago under the name of "Greatness" and then withdrawn for revision, will have its first New York production Monday night at the Empire, with a new title, "The Texas Nightingale." Jobyna Howland is the featured member of a cast including Cyril Knightly, Percy Helton, Perce Benton, Georges Renavant, Beth Varden and Lizzie McCall.

The only other new opening scheduled for next week is A. A. Milne's "The Lucky One," which the Theater Guild will produce Monday night at the Garrick. In the company are Violet Heming, Dennis King, Helen Westley, Percy Waram, Harry Ashford, Romney Brent and others. The direction is by Theodore Komisarjevski and the settings are by Lee Simonson.

Mme. Cecile Sorel of the Comedie Francaise begins her second week in French repertory with "Camille," Monday evening at the Thirty-ninth Street Theater.

Jane Cowl May Play Judith.

THE first American performance of "The Wheel of Life" occurred Monday night in Atlantic City, with Elsie Ferguson as star. It is to reach New York on Nov. 27. . . . Avery Hopwood paid an income tax of $92,000 last year. . . . In the new play for Will Rogers, Booth Tarkington will set the comedian in Oil-bearing Oklahoma.

To Miss Jane Cowl has been offered the part of the heroine of Henri Bernstein's "Judith," which was acclaimed last month in Paris beyond any other French piece since "Chantecler," and which is sooner or later to be produced in this country. . . . Current report is that James Reynolds has definitely succeeded Joseph Urban as designer of scenery and costumes for Ziegfeld's "Follies."

Extensive alterations were necessary at the Globe Theater in preparation for "The Bunch and Judy," which will be presented Monday night. A portion of the apron was

Masefield's Drama of a Wraith's Vengeance

LONDON, Nov. 10.

A PLAY in a book is a good deal less than a new play. We can never tell what it is really worth until we see it on the stage. It is, however, a happy augury if, while we are reading it, we are fidgeting to hear and see it; to wonder how this or that scene would "come off." John Masefield's new drama, says a reviewer in the Times, gives us this feeling in an intense degree, but also raises a definite doubt. For "Mello-

New Rivoli Opens With "The Storm" and Delmonte Has "Sure Fire Flint" With Johnny Hines in Leading Role.

ANOTHER of Ernest Lubitsch's spectacular productions, "The Loves of Pharaoh," is the leading attraction of the week at the Missouri Theater. The scenic massiveness of this photoplay has been widely exploited. Its crowd scenes are said to surpass in magnitude anything ever attempted. Settings to represent an entire Egyptian city were constructed especially for this picture.

Though the spectacular features are prominent, it has been said that they do not dwarf the story, which turns about the love of Pharaoh Amenes for a slave girl. It is said that there are many novelties in settings and lighting effects and that sweeping masses of men before imposing architectural backgrounds give impressions of the grandeur of ancient Egypt.

The week's attraction at the New Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol theaters is Mae Murray, in "Broadway Rose." Miss Murray is cast as Rosalie, a dancer, who marries Hugh Thompson, the weakling son of a wealthy family. This marriage is kept secret, a circumstance which causes complications, especially when the vascillating husband permits his engagement to another girl to be announced by his family. The play is said to give the star many opportunities to wear striking gowns and to dance.

"Under Two Flags," a Universal-Jewel production with Priscilla Dean in the leading role, is the feature at the Liberty Theater. It is a film version of Ouida's famous novel of the same title.

The story is laid in Algeria and has to do with a French-Arab girl who loves Victor, a French soldier, and goes with him to war. She repulses the love of an Arab sheik who, in revenge, tries to massacre the French regiment and capture her for his harem. In the cast are James Kirkwood, John Davidson and Stuart Holmes.

The Delmonte's leading attraction for the week is "Sure-Fire Flint," with Johnny Hines, of "Torchy" fame, in the leading role of a young man who has a brisk and strenuous

Samaroff Appears With Symphony This Week

THE third regular program of the Symphony Orchestra, which Director Ganz presents at the Odeon on Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, will have as soloist no less an artist than Mme. Olga Samaroff, pianist, native St. Louisan and wife of Leopold Stokowski, director of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra. She will play Schumann's Concerto for Pianoforte in A Minor, Op. 54, which has the following movements: I. Allegro affetuoso; II. Intermezzo, Andantino grazioso; and III. Allegro vivace.

There are no novelties this week on the orchestral program, which will consist of Georg Schumann's Overture, "Liebesfruehling"; Haydn's Symphony in B-flat Major, "La Reine de France"; the tone-poem of Richard Strauss, "Tod und Verklaerung"; and the Prelude to Wagner's "Die Meistersinger."

At today's popular concert, at the Odeon, Stanley Sicher, boy pianist, will make his second appearance as soloist, playing Weber's "Concertstueck." The orchestra's pieces will be the overture to Massenet's "Phedre," the first movement of Beethoven's Seventh Symphony, Godard's Adagio pathetique, Grieg's "Dance of the Dwarfs," "Sinding's "Rustle of Spring" and the waltz, "Artist's Life," by Johann Strauss.

A "Brahms" Concert.

A CONCERT of unusual features will be given Friday night by the Liederkranz Club Chorus in commemoration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the death of Johannes Brahms. According to the director, Hugo Anschuetz, several of the pieces have never before been given in this city.

The opening work will be Schubert's "Nachtgesang im Walde," for male chorus and a quartet of French horns. Then will come three airs written by Brahms for women's voices, harp and French horns—"I Hear a Harp," "Greetings" and a song from Ossian's "Fingal." The male chorus, capella, will give "In Silent Night" and "Mein Maedel Hat Einen Rosenmund," both by Brahms. Mme. Ida Delledonne will have a harp solo. The mixed chorus will sing Brahms' "Wiegenlied," without accompaniment, and his "Song of Destiny," with Miss Clara Meyer at the piano. The program will conclude with Goldmark's "Fruehlingsnetz," for male voices and French horn quartet.

Male Chorus From Germany.

THE South-German Male Chorus of Baden, Germany, a triple quartet, which is touring America, under the direction of Heinz Froechlich, will give two concerts, on Wednesday evening and next Sunday afternoon, at the Eagle Auditorium, Jefferson and Lafayette avenues.

Concerts announced during this month are those of Edythe Marmion Brosius, harpist, at the St. Louis University Auditorium, Nov. 27; Marguerite Volavy, Bohemian pianist, in joint recital with Blanche Da Costa, soprano, at the Sheldon Auditorium, Nov. 28; and Mme. Emma Calve, contralto, on Thanksgiving night, at the Odeon. Ruth St. Denis and the Denishawn dancers will appear at the Odeon on the night of Dec. 2.

The vesper musical services at the Second Baptist Church will resume at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon, and continue on the third Sunday of each month until March 18. The programs will be given by P. G. Anton, 'cellist, and Arthur Lieber, organist.

PROTRACTED RAINS IN AUSTRIA

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

VIENNA, Nov. 1.—Six weeks of steady rains, broken by but few dry days, have wrought great damage throughout Austria.

The tower of the village church in Tauf Kirchen, Upper Austria, collapsed this week, killing two persons and injuring several others. Salzburg Cathedral, containing the famous Rupert Chapel, is so badly damaged that public subscriptions have been opened for a repair fund. In Vienna hundreds of buildings are reported as seriously damaged by the continued downpour. In this city construction almost universally is of brick faced with about an inch of plaster, ruled to imitate stone. Everywhere this plaster covering is peeling, exposing the brick, and if frost should come before the buildings get dry, very heavy damages are predicted. The situation is aggravated by the fact that there has been virtually no repair work done since the first year of the war.

COFFEE ROASTERS' CONVENTION

Delegations from St. Louis and Kansas City will leave here on a special train today for the twelfth annual convention of the National Coffee Roasters' Association, in New Orleans. Twenty-two coffee merchants of this city and 16 from Kansas City expect to make the trip.

MASEFIELD DRAMA OF A WRATH'S VENGEANCE

ney Holtspur" (Heinemann) is a play of ghosts, and ghosts are so seldom convincing in the theater.

It is enough here and now to say that if the ghosts which haunt the paneled room of the Holtspurs became incongruous on the stage it would not be Mr. Masefield's fault. He has brought into being an imaginative plane upon which they consort quite naturally with the poor mortals whose lives they cruelly entangle. He has done this by a strict simplicity, weaving a plain spell by the gossip of old servants about suits of armor with voices and portraits that cannot be held to their frames, and the "clop, clep, clop, clep" of the Rider who brings the message of death at midnight up the drive.

When Kezia and Bethia have done their murmuring, have told you something of the tragedy of lovely Miss Melloney Holtspur, and gone their ways, you are no more surprised to hear the figure of Sir Tirrold Holtspur cry through its vizor, "Another day is dead!" than you are in "Bleak House" to hear from Lady Dedlock's bedroom the ghostly step that limps along the terrace. You are ready. Every shadow may now be a wraith, every rustle a whisper, for this house is all astir with weeping memories.

Genius With a Devil.

POTENT witchcraft all this, but witchcraft alone will never stick fast in memory. If Melloney Holtspur were just a figure in white wringing her hands on a moonlit floor, no one would trouble much about her. An old room, interrogated by a sorcerer like Mr. Masefield, can give you back not only moaning shadows, but the daylight of its past. It can show you Melloney in the splendor of her girlhood, and her lover, Lonny Copshrews, the painter of these sinister portraits on the wall—Lonny, savage and dissolute, a genius with a devil tearing his vitals.

Melloney is not one of those who will be warned, for her nature is to give. She gives her large heart to this tainted lover and he rewards her as he promised with the bitter stroke that turns a maiden to a ghost.

To a ghost we can well believe, but we are puzzled to find Melloney a vindictive ghost. We feel as if in the sunlit scene out of her past Mr. Masefield had shown her too clearly to make it credible that she should turn to spitefulness—seeking revenge upon her wronger's daughter, Lenda Copshrews, wailing aloud that the girl shall never marry Bunny Mento, the heir of the Holtspur's through his mother, Melloney's sister.

LONNY, no doubt, has earned it, to stand by and watch while Lady Mento refuses to let her son wed the daughter of an evil liver and suspected thief of the Holtspur jewels, but it is hard to believe that Melloney could find joy in it. Smaller still she makes herself when she tempts a little girl in the house (one of a group of delightfully drawn children) to burn Lonny's pictures. That she is placated at last—as we know she must be—is no surprise. What surprises us is that she takes so long to melt.

"This house is an evil old coffin, full of dead," cries Bunny, oppressed by the hatreds of his elders. But there is forgiveness at last among the ghosts, even among the country girls whom Lonny lightly ruined. Even bitter old Kezia resigns at last her rancour against the man in whom she has come to see but "one of the broken panes that God's light shines through." And the last cry of the Man in Armour is one of triumph. "Another death is dead!"

Would Not Marry With Stomach Trouble

Miss Livly States Simple Intestinal Antiseptic Put Her in Condition for Life's Duties

"I could not eat anything at all and have suffered a great deal from stomach trouble. Since I have been taking Adlerika (Intestinal antiseptic) it has done wonders for me. I can now eat three meals a day and anything that I want, and also sleep well, and am ready to get married." (Signed) Miss Carrie Livly.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders and occasional constipation, one spoonful on the stomach and one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS relieves. A longer treatment, however, necessary in cases of chronic constipation and long standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of physician.

Reports From Physicians.

"I congratulate you on the product. I had from Adlerika, since I prescribe it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langdon.

"I have found nothing in my 30 years practice to equal Adlerika." Dr. James Weaver.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel disorders. Some require only one dose." Dr. F. M. Prettyman.

"After taking Adlerika one day I passed from my system." Dr. Puckett.

Adlerika is a concentrated remedy. People who have used only simple laxatives and stomach medicines, or even mineral waters, are simply astonished at its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Sold in St. Louis by Weber Bros. DRUG CO., 7TH AND OLIVE STS., and other leading druggists.

What They Are Doing in the Movie Studios

Erich von Stroheim of the Universal Film Co. had completed "Foolish Wives" when he was immediately put to the task of directing "Merry-Go-Round," another film spectacle. He was half through with this effort when the directing head of the Universal discharged him.

Mary Carr first played a mother part in "Over the Hill."

Blanche Sweet, a star of five years ago, and now the wife of Marshall Neilan, is starring again in "Quincy Adams Sawyer."

Ethel Clayton's contract calls for her to make motion pictures on a co-operative basis. Her first picture under this unique arrangement is "If I Were Queen."

Elliott Dexter is going in for German police dogs. In a recent trip to Europe he bought six dogs, to which he intends to devote all his spare time, he says.

Sessue Hayakawa has returned from Japan, which sets aside all reports that the Japanese Government had forbidden his leaving that country due to his spy roles, in which he is charged with placing the Japanese people in an undesirable light. He is now in New York City planning to go on the legitimate stage.

Q. What is one of the principal reasons for producing Kate Douglas Wiggins' "Timothy's Quest?" A. A group of Maine capitalists have decided to perpetuate in the films the works of Maine authors wherein the characters are Maine people who move against a background of Maine's scenery. Hence the filming of "Timothy's Quest" by Kate Douglas Wiggins, a Maine writer.

"Originality is what directing nowadays lacks," says George Fawcett. "If the modern director wants a laugh, he gets out his little book and says, 'Sennett used this in "Molly-O" and it got a great laugh: I'll twist it a bit and use it, too.' Or if he wants a thrill he'll order the old sawmill set or the railroad tracks at midnight. He depends too much on all the sure fire stuff that's passed out. He doesn't use any initiative."

What I Have Learned in 47 Years Practice

I HAVE been watching the results of constipation for 47 years, since I began the practice of medicine back in 1875. I am now 83 years old, and though from time to time the medical profession makes some wonderfully interesting experiments and tests, the fundamentals of causes and relief in this particular ailment are unchanged.

But the people take greater interest today in their health, in diet, exercise and the drinking of water. Constipation, however, will occur from time to time no matter how one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. I believe in getting as close to nature as possible, hence my remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It is made of Egyptian senna and pepsin with agreeable aromatics. Children will not willingly take bitter things. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written me to that effect.

Over 10 million bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are now sold every year, and it is the most widely bought family laxative in the world. I say family laxative because all in the family can use it with safety. It is mild enough for the infant in arms, effective in the most chronic constipation of an adult. The formula is on every package.

Recently there has been a new wave of drastic physics. Calomel, a mercurial that salivates and loosens teeth, has been revived; salt waters and powders that draw needed constituents from the blood; coal tar disguised in candy form that causes skin eruptions. In a practice of 47 years I have never seen any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping, and without shock to the system.

Keep free from constipation! It lowers your strength 28 per cent, hardens the arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope but go to a druggist and get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a generous-size bottle. Take a teaspoonful that night and by morning you will be well. The cost is only about a cent a dose. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, piles, indigestion, loss of appetite or sleep, and to break up fevers and colds. Always have a bottle in the house, and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

I REPEAT MY FREE OFFER

$10,000 worth of trial bottles of Syrup Pepsin free

Last year I agreed to spend $10,000 cash for free samples of my Syrup Pepsin, and send them free and postage paid to all who asked. A tremendous mail was the result. But there must be many who did not write. I would like to get their address this time. So I now renew my offer, in remembrance of my approaching 84th birthday, and will again devote $10,000 to free samples. I am anxious to see one in every American home. Write for yours today. Simply give me your address. Send it to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Mine is truly a free gift; it costs the public nothing.

Assert Hamlet Was Bigamist, Plug-Ugly

HELSINGOER, Denmark, Nov. 13.

THE younger critics probably have no use for "Hamlet," but the older fellows like Brander Matthews and myself have always been for him. I agree with the youth who said to Harvey O'Higgins in the washroom after the second act, "Say, isn't this Hamlet great? It isn't the words so much as the music, but still it's great."

I never knew how good "Hamlet" was until I read it. Unless you read Shakspeare it is very easy to be bored with him, and I shouldn't have read him if I hadn't been given a class in English literature at Hull House, Miss Addams' social settlement in Chicago.

My class were mainly Russian Jewesses, fine, serious girls with big brown eyes and infinite patience. There were 11 of us in the class when we began, but after two months of Shakspeare and myself the class had refined itself down to two. I made a mistake about that class. I prepared each time for two or three hours. I hunted down odd-looking words to the pliocene period. I paused over each syllable like a mine prospector with a chunk of quartz.

We spent about 40 minutes over each page, or I did, while the two steadfast pupils kept dogwatches. They knew it was all pure literature and they believed every word I said. Their only trouble was a somewhat hazy knowledge of the English language.

If they had turned loose their Russian on me to tell me about Pushkin or Lermontov, accounts would have been squared. But they wanted to know literature, they loved culture, and they tagged along.

Fire Hose in the Castle.

HAMLET somewhat passed out of my life after that, till I happened to visit Helsingoer. Helsingoer is Danish for Elsinore, and Elsinore is Hamlet. Elsinore, the moon, the eager and the nipping night, the ramparts, the ghost. "Be-wa-are. Be-wa-are. Be-wa-a-are!" I made straight for Elsinore.

The coal business is crowding Elsinore pretty hard, but it is still one of the most picturesque spots on the Danish coast. And the castle is just as good today as it used to be in Hamlet's time, 400 A. D., or perhaps even a bit better. They have put in fire hose, anyway. But I liked it. I stood where the Ghost stood, in so far as a ghost can be said to stand. I walked the ramparts. I traced the three moats with a deep feeling of romance, and estimated the present cost of the copper roof, which is of an indescribably lovely green.

The moats were so sinister that I wondered why Hamlet didn't quietly drown his stepfather, until I saw an ancient sign in the archway: "Here are implements to rescue the drowning or to resuscitate those who appear to be dead." Probably put there by Hamlet's mother.

Hamlet's Grave.

I SHOWED so much animation on this historic ground that someone said to me, "You must surely be interested in the late Hamlet?"

I answered I was.

The polite native said, "I have no personal interest in the matter, and I am going in the opposite direction; but if you go down that road, past the municipal gas plant, leaving the fish-net factory on your right, I think you'll be amply repaid."

It was a dull road, even with the municipal waterworks thrown in, but I took it and I came to a charming little wood.

I saw nothing. Just a little wood. But I met an old lady with a long nose and a keen eye. I asked her if by chance she had ever heard of Hamlet.

She lighted up in an odd way. "Oh, ya, ya," she said with a smile, "his grave is up there," and she padded away with a happy expression.

I could hardly believe her, and I feared she was getting on; but I climbed the hill and she was right after all.

Shakspeare Got Him Wrong.

THERE, with a ring of stones around it, in the corner of the wood, was the grave of the greatest character in English literature. It seemed to me very beautiful to meet it all by itself in the heart of a wood. They told me in Copenhagen that Shakspeare had got Hamlet wrong; that he was really a bigamist and plug-ugly who had lived in Jutland and who had never set eyes on Elsinore. But I knew now they were mistaken. For here was his grave.

It was no ordinary grave. It was a severe mound of conical shape, imbedded with rocks, large and small, and crowned with an antique indecipherable memorial stone rather like a milestone.

A stalwart policeman leading a bicycle and a dog, on his way home to have a cup of coffee, happened to be passing.

"Yes, indeed," he assented, "that is Hamlet's grave. No, I do not know how old it is. It was before my time." He coughed. "But I know that many English and American visitors seemed to miss it very much before it was marked, and then a man of initiative marked the spot."

I nodded sympathetically.

"But," he questioned, "you have not seen the brook in which poor Ofelia drowned herself?"

"No," I gasped.

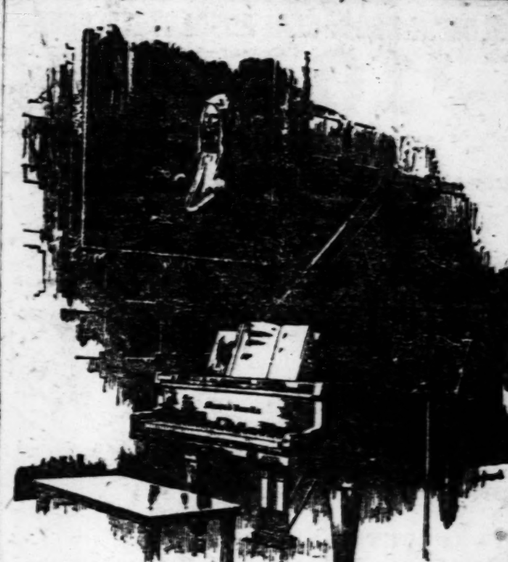
Ophelia's Two-Litre Brook.

WE descended, leaving Hamlet's grave in the gathering shadows of the northern evening, and at the foot of the little hill was the brook in which Ophelia, or Ofelia, as the Danes call it, drowned herself. Its capacity, I should say, would be roughly two litres a day. But this raises a very important question, which I recommend to Henry Clewes the New York Shakspearian authority.

The ordinary opinion is that Ophelia was something of a moron, or at any rate a little defective. This stream proves that only a woman of the strongest character could possibly have drowned herself in it. Must we not therefore revise our conception of Ophelia, and, as a consequence, recast our whole conception of the masterpiece? This is not a point that any one man can settle, but I earnestly believe it ought to be seriously considered.



Mason & Hamlin

A MASTERPIECE

There are some productions of genius of such distinctive quality that they are separated from all others and classed as masterpieces.

In a true sense the Mason & Hamlin Piano is a masterpiece—a masterpiece in its tonal quality and furthermore in its exquisite workmanship.

As a result of its unique system of construction, developed in 1900, it has set a new standard of piano tone and durability and is pronounced the most beautiful piano the world has ever known.

It is presented to the public—not in price competition with any other, which its cost and quality preclude, but as a work of art to be judged solely on its merit. In the words of its maker's trade-mark inscription:

CARNIVAL TO RAISE FUNDS FOR WOMEN'S WAR WORK MEMORIAL

Affair in Coliseum in February—Fountain to Be Erected in Forest Park.

A carnival and exposition to raise funds for a fountain in Forest Park to commemorate war services of Missouri women will be given by the Children of America Loyalty League, the second week in February, in the Coliseum.

The carnival will be open afternoons and evenings, from Monday to Saturday, and an hour's performance varying each day, will be given each afternoon by members of the league. The Coliseum floor will be laid out in three rings. The outer ring will be set aside for the exposition of products of local merchants and manufacturers, the middle will be a promenade and the center will be the arena for performances by the children, who number about 2000 and range in age from infancy to 18 years.

A baby show, a benefit card party and a series of contests between local organizations also are planned. The queen of the carnival will be crowned Monday night and will appear with her court to open the entertainment each succeeding evening.

The fountain, designed by Caroline Risque, will cost $15,000, part of which has been raised by small entertainments by the children. Contributions from the proceeds of the carnival also will be made to a fountain to be dedicated to the memory of colonial women by the Daughters of American Colonists.

The formation of the league in 1917 by Mrs. Nat Brown began a patriotic movement which was taken up by other cities. The pioneer St. Louis organization during the war maintained 10 beds in a military hospital. After the war the league continued to be active in charity and patriotic work, including among its activities the endowment of a bed in the Children's Hospital.

POISONOUS MUSHROOM EXHIBIT

Edible Variety Also to Be on Display in Paris.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 1.—For the first time since the outbreak of the World War, the custom of holding a comparative exhibition of edible and poisonous mushrooms has been revived at the Museum of Natural History in Paris.

M. Mangin, a director of the institution, has gathered together 400 different species varying in size from a pinhead to giants weighing over two pounds. The mushrooms will be labeled and placed in the exhibit in sections, according to their food value and poison danger. According to M. Mangin, there are only three or four really dangerous mushrooms, chiefly Phalloid Amanites and Citrines, the least particle of which if eaten means death.

V Genuine Pimple Remover

How Stuart's Calcium Wafers Work Out to the Skin and Clear It of Pimples, Blackheads, Boils, Muddiness and Such Blemishes.

The manner in which Stuart's Calcium Wafers influence a beautiful complexion is one of nature's marvels. Their first action is to remove the sour fermentations that are apt to poison the blood and thus disfigure the skin. Then the calcium itself is a natural agency to skin health and is appropriated by the tissues for its own particular use in repair work. These effects are visibly noticeable to those troubled with a pimply skin, or one that is muddy or red or blotchy, scaly and rough and coarse. The Calcium Wafers induce a reaction to healthier tendencies and soon the pinkish complexion begins to assert itself, the blemishes fade away, the dimples seem animated and the entire appearance is one of vivacious beauty instead of unsightliness.

Get a 60 cent box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers at the nearest drug store and note the wonderful results. You will surely be delighted.

TRY THIS IF YOU HAVE DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

MYSTERY OF DESERTED BRIG STILL UNSOLVED

Mary Celeste Found 50 Years Ago, With Everything Shipshape but All Hands Gone.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BANGOR, Me., Nov. 13.—Fifty years ago, Nov. 7, 1872, the brig Mary Celeste sailed from New York on a voyage that was destined to furnish the deepest of all mysteries to the literature of the sea. She was bound for Genoa with a cargo of case oil, much of it naphtha. She was a comparatively new vessel, well provisioned and equipped and well manned, with Maine men for officers, but she never got to Genoa. A few weeks after passing out by Sandy Hook the brig was sighted off the Azores, all plain sail set and her foresail aback, shipshape in every way, but abandoned.

Meat Cooking on Stove.

The Portuguese brig Dei Gratia sighted the Mary Celeste and, getting no response to signals, sent a boat to her. The boat's crew was puzzled at what it found—a vessel in perfect trim, with everything right alow and aloft, with meat cooking in the coppers on the galley stove, an unfinished garment on a sewing machine in the cabin, a child's toys on the floor and the tackle hanging from the stern davits as though a boat just had left her.

The Dei Gratia sent the abandoned brig into Cadiz with a prize crew, and the owners were notified. A careful search failed to disclose any trace of those who had sailed on the Mary Celeste — master, mates, cook, six seamen and the master's wife and child—and to this day their fate has been one of the great riddles of the sea. There was no sign of mutiny; stores were abundant; the weather had been fine and the brig had not lost so much as a ropeyarn. Why, then, had she been abandoned?

Theory of Gas in Cargo.

Novelists who have used the mystery as the basis of stories have advanced all sorts of theories, but most novelists are bad guessers of sea puzzles. Practical sailormen suggest that the brig's cargo began to "grumble"—that is, that gas had formed in the empty spaces of the naphtha cans, causing a terrifying rumbling noise, presaging a possible explosion that would rip the decks out of her, and that, dreading such a catastrophe, the master decided to leave her in a hurry.

But the weather was fine, and so why were the boats never seen nor heard from? To this the answer may be that they tried to make a landing on St. Mary's, where the surf is tremendous, and all were capsized and their occupants drowned.

Lectures on Social Psychology.

The first of a series of four lectures on Social Psychology at the Church of the Messiah, Enright avenue and Union boulevard, will be tomorrow night by Dr. Theodore G. Soares of the University of Chicago. The lectures are under auspices of the Laymen's League of the church.

How quickly should a physic act? What laxative gives quickest relief? Is a quick-acting laxative necessarily harsh, and will it gripe?

Your druggist will answer that 80 per cent of all sickness originates in decaying waste matter; therefore, minutes count—quick relief is of first importance. He will tell you that Pluto gives quickest relief—it acts in 30 minutes to two hours.

He will also tell you that Pluto, being a water laxative, is gentle, harmless and won't gripe. When sickness comes, it is always best to call your doctor; a timely dose of Pluto, however, is a wise step toward prevention. Keep Pluto always in the home.

worn out and an opening was blasted through the steel and cement in order to install what used to be known in the old days of the drama as a prompt-box. In the story, Joseph Cawthorn is called upon unexpectedly to substitute for the leading man in a play within the play, who has broken his leg. The comedy arises from Cawthorn's constant appeals to the prompter. The Globe is now the only house in town, except the Metropolitan Opera, with a real prompt-box.

Delysia in New Knobloch Drama.

ALICE DELYSIA, who danced here three seasons ago in "Afgar," is to have an emotional dramatic role, including two songs, in the London production of Edward Knobloch's four-act play, "The Lullaby." * * * Zoe Akins' first play, first entitled "Greatness," and now renamed "The Texas Nightingale," is impending in New York, after having been tried in Chicago and withdrawn for revision.

A new play by Pirandello of the "Six Characters in Search of An Author" has been well received in Rome. It is called "Henry IV." and by report is as strange a mixture of related and unrelated matters as the piece that has made the playwright known to Western Europe. But, says a telegram from Rome, "it is more obvious" than the doings and sayings of the six. * * * It is reported that the Winter Garden will forthwith be remodeled into a smaller stage and a smaller auditorium. * * * Elsie Janis is excelling herself in a semi-satirical imitation of Lenore Ulric.

David Belasco is said to have spent more money on his production of "The Merchant of Venice," with David Warfield, than it cost to stage "The Music Box Revue." * * * Mrs. Fiske's new play, "Paddy," which opens in Rochester Monday night, portrays a Virginia gentlewoman who has gone to pieces physically, morally and financially. Miss Lillian Barrett is the author.

Conditions out of town are such that it looks as if there would be no road tour of "Ben Hur" this year. Last season was the first time, almost within the memory of man, that no company fared forth in the hardy Lew Wallace perennial. * * * Everett Moses, a lawyer, has such confidence in his first play, "Virtue," that he has financed its appearance for two weeks at the Nora Bayes Theater, with Pauline Armitage in the lead.

"Kiki's 407th Performance.

THE "oldest" production in town, "Kiki," with Lenore Ulric, reached its 407th performance tonight at the Belasco Theater. . . . The first rehearsal of "Johannes Kreisler" was made Tuesday under the direction of Frank Reicher. Ben-Ami will be seen in it at the Selwyn next month. . . . A new sketch has been added to the "Chauve-Souris" at the Century Roof. It is called "Khirurgie," in English, "The Dentist."

"The Bunch and Judy" will not open next Monday night, as announced, at the Globe, but on Nov. 27. . . . "Fashions for Men," the Molnar play, drew an enthusiastic audience at its premiere in Washington, Monday night. . . . Mary Roberts Rinehart has spent a year in writing a new play, which is to have a local hearing about Jan. 1.

ACTRESS TELLS SECRET

Tells How to Darken Gray Hair With a Home-Made Mixture.

Joicey Williams, the well-known American actress, recently made the following statement about gray hair and how to darken it, with a home-made mixture:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will gradually darken gray, streaked or faded hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off."

PATENTED

FLEXIBLE RIGID SHANK

TRADE MARK

The wonder Shoe for women. Think of it! The styles of the day in street and dress Shoes—yet comfort beyond the fondest hopes. And all this now becomes possible because of the Feeture Arch.

There never was another Shoe like Johansen's Feeture Arch Shoe, nor can there be, for the Feeture Arch is patented and used in women's Shoes exclusively by Johansen.

Think of a Shoe with an arch as rigid as a bridge of steel—then that same Shoe, so flexible that you can bend it in the hand. That is the Feeture Arch Shoe.

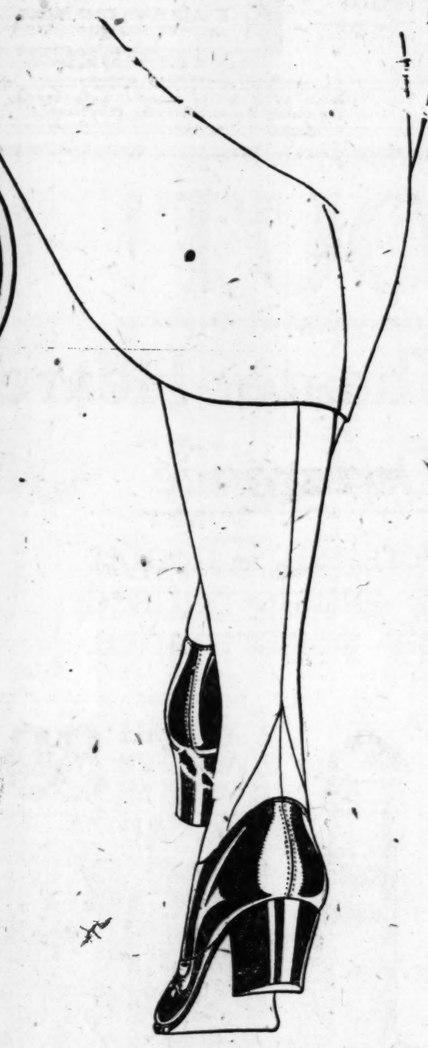
Women who are troubled with their arches, whose feet tire, who have never been able to find Shoes that give comfort, let alone style, now can have both style and comfort. And all women will find greater comfort in these wonderful Shoes. Because of the patented arch there is unyielding support when the weight is upon the foot, yet complete flexibility the moment the weight is released.

Style F-202 is a charming two-strap model of black kid, with a medium rounded toe and a Cuban heel. The same style may be had in patent leather or Havana brown kid.

Style F-300 is a striking boot of black kid with a walking heel, or the same boot in Havana brown kid. And there are many other styles in boots, straps and Oxfords.

Style F-208, one of the most popular Oxford models, Cuban heel and medium rounded toe in either black or Havana brown kid. The many other styles and patterns are just as stylish and smart as the three illustrated here.

Prices—$8.50 to $11.50



It looks like any other good looking Shoe.

But no matter how much pressure is applied the arch is absolutely rigid.

Still you can take it in your hand and bend it like this.

It is the only Shoe of its kind in the world.

MENDEL-PASTEUR CELEBRATION PLANNED AT ST. LOUIS U.

Some of Nation's Leading Educators and Scientists Will Take Part in Event.

A Mendel-Pasteur celebration in honor of the birth of these distinguished scientists has been announced by St. Louis University, the exercises, in which some of the most prominent educators and scientists of America will take part, to be held in the university auditorium Dec. 14.

President Robison stated that the university felt greatly honored by the fact that acceptances to invitations to speak had been received from Herbert Spencer Jennings of Johns Hopkins, America's greatest authority on heredity, whose subject will be "Mendel, the scientist;" Victor Clarence Vaughan of the University of Michigan and the National Research Council, whose topic will be 'Pasteur and His Achievements;" Chancellor Hall of Washington University and President John Carleton Jones of Missouri State University.

The observation of the centenary of the birth of Mendel and Pasteur at St. Louis University will be the first of a number of such functions that will be held throughout the world in the next few months. The affair will be strictly academic, the speakers and other active participants appearing in cap and gown, and the attendance will be by invitation.

A KNOCK-OUT!

2500 People at Pershing Theater Heard

No One Could Tell the Difference

Twenty-five hundred persons at Pershing Theater last night could not say when the artists paused and the NEW EDISON took up their performance.

Before a capacity audience last night—in the Pershing Theater—the New Edison sustained the remarkable test of comparison with the original singers and performers.

GEORGE WILTON BALLARD, renowned tenor; SYBIL SANDERSON FAGAN, noted whistler performed in unique test with recreations previously recorded by the New Edison. The critics and music lovers in the audience were amazed at the absolute perfection of the New Edison—quality and depth of tone matching with true fidelity the artist's voice. No one could distinguish any difference.

HAROLD LYMAN also proved that the New Edison re-creates the true tones of musical instruments without alteration, by playing the flute and saxophone in direct test.

NEW BOOKS FOR THE WEEK AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

Any of these books will be sent by parcel post to cardholders on receipt of postage in order of application.

POEMS OF HEROISM IN AMERICAN LIFE, by J. R. Howard. A collection of poems that have America for their theme and spirit. Its contents are divided into six parts: The New Continent; Revolution and Independence; The More Perfect Union; Secession or Union Preserved; Growth of Empire, and The World War, a Final Outlook.

THE 47 WORKSHOP, by G. P. Baker. This is the third series of the Harvard Plays. It contains "The Crow's Nest," by W. F. Manley; "The Hard Heart," by M. A. Kister Jr.; "Mis' Mercy," by L. W. Bray, and one by A. Ketchum.

MEMOIRS OF A HOSTESS, by Mrs. A. A. Field. A chronicle of eminent friendships by M. A. DeWolfe Howe. Mrs. James T. Field was the wife of Field of the Tichnor & Field Publishing Co., who was also editor of the Atlantic Monthly in 1861 to 1871. This gives an intimate picture of Hawthorne, Emerson, Longfellow, Lowell and others of that period. Mr. Howe has written this chiefly from the diary and journals of Mrs. Field.

THE NEXT-TO-NOTHING HOUSE, by Alice Van Leer Carrick. Mrs. Carrick has written authoritative articles on antiques for House Beautiful, Country Life and similar magazines. In this book she delightfully describes her house and the old-time furnishings and adornments which she has made a hobby of collecting at bargain prices. Daniel Webster once occupied the same house.

RIVERS AND THEIR MYSTERIES, by A. H. Verrill. This is not a scientific treatise on rivers, but the author has endeavored to describe in a clear, concise, easily understood manner how rivers are formed, why they flow, their effect on land, climate, animal life and man; and also the changes made in them by man.

THE WRECK OF EUROPE, by Francesco Nitti. English translation of L'Europa Senza Pace, by Prof. C. Gauss of Princeton. Nitti, former Prime Minister of Italy, tells in this work of the present day conditions in Europe and how the victors as well as the vanquished have been ruined by the peace. He also sets forth a concrete program for bringing Europe back to a normal condition.

EDWARD MacDOWALL, a great American tone poet, his life and music, by J. F. Porte. A comprehensive survey of the life and work of MacDowell with analytical and descriptive notes on each of his compositions.

FIVE-GAITED COMPETITION TO BE HORSE SHOW FEATURE

An important event in the St. Louis Horse Show, to be held in the Coliseum Nov. 29 to Dec. 2, will be the competition of five-gaited horses for a $500 stake. The horses entered must have these gaits: Walk, running walk, fox-trot or slow pace, canter and rack and trot; they must change easily from gait to gait and must back readily. They will be judged by their manners and way of going, conformation, substance, perfection, style and beauty.

One feature of the competition in this class will be the meeting between "Eastern Star," winner of a $10,000 stake at Louisville, Ky., owned by H. N. Greis of Tulsa, Ok., and said to be valued at $12,000, and "Sinbad," owned by F. W. Mattiessen of Ventura, Cal. Other horses entered in this class, and their owners, are: "Elmy," Mrs. Elias Mayer, Chicago; "Major's Aurilia," Miss Gertrude Hardt, Chicago; "Norma Talmadge," R. G. Young, Chicago; "Tiger Rose" and "The Sheik," Mrs. Loula Long Combes, Kansas City; "Romping Peavine" and "Rexina Chief," Roy Davis, Kansas City; "Elizabeth Greis," H. N. Greis, Tulsa, winner of a blue ribbon at the Military and Civilian Horse Show at Jefferson Barracks last June.

Most of the boxes in the Coliseum have been sold for the horse show, an early event of the social season. Members of the Bit and Bridle Club have reserved seats for every performance. There will be four evening performances and a matinee. The general sale of seats will begin tomorrow at 1111 Olive street.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes—Most Women Can Have.

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician.

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headache, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep them fit. 15c and 30c.

Finds His Missing Piano.

In the belief that a piano repairman had obtained $300 for his services in repairing a piano and had disappeared with the money and the piano, George T. Moss of 1018 South King's highway asked the police last week to look for the repairman. Moss now has discovered that the repairman delivered the piano to a storage house as he had been instructed, but that the storage house had overlooked the delivery and had not notified him.

THE QUEEN ANNE

A Sonora Masterpiece

THERE are lower priced Sonoras and more expensive Sonoras. The former, made to satisfy popular demand, represent greater value than phonographs of other manufacturers of the same price. The latter, the costly art model Sonoras, are made for those who want something exclusive—extraordinary cabinet work and design, extra long running motors, expensive, though not essential conveniences.

Between these two is a Sonora Masterpiece—the Queen Anne—sharing the advantages of both; low enough in price for the modest income, fine enough to grace the most palatial home. Its tone is a startling revelation.

Little Game of Jury Picking Being Played in Herrin Massacre Trials at Marion, Ill.

ATTORNEY GENERAL EDW. BRUNDAGE — JUDGE D. T. HARTWELL — ATTORNEY A. W. KERR.. COUNSEL FOR THE DEFENSE

OTIS F. GLENN, ASST. ATTORNEY GENERAL — C. W. MIDDLEKAUFF, ASST ATTORNEY GENERAL — PROSECUTING ATTORNEY DELOS DUTY...

State Seeking Unbiased Panels in Community Regarded as Prejudiced Already Has Used More of 100 Challenges Than Has Defense.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MARION, Ill., Nov. 18. — The Herrin massacre trial, now in its earlier stages, has resolved itself into a game of jury picking, the outcome of which will go a great way toward determining the result of the first case to be heard, and may have a determining effect on the disposition of the remaining cases. Able jury pickers on both sides have been engaged in lively skirmishes throughout the week, each side striving eagerly and persistently to maneuver events to its advantage.

In the game of jury picking the rules, on account of the law's solicitude for assuring every safeguard to the accused, all favor the defense. The goal for which the State is contesting is an unbiased jury, preferably of farmers. The defense is striving to place in the jury box as many miners as possible, or at least men affiliated with or in sympathy with the miners. The game is played with peremptory challenges 20 to each side for each of the five defendants, or 100 to each side in all. But although the start was made on even terms, the State quickly was placed at a disadvantage under which it will fight until its peremptory challenges are exhausted.

In addition to the rules which favor the defense, the State is further handicapped by the fact that about nine out of ten of the veniremen are miners or part-time miners or relatives of miners or business men dependent upon miners' patronage, most of whom would be acceptable to the defense. To keep these off the jury, entailing an almost certain acquittal, the State was compelled, the first two days, to sacrifice 14 of its peremptory challenges, while the defense only had to use one. At this rate the State will have exhausted its challenges within three weeks and the defense then can complete the jury, hindered only by challenges for cause. There is little reason to hope for a reduced percentage of the mining element on succeeding panels, as the first one, drawn by chance from the jury box, is representative of the preponderance of miners and affiliated persons in the county.

An Amazing Situation.

Veniremen are largely divisible into two classes, those who do not want to serve and profess to have conditions which disqualify them, and those, mostly miners, who stoutly maintain that they have no opinion of the case and could return an honest verdict and would as soon convict another miner as anybody else.

The amazing disclosure of the jury talesmen, as far as it has proceeded, has been the readiness of miners, if they are to be believed, to hang their union brothers for the Herrin massacre.

The attorneys for the prosecution, however, are callous men who mistrust this seeming eagerness of the miners to avenge the Herrin murderers and these lawyers are battling valiantly, with their diminishing streak of challenges, to keep willing avengers off the jury.

Even if these men who have no opinions and who say they would vote to convict their brothers do not get on the jury, their sacrifice, as they are bowled over by challenges, is not in vain. Every man down means one challenge less, with the certainty of a day to come when the State will have no more and other miners, just as barren of opinions and just as willing to convict their brothers, will be ready to take their places in the jury box.

Skill of Evasion Amazing.

Unexpected, and rather amazing, is the skill with which men unused to court processes evade the snares set by the State's questioners and come through the examination without making an admission which would incur a challenge for cause.

The hope of the State is in the farmers, whose forth telling is in contrast, but the difficulty in getting farmers on the jury is increased by the fact that many Williamson County farmers are part-time miners. And as far as business men, it is difficult to find one who was not formerly a miner or who is greatly dependent upon miners' patronage.

State Attorney Delos Duty, chief jury picker for the State, is as good as jury pickers ever get to be, and Assistant Attorney-General Otis Glenn of Murphysboro, who takes a hand when Duty becomes tired of challenging, is a good picker, too. They have the sage counsel, from the side lines, of Assistant Attorney-General C. F. Middlekauff, veteran of many a hard-fought jury battle, but the odds are strongly against them.

Then, too, in the opposing lineup, under the captaincy of Angus W. Kerr, chief counsel of the United Mine Workers of Illinois, is Rufus Neely of Marion, jury picker, par excellence, who knows every man in Marion County and his sisters and his cousins, and his aunts. Or, if he does not, George B. White does, and between them they very nicely see to it that their side gets the best of the breaks.

How It Works.

Just to show how it works, here comes Harvey Kline of Crab Orchard. Tarry and see what happens:

(State's Attorney Duty questioning and Kline answering):

"Your name?"

"Harvey Kline."

"Where do you live, Harvey?"

"At Crab Orchard."

"What farm do you live on?"

"On the Charley Allen place."

"How long have you lived there?"

"Two years."

"You lived a little west of there before that, didn't you, near Pittsburg?"

"Yes, sir, on the Scovel place."

"Do you work in the mines, Harvey?"

"Yes."

"Member of the union?"

"Yes."

"I suppose you heard about this difficulty out at the Lester strip mine, where some men lost their lives?"

"Yes, I heard it talked about at the time and off and on since."

"From what you heard have you formed any opinion as to who was in the right and who was in the wrong?"

"Can't say I have."

"Have you formed any opinion as to whether the killing of those men was lawful or unlawful?"

"No."

"Or who was right and who was wrong in the dispute?"

"No."

"If you were taken as a juror in a murder case growing out of a labor difficulty, would you try to be as honest to the people as in any other kind of a case?"

"Yes."

"Would you try miners charged with a crime as fair as you would try doctors, lawyers, farmers?"

"Yes."

"The fact that they are members of the same organization wouldn't make any difference to you?"

"No."

"You wouldn't be inclined to excuse it or look upon it more lightly because it was a crime committed in a labor dispute?"

"No."

"If you were a juror to try men charged with murder and you were satisfied that they were guilty, would it make any difference to you that the man who was killed was a scab and was killed in a dispute growing out of that?"

"No."

"Have you any grown sons?"

"Yes; one."

"What does he do?"

"He's a miner."

"Any sons-in-law?"

"Yes, three."

"What do they do?"

"They are miners."

"Now, in view of the fact that you are a miner, that your son is a miner and that your three sons-in-law are miners, do you mean to say that you could try this case as fairly as if the defendants were not miners?"

"Yes."

"Have you ever conversed with your son or your sons-in-law about the killing of these men?"

"I never heard them say nothing about it."

"Have you conversed with anybody else about it?"

"No; I never heard nobody talk about it."

"And you have no opinion as to the guilt or innocense of the defendants?"

"No."

"Have you any objection to the death penalty?"

"No."

"If the guilt of these men was established by the evidence would you be willing to sign the death penalty?"

"Yes."

"Now, Mr. Kline, I want to ask you if there is any reason in the world that I have mentioned or have not mentioned touching your feeling or sentiment or convictions, anything that you can think of that would prevent you from making a fair and impartial juror for both sides?"

"No."

Mr. White questioning now and Harvey Kline continuing to answer.

"How long have you been a miner?"

"Twenty years."

"Ever had any trouble with the union?"

"No."

"In good standing?"

"Yes."

"Are any of your brothers in the mines?"

"Yes; one."

"Which one?"

"Jim."

"You remember the occurences at the strip mine?"

"Yes."

"Did you hear about scabs being cut there before it happened?"

"Yes."

"Did you ever talk to anybody about what happened out there?"

"No."

"Did you ever express any opinion as to whether it was a crime or whether it was wrong?"

"I didn't say nothing about it."

"You never expressed any opinion as to the guilt or innocense of anyone?"

"No."

"If it appears that a union coal miner is charged with it, would you try him as fairly as you would a hodcarrier or a plumber?"

"Yes."

"You understand that the men who were killed were nonunion miners, commonly called scabs. Would the fact that this was trouble between union and non-union men and that it grew out of a mine war make it any different than if it had been corn-shuckers?"

"No difference."

"Did you read about this in the newspapers?"

"No."

"Don't you read the newspapers?"

"No. I can't; I heard the folks read sometimes."

"Do you belong to any church?"

"Yes."

"What one?"

"Baptist."

"What's your father's name?"

"Richard."

"He was an old soldier wasn't he?"

"Yes."

"You married into the Allen family, didn't you?"

"Yes."

"Are any of her folks in the mines?"

"Yes; her brother Lewis."

"Have you talked to him about this?"

"No."

Mr. Duty speaking: "Stand aside, Mr. Kline."

Not Pessimistic.

Which means that in order to keep Mr. Kline from getting on that jury, and may be hanging five of his union brothers, the state has had to sacrifice another peremptory challenge.

And that's the way it goes all day long.

But Assistant Attorney-General Middlekauff, wonderful optimist that he is, believes that when the jury picking is completed the state will get convictions. He is heartened by the fact that through all the welter of opinions and lack of opinions, there has appeared a remnant of Williamson County men who are not frightened into professing opinions or conveniently lacking in them, and he hopes to get enough of these on the jury to convict on strong evidence which the state is prepared to present.

And in this, in spite of the fact that Middlekauff says that in all his 39 years' practice, the adverse factors which have to be overcome in this case are the greatest, with one possible exception, that he has ever had to combat.

Can't Escape the Trial.

It is impossible to escape the trial in Marion. The little, close-built town squire is filled to overflowing with the old brick courthouse, with its red town pumps on its corners. As the courthouse dominates the square where are the bank buildings, hotel and motion picture house, so the square dominates the town which shades off through the residential streets where Superintendent MacDowell lived, to the negro district, Gent's Addition, on the south, and to the north where after three or four blocks it becomes inextricably mixed with the railroad sidings of the Illinois Central.

In the courthouse sit the five defendants conspicuous in their Sunday clothes among the miners in overalls, the batteries of lawyers for the State and defense, and the reporters working on a narrow board nailed to the court rail. Judge Dewit Hartwell, who is pinch-hitting for the clerk of the court, writes feverishly in a huge book, and below him chubby-faced Sheriff Mel Thaxton repeats mildly: "Give us a little order now. Please give us a little order," to an already silent crowd of talesmen who fill the spectators' benches. It was by electing Thaxton as County Treasurer, with a two to one majority on the eve of the trial that Williamson County demonstrated its sympathies were on the side of the Illinois Mine Workers, the organization which is conducting the defense.

From the courthouse an attitude of Marion's social mind has spread across the square through the town to Gent's addition to one side and to the railroad tracks on the other. There apparently has been a great deal of plain and fancy thinking going on in Marion since last June. A massacre was dumped down on its doorstep and it has been trying to fit the foundling into its conscience.

The people of Marion do not talk much about the massacre—not even the old men who follow the sun around the courthouse and indicate the time as fell as any garden sundial. At least they do not talk before strangers. One reason is the reported presence of 35 Federal detectives in Marion. The townspeople believe any man wearing a bullet-proof hat is a detective and they may be right.

Analysis of Herrin View.

Marion had a more difficult time than Herrin, seven miles away, did, for Herrin is a United Mine Workers' town. Its reaction was simple and direct. The inhabitant of Herrin felt after the massacre exactly as any law-abiding citizen would feel after a police raid on a notorious and troublesome band of gangsters. The strike breakers at the Lester strip mine were no more entitled to sympathy, in the opinion of Herrin, than a bootlegger caught with a still in his hand would be in the opinion of Wayne Wheeler. The strike breakers had closed a public highway, and with loaded rifles and insults forced passing miners and farmers around a long detour. Herrin believes they killed Henderson as he was asking for a drink of water at a neighboring farmhouse.

His shooting incidentally must have been a wonderful bit of marksmanship. Although the leaves are now off the trees, from the spot where he was shot the giant Panama steam shovel, Bucyrus, and the mole of earth which it piled up on either side, are barely visible, almost a thousand yaards away.

If, as the miners claim, MacDowell himself fired the shot that killed Henderson from the steam shovel, to bring in the militia, it adds only one more fact to the almost legendary story of this man, who grumbled to his captors, "If you're going to shoot me, what in hell do you want to make me walk so far for?"

Marion's View Different.

The case of Marion is different. Within five minutes after the news of the shooting the people wound up their Fords and bumped over the dirt roads to the scene. They looked at the dynamited railroad engines, the smoking trains loaded with burning coal, and saw the scraggly patch of woods and the trampled corn field from which the attackers had advanced at daybreak, and then they returned to begin their career of thinking.

After the first arrests Herrin, whose conscience was all straight, sent 48 of its merchants to Marion with bail money. Only one lone grocer in Marion went bail. Marion still was thinking.

Marion is not a United Mine Workers' town. It is a town of lawyers, doctors, dentists, merchants, bankers, salesmen. The advertising pamphlet that tells about the town, mentions its beautiful new bank building, its factories, the possibilities of fruit and vegetable farming quite as prominently as it does the 13 mines. It tells that Marion has grown from 2000 to 10,000 in the last 20 years and that it wants more factories and wholesale houses to build up the streets behind the square. Perhaps a majority of the 10,000 inhabitants are miners, but they are not the boosters. It is the professional class and the merchants who form the Greater Marion Association and who are clamoring for outside capital.

Citadel of Conservatism.

The Elks' clubhouse stands within a block of the jail, which, with the bank, is the most attractive and modern building in Marion, where Otis Clark, with nine indictments of murder against him, is catching up on his back reading of the United Mine Worker. The Elks' clubhouse is the local citadel of conservatism, and there a few doctors and dentists still remained hesitant. Then came the metropolitan newspapers.

The miners read the United Mine Workers' Journal and the Illinois Miner. The croackings of the New York Herald and the thunderngs of the Chicago News might have been printed in Eskimo in so far as they troubled them. But the doctors and dentists read the outside papers and worried because of their portent.

It came as an unpleasant shock to read that a great burst of blood might come rolling down their neat streets at any moment. Or that they might trip over a skull when they put the cat out at night. This was a brand-new Marion to them.

As for not being ready to conduct a fair trial, it was the Chicago crowd, with their $50,000 subscription for Brundage, who were imperiling a fair trial.

Marion Regains Poise.

Marion stopped reading at this point with pleased surprise. It had found what it was looking for. It is much easier to attack the other fellow than to defend yourself. Here they had a perfect issue, whatever their qualms about the massacre. A fair trial is one of the fundamental principles of America.

The detractors of Greater Marion were talking about a fair trial and the Attorney-General was accepting money from the open enemies of its own unionized boys, the boys who had raised the population from 2000 to 10,000 in 20 years. Give the boys a fair trial! You bet your life they would. The Greater Marion Association warned the Illinois Chamber of Commerce not to come near Marion in its campaign for a still larger fund for Brundage.

Marion had regained a single mind. The massacre was dead. Long live the trial. Now as the examination of talesmen proceeds they will tell you that Marion is a great little town, growing, too, and joke about the ridiculous charge of lawlessness.

"Better wear your rubbers, Jim," they say. "Them streets is full of blood, I see by the papers," and climb happily into their cars to go three blocks to the motion picture house.

Out underneath the stark height of the steam shovel Bucyrus, Lester's successors have begun to mine again. Lester himself would have made a $1,000,000 there if he had been able to restrain his greed for two months, the natives say. The massacre is dead in Marion.

Two Sisters Seek to Convict Husband of Third on Charge of Murdering Fourth, So He Could Collect Insurance

Body of Slain Woman Found Lying in Blood When Firemen Extinguished Blaze in House Where She Lived With Brother-in-Law.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

GREELEY, Colo., Nov. 18.

EFFORTS to solve the mystery of the death of Edna Skinner, a pretty school teacher, whose life was insured in favor of her brother-in-law, have led to an unusual situation in which two sisters are attempting to bring about the conviction of the husband of a third sister on a charge of murdering a fourth sister.

The evidence gathered by the two sisters, Mrs. Lida Dooley and Miss Idelle Skinner of Bloomington, Ill., is ready for submission when their brother-in-law, Albert Lowe, is called to trial on a charge of murder here, Nov. 29.

Lowe's wife, the third surviving sister, apparently intends to stand by her husband. When Lowe asserted his innocence and declared that Miss Skinner's death was accidental, his wife said she believed him.

Miss Skinner's body, which was buried in her former home, Bloomington, has been twice disinterred, once at the instance of the State and once at the request of Lowe's attorneys.

Though the young school teacher was supposed to have met her death accidentally in a fire, it has been established that her skull was crushed, as though she had been struck with some heavy object.

Died at Lowe Home.

Miss Skinner's death occurred at the Lowe home here on Sunday morning, July 2, last. Lowe and his wife and three daughters had lived here for the last 10 years. Mrs. Lowe is the oldest of the four Skinner girls, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Skinner of Bloomington.

Edna Skinner was 21 years old. She received a teacher's diploma from the Illinois State Normal University two years ago and when she sought a teacher's position, Lowe and his wife aided in having her employed as teacher in a rural school at Windsor, Colo. She made her home here with the Lowe family.

A year ago Lowe entered the life insurance business and is said to have persuaded Edna to take out the first policy. She demurred at first, stating that she did not have money enough to pay the initial premium. Lowe agreed to waive the payment, it is charged, and she is said to have suggested that he be made the beneficiary. The policy called for the payment of $2000 in the event of natural death and $2500 should death be caused by accident. Lowe collected the policy within a few weeks after Miss Skinner's death.

Shriek Is Heard.

It was the custom of Lowe to take his wife and their children to Sunday school each Sunday morning in an automobile, while Edna remained home to prepare dinner. This custom was followed on the morning of the death.

After Lowe's return, Prof. J. E. Briggs, an educator residing next door, heard a piercing shriek, he said, when walking in his garden, and then several other cries. He could not accurately locate the direction. Other neighbors also heard the scream.

A few minutes later, Briggs says, Lowe ran up and said that the house was on fire.

Lowe is declared to have said nothing about Miss Skinner, either to Briggs or the firemen. One of the latter, after the flames were under control, stumbled over her body, burned, on the kitchen floor. Underneath the body, the floor was not burned, and there were fresh red stains.

Lowe said that he had been resting when he heard a scream, and, hastening to the kitchen, found the room a mass of flames. He stated that the stove had exploded and that pieces of the iron had struck Miss Skinner on the head, crushing her skull. A heavy iron weight was found in a corner of the kitchen with some of the dead woman's hair attached. Lowe is alleged to have purchased a jug of gasoline the preceding day. No such jug was found after the fire.

Condition Discovered.

Lowe accompanied the body of Miss Skinner to Bloomington. During the trip, it is said, he paced the coaches from one end to the other. When the casket arrived he refused to allow the undertaker to open it, stating that the appearance of the body was shocking.

The young woman's mother persuaded the undertaker to open the coffin when Lowe was absent and the crushing of the skull was discovered. After the funeral Mrs. Skinner hastened to Greeley and consulted the State's Attorney. A warrant was issued and Lowe was placed in jail.

The body was disinterred and the crushed parts of the skull removed. The day after the autopsy burglars ransacked the room and baggage of the State's Attorney in a hotel here.

Firemen who examined the tank of the stove Lowe said had exploded assert that they found it to be in good condition.

It is expected that Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Skinner, the two daughters, Mrs. Lida Dooley and Miss Idelle Skinner, and the son, Nathan, will arrive here next week to give their testimony at the trial. The efforts of Lowe to prevent the opening of the casket will be related.

Wholesale Murders by Poison Charged Against Two Chicago Women

Fourteen Deaths Are Listed for Investigation Following Illness of Man From Arsenic

Police Believe Husbands, Children and One Grandchild Died of Drug—Insurance Said to Have Been Collected in Some Cases—Coffin Bought Before Death of One Supposed Victim.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.

Do women have souls?

Ambassador Harvey recently stirred up a mare's nest by stating that women were without souls. He further declared that the 10 commandments were not intended for women; that they should have a decalogue of their own.

The American Ambassador to the Court of St. James apparently does not know the women of his country. He must have anticipated the devilish revelations of the Klimek-Koulik poison plotters of Chicago, declared by the police to be two women without the vestige of souls.

Johan Hoch was hanged in Chicago about 20 years ago for poisoning a few wives. Landru recently was guillotined in France for disposing of a number of women. Mrs. Belle Gunness married and killed a few men at La Porte, Ind., on her notorious murder farm. But none of these monsters stooped to murder troublesome children or assumed to destroy any person they met to whom they may have taken a dislike.

So far 14 deaths have been tabulated for investigation as the result of the poison orgy said to have been indulged by these two middle-aged Chicago women. Lieut. Willard Malone, with a department of assistants, has been assigned to unravel the history and operations of these two women, without souls, as he declares, for the last 20 years.

Men, women and even their own children, are said to have fallen victims to the deadly arsenic which lurt. The chemists removed the necessary contents and took the material to their laboratories.

In the meantime an anonymous call suggested to the police that Mrs. Koulik's former husband had died leaving insurance. The life of the couple in the last few years of his existence had been very stormy owing to her relations with other men.

And as the chemists worked over their test tubes relatives and neighbors of the two women who lived near each other came to the police with more revelations of sudden death following meals at the home either of Mrs. Klimek or Mrs. Koulik. The list grew to astounding proportions.

"These women are without feeling for human life," said Lieut. Malone, after further grilling of the two. "They only laugh and shrug their shoulders as though the whole matter did not greatly concern them. They have no souls. Death means nothing to either of them. It seems that murder was a matter of small moment for them to consider."

After a few days, the Coroner's chemists submitted their report on the bodies of the two husbands. In the body of Frank Kupczyk, last previous husband of Mrs. Klimek, they found sufficient arsenic to kill half a dozen average men. In the body of Wojcik Sturmer, former husband of Mrs. Koulik, they found enough arsenic to kill several persons. The two women then were brought into the Police Court and each formally charged with murder.

The police compiled the following list of cases reported:

Mrs. Klimek's Alleged Victims.

Joseph Mitkiewicz, first husband. Died January, 1914. Body exhumed.

John Ruszkaksi, second husband. Died May, 1914. Body exhumed.

John Gusikowski, sweetheart. Died autumn, 1914.

"Meyers," husband or sweetheart, missing.

Frank Kupczyk, husband, died March, 1912. Arsenic found in body.

Mrs. Rose Chulzinski, cousin, died 1913. Body exhumed.

Helen Zakrzewski, 16, cousin. Died 1915.

Stella Zakrzewski, 23, cousin. Died 1912.

Stanley Zakrzewski, 16, cousin. Died 1912.

Tony Joseph Klimek, husband. Now in hospital from arsenic poison.

Mrs. Koulik's Alleged Victims.

Sophia and Benjamin Sturmer, 7-months-old twins, died within a month of each other. Bodies to be exhumed.

Wojcik Sturmer, husband, died 1915. Arsenic found in body.

Dorothy Speas, 2 years old, granddaughter. Died 1921. Body exhumed.

John Sturmer, 22, son. Became ill when baked died, but recovered.

It was in January, 1914, that Mrs. Klimek's first husband, Joseph Mitkiewicz, died. In a few weeks she was married again and the following May this husband, John Ruszkakski, also was dead.

Two witnesses have come before the State's Attorney assigned to the case, to tell what they know of the death of one of these husbands. They were former neighbors of Mrs. Klimek and they said it was the favorite topic of conversation of Mrs. Klimek to keep telling her husband that he had not long to live and as she sat by his deathbed she would sew at her mourning clothes devoid of all feeling of sympathy, devoid of all sentiment which the world calls "soul," and of the feeling or quality which Harvey says does not belong to any woman.

One day when she had decided that the end must come soon, according to the secret witnesses, Mrs. Klimek came to their home and said that as her husband had not long for this world she had stopped to buy a coffin which she had seen advertised for $30 and would they permit her to have it delivered there until she should need it for her husband's death. A few days later she had the coffin brought to her house and her husband was buried in it.

Had Attracted Another.

A few weeks after the death of the second husband, Mrs. Klimek had attracted another man. It was said she had become acquainted with him through a matrimonial agency. His name was John Guszkowski. This man was not so easily "gaffed" and when he failed to propose to her she asked him to marry her and asked if he was afraid, because her two former husbands had died, that she intended to poison him. She laughed and thought this a good joke. But John failed to see the humor in it and deferred making the alliance. Shortly after this his sudden death caused surprise among his acquaintances. It is the police theory that Mrs. Klimek finished him with her deadly arsenic salad.

From the time of his death to that of her marriage to Frank Kupczyk in 1919, there seems to be drawn a mysterious veil over the life of the woman. Just where she existed in what she did in that period the authorities so far have been unable to discover and piece together completely. Neighbors in the many places she is reported to have lived during the interim, tell of mysterious men who frequented her home, only to drop from sight and be succeeded by others.

One of these men is the mysterious "Meyers." It was by this name that she became acquainted with Kupczyk. When the woman was pronounced wife to Kupczyk the latter's death sentence also was pronounced. His wedding clothes were his shroud and when the recent report of the Coroner's chemist showed the quantity of arsenic found in his body, it was marveled at that he lingered with illness at all.

Whether Mrs. Klimek or Mrs. Koulik was the original poison plotter is not known, although the greater number of probable victims have been traced to Mrs. Klimek. For many years there seems to have been a mysterious union between the two women and they evidently co-operated in a number of the cases involved.

The Passing of Children.

Children of Mrs. Koulik when questioned by the police stated that when their father, Sturmer, was alive the husband and wife were fighting day and night over the attentions of Koulik to Mrs. Sturmer. It was admitted by Koulik that he had been the father of children born to Mrs. Sturmer before Sturmer died. He claims the 9-year-old son of Mrs. Koulik is his, although the child was born while she was the wife of Sturmer. Twins born to Mrs. Sturmer apparently were a burden. After seven months and a few weeks apart they both died. It is said she is the mother of 15 children of whom six are dead.

Another strange angle was introduced to the complications of these women "without souls." Nicholas Mickey, not yet married one year, stated that his mother-in-law was a sister of Mrs. Koulik and had told him shortly after the wedding that he had only a short time to live and that he should take out some insurance for his wife.

Mickey told her he did not want any insurance, but she insisted and had an agent come to see him. His sworn statement follows:

Q. You didn't make an application yourself until the agent came? A. After a while I made the application and then my mother-in-law said I wouldn't live more than one year. I said: "Maybe she wants to squash me or something." The insurance company came and I said I didn't want the policy. After a while I found out that my mother-in-law had that policy. I tried to get it, but she wouldn't give it to me.

Q. You tried to pay your mother-in-law for it? A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever pay any premium on that policy? A. No.

Q. You don't know how much it was taken out for, do you? A. I saw the insurance policy when the insurance man brought it over to the house. It was for $1000. He showed me everything, but I chased him back. I said: I don't want to sell my body for $1000.

Q. You know that your mother-in-law and Mrs. Klimek are good friends and have been for some time? A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever go to call on Mrs. Klimek? A. Yes. My wife used to go there in the daytime when I went to work. Mrs. Klimek would say, "Why don't you bring your man over here and let us see what he looks like?" We were passing one time and I stepped in. I sat down at the table and she gave us coffee and light lunch, and she gave me a sort of home brew. I drank that moonshine and said, "Why don't you take a little drink yourself, Mrs. Klimek?" She said, "Oh, I don't drink."

Q. Did your wife drink any of it? A. No. Mrs. Klimek tried to give me another shot. I said: "No, if you don't want to drink it, I don't want it." And from that time on I felt pains in my chest. I told my wife I felt kind of funny after I was there and she told me maybe Mrs. Klimek gave me too strong moonshine or something. Then after a while I felt worse. I've got it still worse now.

Q. How long ago was it that you were there? A. About three months.

Q. You have not been there since? A. No. I didn't go there after that because I found she was too friendly with my mother-in-law.

Q. You don't know who the policy was payable to? A. No.

Two Women Compared.

After the examination Mickey was asked where he was going.

"I'm going to see a doctor and find out what is the matter with me," he answered.

McLaughlin, the assistant State's Attorney in charge of the case, then sent for Mrs. Cornelia Koual, his mother-in-law, and Mrs. Martha Mickey, his wife.

Mrs. Mickey told the prosecutor that her mother was a sister of Mrs. Koulik and when questioned about the insurance she said, "My mother sent the agent up to my husband at the house and he took the insurance. He really didn't want to take it, so my mother took it and she paid for it."

Mrs. Mickey admitted that she had heard her mother tell Mickey that he would not live long. She verified his statement about the visit to Mrs. Klimek's home and the moonshine with its results.

An analysis of the types of the two accused women indicates that Mrs. Klimek is gifted with greater intelligence than Mrs. Koulik, according to Dr. J. M. Fitzgerald, expert phrenologist. The former is described as being of more than average intelligence, with planning ability and instincts of secretiveness.

She lacks sympathy, mercy or faith. Her belief is largely in herself and in the things she can do or get done, it is claimed.

As for Mrs. Koulik, she does not seem to grade up very well on the phrenological chart. Dr. Fitzgerald says she is not a woman of deep intelligence or cunning. She has a coarse type of personality. Animal instincts have ruled her for many years. Although she is strong-willed, she is of feeble intelligence. She can easily be influenced by others, although being of great stubbornness.

The phrenologist says nothing about a soul. He may never have heard of Harbey's comment, but there is nothing in his elaborate description that alludes to the finer qualities, the inner life that inspires and lifts and lights the eyes of a woman with a soul.

Methods Used in British Campaigns and Elections Compared to Those in U.S.

Ballot Takes Place in Great Britain at Irregular Intervals and Only When Important Issue Presents Itself—Time of Campaign Short.

By E. M. VIOLETTE,
Professor of History, State Teachers' College, Kirksville, Mo.

FOR the past few weeks we have had the unusual opportunity of watching at long range a national political campaign in Great Britain while busily engaged in one at home. We have just finished with ours, the English likewise brought theirs to a close last Wednesday. In many ways the methods employed in conducting political campaigns and elections in the United States and Great Britain are similar, but there are more differences than similarities, and these differences become all the more apparent and interesting when the two countries are engaged simultaneously as they have been recently.

In the first place we elect our representatives to Congress regularly every two years, while in England parliamentary elections occur at irregular intervals. At present the term of the House of Commons is fixed by law at five years, that is parliamentary elections must be held at the expiration of a period of five years. But they may come at any time. It all depends upon the Prime Minister. Whenever he perceives that the opportune moment for an election has arrived, he does not hesitate to advise the King to dissolve Parliament and order an election, and of course the King always acts on the advice of his chief minister.

Election May Be Put Off.

Ordinarily parliamentary elections in England are held a year or two before the expiration of the parliamentary term. They very rarely come at the end of the term. Sometimes they are held with only a very brief period of time intervening. For example, two occurred in 1918, one in January and the other in December. On the other hand, election may be deferred beyond the five-year term, if Parliament should consider the circumstances as warranting such action. In other words, Parliament may prolong its own term of office by a mere legislative act. This was actually done several times during the recent war. When the war broke out everyone in England was looking forward to a general election in the fall of 1914 or, at the latest, early in 1915, although Parliament had yet over a year to run. But just as soon as it became apparent that the war would be a prolonged one, all thought of an election while it was going on vanished. It was deemed inadvisable to precipitate a political controversy at home while the nation was engaged in a life and death struggle with Germany, and so Parliament put the election off from time to time during the war. As a result the general election that was due to occur by law not later than December, 1915, was not held until December, 1918, three years later.

It was not possible for us to do likewise after we entered the conflict and to defer our national elections until after its close. Under our Constitution, Congress does not have the power of itself to defer elections either in time of peace or war. Our elections are due to take place at fixed dates, it matters not what may be the circumstances. Of course we might have resorted to a constitutional amendment and thereby authorized Congress to postpone elections until after the war, if it saw fit, but amending the Constitution is a very slow process with us and doubtless would not have been effected in time to meet the emergency. As a result we had to undergo the turmoil and heat of a congressional campaign in the fall of 1918, just when we needed to concentrate all our energies and thought upon bringing the war to a successful close, and, of course, we reaped the consequences. Much of the bitterness that developed in this country after the war had its origin in that wartime election.

Cause of Recent Election.

The recent general election in England has been precipitated by the resignation of Lloyd George as Prime Minister. He had become Prime Minister in 1916 during the course of the war, succeeding Asquith, and was sustained in this position by the general election held in December, 1918. But for some time his hold upon the Government has been more or less precarious and his fall was, therefore, not altogether a matter of surprise. He was at the head of a coalition ministry, that is a ministry composed of men drawn from different political parties instead of just one party, as is the case in England under ordinary circumstances. Coalition ministries are formed very infrequently in England and only under extraordinary conditions. They are inherently weak and unstable. The old political rivalries and differences between the members of such ministries are not extinguished by any means. They smolder along, ready to burst into flame when the conditions that brought forth the coalition cease to exist. People are therefore always looking for the "smash up" sooner or later which ever a coalition is formed, usually they do not have to wait very long before their expectations are realized. Lloyd George, however, managed to maintain his power longer than was expected, by sheer personality, the vigor with which

ENGLISH WOMAN NOVELIST PLANS TRIP INTO JUNGLES

Lady Dorothy Mills, Who Dislikes Stereotyped Routes of Travel, Says She Likes Wilds.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Lady Dorothy Mills, novelist, daughter of the Earl of Oxford, her mother having been Miss Louise Corbin of New York, is soon to depart from England for another three months' adventure in tropical lands. In a few weeks she will sail from Liverpool for West Africa en route to Timbuctoo.

"This will be my first visit to that part of the world," said Lady Dorothy. "I will reach Dakar in about two weeks' sailing and will go up the Senegal River, then cross overland to the Niger, which flows within a few miles of Timbuctoo.

"Of course, this is but a rough outline of my proposed journey, for I really don't know whether I will reach Dakar, which is within the tropics, and there is also question how far the rivers are conveniently navigable at this time of the year. In the lower areas, at any rate, the tsetse fly has to be seriously reckoned with as regards the utilization of animals for transport, so it will probably be necessary to make the main portion of my journey by water.

"I've been all over Algeria, Tunisia and the borders of the Tripoli desert. I hate all obvious stereotyped routes. I love wilds—new places and curious things—and I hope to pick up 'copy' that I may embody later in a novel based upon my travels. Incidentally, I can use the rifle fairly well and if some big game comes my way I'll try my luck."

Off-Stage Triangle Drama of Actress, Actor and Producer Nears Final Scene

Birth of Babe to Edith Day, Musical Comedy Star, May Bring End to Bitter Broadway Feud

After Stirring U. S. to Deport Rival for His Wife's Love, Carleton Asks That Action Be Dropped

Producer Discovered Edith Day's Talent, Made Her Star of His Play "Irene," and Then She and Her Leading Man, Pat Somerset, Fell in Love and Eloped.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.

ONE never knows just what a dramatist has in his mind when he starts to write a play. Every dramatist has his own method. Some dramatists write the last act first, and then work up to this as a deliberately planned climax. Some of them plan their plays carefully after a formula that has been proven successful. Some even select several brilliant situations and work on them, letting the climax take care of itself and come when it will.

When Carle E. Carleton, theatrical producer, started to stage a triangle play featuring Edith Day, his wife, and Pat Somerset, her admirer, with the world for an audience, it was thought by every one that he had chosen for his great coup de theatre the deportation of Somerset. This would be the culmination of the romance between Edith Day and Pat Somerset, co-stars in "Orange Blossoms"—the lovers would be separated by the Atlantic Ocean!

Suddenly the dramatist, Carleton, changed his mind, and at the eleventh hour decided that the play would have a happy ending. The lovers would not be torn apart. Instead, the final curtain would find them clasped in each other's arms.

So Carleton immediately wrote a letter to the Commissioner of Immigration, earnestly begging him to drop the deportation action against Somerset, and announcing that he the dramatic love scenes are behind the curtain, long after the last curtain call and round of applause has sent the audience home.

In this romance, the lovers, united in the last act of the play, do not live happily ever after. From the looks of things thus far, it seems that their many troubles have just begun.

Edith Day, comely musical comedy maid, who brought "Irene" to New York several seasons ago, leading lady of "Orange Blossoms," is also leading lady in this drama behind the scenes.

She plays opposite (very much opposite, cynics would say) her husband, Carle E. Carleton, who has come out of his usual role as theatrical producer to take a prominent acting part. He is the protagonist. He plays a trebel role—the fairy king whose magic wand touched a personally withdraw from the case, as it was his wish to see the lovers free to marry.

But They Can't Flee.

But in spite of this letter and Carleton's change of heart towards the proceedings he instituted against Somerset, the lovers cannot flee into each other's arms and live happily ever after. They must await the results of the immigration officials' hearing.

And the movement of these officials is slow and deliberate and vacuous. The hearing on the afternoon of Nov. 13 was held back of closed doors, thus, without premeditation, increasing the tension of the audience and of the principals, too, for again they relinquish the center of the stage, retiring to the wings, as it were, expectantly awaiting the new interpolation that is to be woven into the texture by the decision of the board of inquiry.

All that is given out from this star session is that the papers in the case will be sent to Washington, there to be reviewed.

Both Carleton and Somerset appeared before the investigators as witnesses, and as the two left Ellis Island, Somerset remarked:

"When this thing is over, Carleton will see what we'll do. Any man should know that a man can't forge a check in England and get away with it. It is like most of Carleton's statements—just a lot of innuendoes."

Somerset there referred to the charge Carleton also had made that Somerset had committed acts of forgery in England.

Most of the action this drama of life takes place where people least look for thrills and romance—at the back door of the theater. Most of poor little maiden and made her Cinderella; the Prince, who married Cinderella and the ogre-husband, who would part the happy lovers by putting the Atlantic Ocean between them.

Enter the Matinee Idol.

Pat Somerset, debonair English matinee idol, the Prince who fell in love with Edith Day when she played opposite him in London in "Irene" and loved her even after the final curtain went down, is the other headliner. He is the man Edith Day declares she loves and will marry as soon as her husband frees her by divorce.

This love idol of theatrical folk, accustomed to enlist every dramatic situation of every age to stir their audiences, is strangely devoid of strong scenes, passionate avowals of love and complicated situations. Its simplicity is startling, but not the less effective.

The devotion of the lovers strongly suggests another notable theatrical love affair, that of Mrs. James Brown Potter. When she played in England she lost her heart to her leading man, Mr. Bellew, who became her devoted companion, and startled society by accompanying her for many years on tours throughout the world. The most flattering offers by producers could not part them for single engagements.

In order to fully appreciate the entanglement it is better to go back to the first act of the drama. This opens in a theatrical booking office some six years ago. Carle Carleton, formerly known as "the fighting bandsman" while leader of the British Guard Band, casting director of a moving picture concern, with "big time" theatrical aspirations, sees a wistful eyed young girl in the anteroom. Attracted to her, he learns she is Edith Day from Minneapolis and out of a job.

Stranded in New York.

She had been stranded in New York when Al Jolson's show, which she had stepped into during the illness of an actress when they played Minneapolis, broke up. She had tried to earn a living by playing "extra" parts in the movies and doing stunts for a news weekly, which netted her when it was steady work about $15 a week.

Carleton, interested in the dark-haired, blue-eyed girl who showed possibilities and had decided personality, gave her a part in "The Grain of Dust," the David Graham Phillips story he was casting for the "movies."

She made good. Carleton was pleased with her. One day he accompanied her to her music teacher's and found that she had a voice. Immediately he procured for her a part in "Follow Me," where she was understudy to Anna Held. She made a big hit in this and is still remembered for her unique "Tickle-Toe" dance number. Carleton was convinced that musical comedy was her metier. He dreamed great dreams for the little girl he had taken under his wing.

His dreams were realized when he asked James Montgomery to weave a musical show about Edith Day's personality.

"Irene," produced in 1919, was the result. It was the vehicle which rode Edith Day on all six, at high speed, to fame and fortune. Critics pronounced the dainty star "in her sweet little Alice blue gown" the musical find of the season. "Irene," the story of the little tenement girl who rose from rags to riches, in very much the same way as did its leading lady, was the darling of Broadway. All season it played to crowded houses. Edith Day, former "extra" girl, now received $2500 a week.

And little "Irene" was grateful, grateful with all her heart and soul to the man who had made her famous.

"I like you better than any man I know," she said to Carleton one night. "Let's get married."

Manager and Star Wed.

In December, 1919, Edith Day and Carle Carleton were married quietly and without elaborate preparations on Staten Island. News of their marriage was a surprise. It had been prefaced by no engagement, no gay wooing.

It was not Carleton's first venture into matrimony. According to the records, while an actor, he had figured in a romance with Vera Sheffield, a Worcester, Mass., girl, who had run away from her home and the advances of a wealthy man there, who had challenged Carleton to a duel. She became Carleton's bride in St. Louis. The two were quickly divorced.

The second act takes place in London, where Carleton, in the spring of 1920, took his wife and the musical show "Irene." Both repeated their New York success. "Irene" was the smartest of the season's offerings. Edith Day soon became a pet of London society. Her husband chose for her leading man Pat Somerset, English actor. The climax of the play came a little bit early, according to the laws of drama.

Al Woods himself might have staged the garden party given by the Duke of Manchester at his country home, for it had all the elements of his popular farces—charming rural settings and many gay lords and ladies frantically seeking to elude ennui. Vivacious Edith Day was one of the guests of honor. One of the party suggested a game guaranteed to thrill everyone present. It is something like our own "spin the bottle," according to those who have played it. But the man to whom the bottle points, instead of acknowledging the favor with a kiss, as we do in America, becomes the partner for the evening. It is all a deux.

Garden Party Episode.

The fateful bottle made Edith Day and Pat Somerset partners, so goes the story. And when they, like the rest of the newly mated couples, strolled off together they evidently forgot to come back or lost the way. At any rate they failed to come back for hours, while the distracted Carleton frantically searched, disturbing the other guests and creating a sensation when his wife and Somerset returned. He accused them of having been away long enough to make a tour of the entire countryside, let alone the Duke's gardens. Edith Day said he threatened to shoot her and himself.

This was the signal for things to happen in rapid fire succession. After the house party Carleton claims Edith Day disappeared, so upsetting him that he almost suffered a nervous breakdown. London society gossiped about the triangle which had suddenly appeared.

The status and outline of the triangle was definitely settled when Margaret Bannerman, Canadian actress, Pat Somerset's wife, sued him for divorce, naming Edith Day as corespondent. The sensational proceedings startled London. Miss Day's maids testified that Somerset had lived with Edith Day at Torquay, a fashionable watering place, as man and wife, and that a baby was born to them there.

After Margaret Bannerman won her divorce, she went back to her stage work. Carleton went on to Scandinavia, finishing the latter part of his intended wedding journey by himself.

While London theatrical, near-theatrical, and society gossips buzzed, Edith Day and Pat Somerset left for a vaudeville tour.

The following season Carleton came back to London to ask Edith Day to return to him as his wife. The tall Irish-Scandinavian husband, youthful in spite of his gray hair, told her he was willing to forgive and forget everything, and that he had bought a new play for her, "Tangerine."

She Refused to Return.

Edith Day promised him she would return to play the leading role in "Tangerine," but after cabling her for six months, with every message ignored, Carleton engaged Miss Julia Sanderson to play the lead in "Tangerine," which was one of the big hits of last season.

In January, 1922, he applied for a divorce, naming Somerset, and using the same evidence Somerset's wife had used in her divorce.

"I am doing it so she can be free to marry the man she loves," said Carleton. "I will make the way clear for them. I guess she married me out of gratitude. You know, there is gratitude and there is love. Just gratitude doesn't work. That was the trouble in this case."

Edith Day, in London, when she learned of the divorce suit, was frankly pleased.

"I do not deny the charges," she said. "I admit everything. I love Pat Somerset. We intend to spend the rest of our lives together."

"I left Carle Carleton on account of his insane jealousy, his tyrannical cruelty, and because he would not allow me any money while I was starring in London except $50 a week out of the $1250 I earned," she told nawspaper representatives.

"Somerset and I were only platonic friends until long after Carle Carleton began to forbid me to go anywhere. I could not even have women friends to lunch without his permission. Life stifled me to distraction.

"I promised Carle I would return to him in order to get rid of him, but I had definitely decided I could not live with him, so went back to playing with Pat. I hope and pray that nothing stops Carle's divorce from going through."

The hearing in Carleton's divorce was postponed until the following November.

Last Act in America.

The last act is staged in America. Edith Day came back to New York last July to play the leading role in "Orange Blossoms." Pat Somerset was engaged to play opposite her. Although he had planned to come back with her, for some reason he misled the immigration authorities and came to America by way of Canada.

But the fact that he came in another way did not mean that his affection for Miss Day was waning, for four of his suits of clothes were found in her luggage when customs officials searched her trunks.

Immigration authorities on complaint of Carleton, went to Somerset with a warrant for his deportation as an undesirable citizen. The warrant specified that clause in the immigration law which says, "Any alien who has been convicted of, or admitted the commission of, a crime involving moral turpitude, shall be expelled from the country."

"Moral turpitude" was the interpretation by Carleton of the love of Pat Somerset and Edith Day.

Somerset was placed under bond by the immigration authorities.

And at the eleventh hour Carleton's heart melted!

Frantically, on the eve of action, he rushed a letter to the Commissioner of Immigration asking him please to withdraw the case against Somerset. He felt a sudden tug at his heart-strings, not by the little extra girl he had made his wife, but by her child. He brings this motive out clearly in his letter to the Commissioner, saying:

"I feel that, regardless of what my personal feelings may be and the wrongs that have been done, there is another life—their child's—at stake. Inasmuch as the parents intend to marry as soon as the law allows, I think I should do my part in simplifying matters for the child."

Carleton's sudden reaction to the situation he was instrumental in bringing about fits in well with the dramatic situation. At the end, does not the bad man always reform and help unite the fond lovers?

Carleton, even in his final speech, runs true to type, as he says, wearily:

"I have thought much and slept little since that first hearing at Ellis Island. I figure that my wife, Miss Day, and Mr. Somerset took the course they did because they loved each other. My pride has kept me from seeing it in this light before. It would be futile to carry bitterness to an extreme, and with this decision I should like to wipe the slate clean."

He even adds a blessing with: "I hope all that has transpired will not hurt her career."

Final curtain—a happy ending.

"All's well that ends well." So Carleton, dramatist, would have it, in the theater—but this is a drama of real life.

The wheels of justice have been set in motion, and, in real life, they grind mercilessly sometimes. Seldom have they been known to clog. Even though Carleton has withdrawn his suit against Somerset, it does not mean that the authorities will not find him guilty of the charge against him.

PAT SOMERSET. CARLE CARLETON.

Here are three photographic poses of Edith Day, musical comedy star, who is the chief figure in a strange and unusual off-stage triangle. The one on the left shows her in the earlier days of the title role in "Irene," when she sang "My Alice Blue Gown," one of the most popular song hits of the time both in America and England. The picture in the center is a recent posed photograph while the one on the right was made recently when she arrived in America after starring two years with great success in "Irene" in London.

Methods Used in British Elections Compared to Those in United States led the country during the war, and his firm hold upon foreign matters just after the war, explain in large measure why he held on as long as he did.

Did Not Have to Resign.

The recent development of affairs in the Near East was the occasion of Lloyd George's resignation. However, he did not have to resign when he did. He could have remained in office and advised the King to dissolve Parliament and order an election, and then waited the results of that election to see whether they had been favorable to him or not. But he chose to resign and leave it to his successor to bring about the dissolution of Parliament. There was nothing obligatory, however, upon Bonar Law, the new Prime Minister, to bring on an election at once. The Parliament then in existence was not four years old and could have gone on for another year. But Law saw the wisdom of having an election now. A crisis in political affairs had been precipitated and an issue had been raised, and as a good politician he knew the value of having something definite in the way of an issue when undertaking a political campaign.

No Similar Advantage Here.

In this respect the party leaders in this country do not enjoy the same advantages that those in England have. Elections here occur with the mere passing of time, and the country goes through the throes of an election whether there is an issue worth while on which to base a contest or not. Occasionally congressional elections and even presidential elections have been held when the differences between the two leading parties at least have been little more than the difference between tweedle-dum and tweedle-dee. Such campaigns are lifeless and are without any real value. In England, however, a general election very seldom occurs unless there is some great issue before the country. Under such circumstances an election takes the form of a great referendum. If the people return a majority in favor of the ministers, they remain in power and put through their program; if not, they resign and a new ministry is formed.

Another noticeable difference between elections in the United States and England is in the amount of time devoted to campaigning. We spend months of time at the business. If we include the primaries along with the final elections, we give from four to six months to every national political campaign. On the other hand, the English devote, as a usual thing, not to exceed a month to their political campaigns. Since their time is so limited, their campaigns are started off more quickly than ours and go at a more rapid pace.

State of Preparedness.

The English are able to get their political campaigns under way promptly because the organizations of the different political parties are kept intact during the intervals between the elections. These organizations find it necessary to be in a state of preparedness all the time because they do not know when a crisis in the government will arise and an election will be precipitated. They, therefore, begin almost immediately after one election to get ready for the next. They busy themselves in compiling data and accumulating material that they think can be used when the next campaign comes on. Sometimes they spend vast sums of money in printing in advance placards, posters and pamphlets dealing with some question that they think will be an issue in the next election, and when the campaign opens they are ready to distribute this material all over the country without a moment's delay. Sometimes they make wild guesses as to what will be the coming campaign issues, and accumulate a large stock of material that they discover later cannot be used. But they consider that the loss of money thus incurred is after all negligible and is made up by the gains in other directions.

In this country our political party organizations practically lapse after every election. Our party managers know when they get through with one election campaign that another will not be held for two years, and so they practically close up shop and go about their own personal affairs. Not until the time for another campaign approaches do they open up and start the machinery going again. Indeed in some instances they have to build anew the machinery, as there is little left of the old.

The House of Commons.

The House of Commons is composed of representatives elected from borough, county and university constituencies. Borough constituencies are the larger towns. Ordinarily these towns are divided into parliamentary districts, each of which sends one representative to Parliament. But there are a few boroughs which are as yet undivided, as all of them were originally, and each of these undivided boroughs elects two representatives at large. The county constituencies are the rural parts of the counties, including the smaller towns. As a general thing there are several county constituencies in each county, and each of them sends one representative to the House of Commons. The registered graduates of 15 universities in England and Scotland compose the university constituencies and are entitled to elect representatives to Parliament; two of these university constituencies send two representatives each; two others send one each; and the remaining 11 are divided into two groups, one of which sends two representatives and the other three.

The returning officers of the borough, county and university constituencies, on receiving official notice from the Lord Chancellor that the King has ordered an election, announce the date and place of the election in their respective constituencies. Until recently the returning officers could fix the date to suit their convenience within a certain period of time, but the law now prescribes that the election shall be held on the eighth day after the royal proclamation dissolving Parliament was issued.

Process of Election.

When the day for the election arrives, the candidates for seats in the House of Commons appear before the returning officers of their respective constituencies and file what are called nomination papers. A nomination paper is a document naming the man who presents it as a candidate for a given constituency, and is signed by at least 10 registered electors in that constituency. If only one candidate appears before the returning officer of a given constituency he is forthwith declared elected. If, however, two or more candidates appear and file nomination papers, then the returning officer announces the date when the poll will be taken, that is, when the people will decide by their votes which of these candidates shall represent them in Parliament. He also announces the places where the voting will be done. Formerly he had some discretion as to the date of the polling, just as he used to have in setting the date of the election, and could fix it within certain limits to suit the convenience of the candidates and himself. As a result polling occurred on different days in different parts of the kingdom and sometimes as much as two or three weeks would be consumed before the polling throughout the country would be finished. But the law now prescribes that the polling shall occur on the ninth day after the election in all the constituencies where contents arise.

Almost invariably when two or

WASH KIDNEYS IF THEY HURT

Take Salts to flush Kidneys if Back pains you or Bladder bothers.

Flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much meat and rich food may form uric acid, which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

To help neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids so they no longer irritate, thus often ending bladder weakness.

more candidates file their nomination papers in the same constituency there is never more than one candidate from any one political party. If perchance two or more men in the same political party should aspire to be candidates in the same constituency, the political party association for that constituency chooses between these candidates the one that should submit a nomination paper to the returning officer on election day. In that way any rivalries that would divide the strength of a political party in a contest on polling day are avoided.

Sometimes One Can Bdate.

In many constituencies the political situation is so one-sided that only one candidate, the one representing the majority party, appears before the returning officer on election day and files a nomination paper. There are some congressional districts in this country in which the only contest is in the primary elections held in the majority party. But wherever that is the case, the one receiving the nomination must be formally elected later, even though no one from the minority party comes out to oppose him. In England, however, polling is dispensed with if only one candidate appears at election time. He is taken to be the choice of the people without the formality of a poll.

As a general thing, everyone in a given constituency knows long before the day of the election whether there is going to be a contest in that constituency or not. Hence campaigning really begins before the day of election arrives.

The first thing each candidate does is to announce himself through an election address to his constituency. This address is usually published in the form of a pamphlet of three or four pages, and it is also published in the newspapers. In this address each candidate sets forth his views on the issues of the campaign. There are no national party conventions in England to draw up party platforms as we have in this country. Each candidate makes his own platform, but as a usual thing he takes the address of the leader of his party in the House of Commons as a model and adheres more or less closely to that. In some instances, however, candidates write into their addresses provisions that are not in harmony with those of their political leaders, and in that way attempt to show their independence. Generally, however, those inclined to independence do not vary too far from the views of their party chieftains as that would likely lead to forfeiture of all political support from both the district and the national organizations of their party.

"Go Upon the Husting."

After issuing their election addresses the candidates take the stump, or, as the English say, "go upon the buting." Heckling the

...aker is much more freely interrupted in by the English than by us. Oftentimes it is carried on systematically by those who are employed by the opponent of the speaker to put up embarrassing questions. The season permits much of the public speaking is done out of doors, and in that case it is not unusual to find two or more speakers representing candidates of different political parties speaking from little portable platforms less than a hundred feet apart. In the larger and more important constituencies out of doors speaking becomes a kind of continuance performance from early morning until late at night as the polling day approaches. The speakers are organized in relays so that as one steps down from the platform another mounts and begins where the other left off.

Posters, placards, pamphlets, leaflets, party colors and badges are used much more extensively in the English election campaigns than in ours. This is particularly true of posters. These are very elaborately and artistically designed and are a powerful factor in developing sentiment in the constituencies. We found posters very effective in our Liberty Bond drives during the war, but we have not taken to them on a very large scale in our political campaigns.

Women Over 30 Get Vote.

When the polling day arrives all men in England over 21 years of age and all women over 30 years old and other local electors or the wives of such, are eligible to go to the polls and vote, provided they have been already properly registered. Only a short time ago, however, suffrage was not so nearly universal as it is now, but in February, 1918, while the war was still going on, a law was passed removing all restrictions on manhood suffrage and making a beginning towards establishing free womanhood suffrage. Some persons in England still enjoy the right of plural voting, that is, the right to vote in more than one constituency in a given election. But that right has been considered reduced. Formerly a man could vote in any constituency where he possessed property qualifications, and as a result many men were entitled to vote a half many times. But since February, 1918, no one has been allowed to vote in more than two constituencies in any general election.

The English have few elective officials and hence they operate under the short ballot system in both their national and local elections. In the former they vote only for members of Parliament and in the second only for members of either the town or county council, as the case may be. This is therefore a simple matter for the English as compared to what it is with us when we are called upon at a general election to vote upon candidates for national, state and local offices and also upon a great number of constitutional amendments and legislative propositions.

Small Slips of Paper.

The voting papers or ballots in an English election are therefore not great blanket sheets or long ribbons of paper as ours are, but are small slips of paper about the size of small bank checks. The voter on entering the polling place is given a voting paper by the presiding officer and goes at once into a booth and there prepares it by merely making a mark in front of the name of the person for whom he wishes to vote. After having that he folds up the ballot and drops it into the ballot box in the presence of the presiding officer.

When the polls are closed the ballots are not counted at the various polling places, as they are with us, but they are sealed up in the ballot boxes and brought in these boxes by the presiding officers of the different polling stations to one central place in the constituency, ordinarily the town hall or the county hall. The presiding officer of each station also brings with him a statement showing how many ballots had been delivered to him, how many were left over unused, how many were spoiled and how many therefore ought to be in the ballot box. This statement he gives to the returning officer. The returning officer then orders the ballot boxes to be opened and the ballots in each counted to see if the reports of the presiding officers as to the number of ballots in them are correct.

Then the ballots from all the polling stations are piled on a table and thoroughly mixed up. After that they are sorted out in separate piles according to the way they are marked. Those that had been cast for a certain candidate are put in a pile to themselves and those for each candidate in another pile. When this sorting process has been completed, a count is made and a record kept of the votes each candidate received. Counting the ballots is quickly and accurately done.

Results Posted.

As soon as the counting of the ballots is completed, the returning officer puts the results on an official card already prepared and posts it in front of the building where the count has been made. Later he makes formal report to the Crown office at London concerning the election.

Two days after the polling is held, Parliament is convened and the newly elected members take their seats. Parliament then remains in session to transact the immediate business before it is dissolved. This is in striking contrast to our practice. The Congressmen whom we elected last Tuesday will not take their seats until December, 1923, or over 13 months after their election, unless, perhaps, a special session of Congress is called shortly after next March. Of course we may repudiate an administration at the polls but we are compelled to remain under its authority four months before an opportunity for relief is afforded us. England, however, the will of the people as expressed at the polls is made to take effect immediately by dissolving Parliament within a few days after an election.

RATIONING OF SUGAR WILL BE STARTED IN PRUSSIA DEC. 1

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 18.—Sugar rationing will be introduced in Prussia, Dec. 1, reviving a policy adopted as a war measure, but which was dropped about two years ago when economic conditions improved. Revival of commodity rationing is attributed to scarcity of products.

When the law becomes effective, no person will be allowed more than one kilogram of sugar monthly, and will be able to obtain this amount only upon producing a written permit from the Government. All dealers, including wholesalers, will be required to obtain licenses for handling sugar.

The middleman's profit will be reduced to a minimum, and he will be prohibited from mixing domestic with imported sugar, and from requiring consumers to use a certain amount of the latter in order to obtain a quantity of the home products. Retailers will be permitted to sell only for household use. Sugar at present is retailing for 105 marks a pound, and is the first product to be rationed since wartime control was relaxed.

WE STOP FALLING HAIR IN 3 WEEKS

And Grow New Hair in 90 Days or Your Money Refunded, Under Our 90-Day Treatment Plan.

"The Wonderful Van-Ess Treatment"

Costs Nothing —unless we grow hair under our 90-day treatment plan. The Van Ess treatment is absolutely guaranteed. You are the sole judge. The warrant is signed by your own druggist. You assume no risk in making this test.

This New Way

Science discovers falling, lusterless hair due to simple infection (Sebum). Now quickly overcomes it. Hair actually grown on 91 heads in 100.

This is to offer you new hair—lustrous, beautiful, attractive—or money refunded under our 90-day treatment plan.

It offers, too, to stop falling hair in 3 weeks.

If we fail, the treatment costs you nothing. Your own druggist signs the guarantee. Hence we assume the risk.

Thousands of women have made this test. Results are amazing. The charm of wonderful hair is now available to anyone who chooses to have it.

The Infected Sebum in Your Hair

Sebum is an oil. It forms at the follicles of the hair. Its natural function is to supply the hair with oil.

But frequently it becomes infected. It cakes on the scalp; clogs the follicles and plugs them.

Germs by the millions breed in it, then feed upon the hair. Soon your hair begins falling. You note too, how lifeless it appears. In a short time, all the natural lustre and beauty are gone.

But—and note this scientific fact—remove the Sebum and the hair reverts back to the softness and brilliancy it displayed when you were a school girl.

The Van-Ess treatment accomplishes that result. We know you will doubt it. So we guarantee it.

We urge you to give this new way a fair trial. It is folly not to test it; for, remember, you take no risk.

Come to our drug store tomorrow. Ask for the Van Ess Liquid Scalp Massage on the 3-bottle treatment plan. Written guarantee accompanies it.

The Complete Van-Ess Treatment, Consisting of 3 Bottles, at $4.50 Is Sold On An Absolute Guarantee

THE VILLAGE MOVIE

By W. E. Hill

Hazel, the beautiful daughter of Mrs. Grady, the laundress, has been simply eating up a society film. Her whole life is to be altered. See how grandly she is gliding homeward, and say, if you dare, that Gloria Swanson or Bebe Daniels has anything on Hazel's queenly carriage. Tomorrow Hazel is going to have a talk with her mamma, and if Hazel's mamma doesn't promise never again to shame Hazel by taking in washing, Hazel will leave for Hollywood.

Mr. Tansey of Tansey's drug store and family. Fred Hanlon, while not exactly a member of the Tansey household, will probably land there sooner or later. Hasn't he been calling on Bernice Tansey every Wednesday and Sunday evening for going on two years. Bernice is very fond of the pictures. Many's the time she's been on the point of having a screen test made.

The lobby of any small town picture palace on a Saturday night is a pretty gay place. What with the young bloods of the town eyeing the girls as they come in and all that! Tonight we have with us Art Levinson, "Fat" Griggs and the Sternberger boys, Milt and Lewis of Sternberger & Rowe, purveyors to the well dressed men of Rumsohville. The Misses Bagley have just passed by. The youngest Miss Bagley can hang her hat in Fat's front parlor any old day. So says Fat, who really knows what's what. Fat saw "Bits and Morsels of 1922" in New York last spring "and maybe they didn't have a swell looking bunch of girls! Hot dog!"

Mrs. Abby Grant, the postmistress, waiting outside for her friend Mrs. Tomlinson. Mrs. Grant knows how interested Mrs. Tomlinson will be to hear about the postal now reposing in the Buckleys' mail box—from the eldest Buckley boy in Cedar Rapids. The last sentence Mrs. Grant couldn't quite make out.

Beautiful lady piano player galloping gaily through "Ten Little Fingers and Ten Little Toes" during that portion of the news weekly showing the funeral of somebody or other.

Between the news weekly and the feature film—"Weak Women" is showing tonight—Mrs. Ed Meeker remembers to tell Mrs. Charles Sodaberg the terrible bit of news that Mr. Meeker brought back from a business trip to Chicago. Listen———— and you will hear how Mr. Meeker saw old Asa Pratt's daughter—the wild one, you remember—in the city, all dressed up with furs and everythiflg! Now what do you make of that?

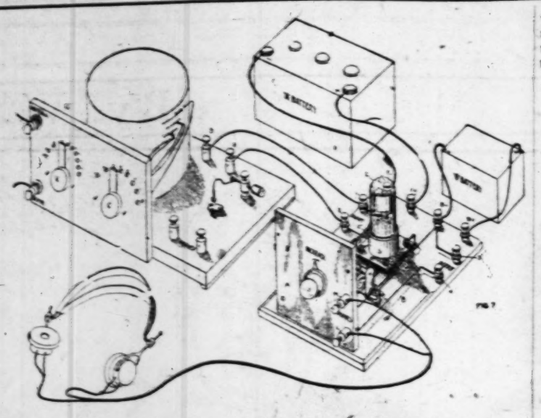
HOW TO MAKE AND USE AN AUDION DETECTOR

Bureau of Standards Issues Instructions for Assembling an Efficient Tube Detector.

The Post-Dispatch published last Sunday, the constructional details prepared by the Bureau of Standards, for a two-stage audio-frequency amplifier to be used with either a crystal or vacuum tube detector. For the benefit of those who have not yet made an electron (vacuum) tube detector, we give herewith the complete instructions, also prepared and issued by the Government.

The electron tube detector unit is shown in Figs. 1, 2 and 7. It is composed of a baseboard, B, and an upright panel, A. On the baseboard B is mounted an electron tube, E, shown only in Fig. 7, an electron tube socket S, good standard grid leak, R, a grid condenser, C, a by-pass condensor, C', and eight binding posts. On the upright panel, A, is mounted a filament rheostat, R' (the adjusting knob, J, is shown in Fig. 7), and two telephone receiver binding posts, L and M. The parts S, R, C and C' are also shown in Fig 3. Later it will be told how the various parts are assembled on the baseboard and the panel. No description is given of how the parts E, S and R' are made because these are all commercial articles. It is, of course, possible for one to make parts such as the electron tube socket, S, and the filament rheostat, R'.

Accessories needed are a six-volt battery, used for lighting the filament, often called the "A" battery, having an ampere-hour capacity of about 60, a 22½ to 45-volt dry battery, called "B" battery, binding posts, stiff copper wire, wood boards for the baseboard and upright panel, and two brass angle braces for supporting the panel. The "A" and "B" batteries are shown in Fig. 7. The "A" battery will usually be placed on the floor beneath the table upon which the other parts of the equipment are mounted. Its comparative size is much reduced in the drawing. An insulating material panel may be substituted for the wood if desired. The electron tube detector may also be entirely enclosed in a wood cabinet with a hinged cover, if desired.



How connections are made from the vacuum tube detector to tuner, phones and batteries.

Dimensions and lay-out for the baseboard of the vacuum tube detector.

Baseboard. (Figs. 1 and 3.)—The base B is any kind of dry wood about 6⅜ inches by 8⅝ inches by ⅜-inch thick. Eight holes are drilled through the base in which the binding posts are fastened. Spacing of these holes is shown in Fig. 3. By the addition of two more binding posts properly connected this detector may be used in a "regenerative" circuit when the binding posts are externally connected to a "tickler" coil coupled to the tuner. These binding posts are added to the detector baseboard B in line with the "input" binding posts Nos. 1 and 2 (see Fig. 1). They are 7-32 of an inch from the edge of the baseboard, and the four binding posts are arranged in such a manner that they are equally spaced, 1⅛ inches between centers. Referring to Fig. 1, the wire which leads from the terminal P of the electron tube socket is cut at some convenient place Q and the two ends thus formed connected to the extra binding posts. The method followed in making these connections does, of course, correspond with the style of wiring used in the complete electron tube detector unit. The connection X, from one terminal of the condenser C, is also removed and a longer wire connected from this terminal to the other side of the point Q, where the wire was cut. The base is arranged so that the three remaining sides and a hinged cover may be added without changing the relative positions of the binding posts. Under each of the four corners of the base B, rubber or wood feet or risers are fastened, in order that the binding post heads and wiring will be protected on the under side of the base.

Upright Panel. (A Figs. 1 and 4).—The panel A is any kind of wood about 4½ inches by 5 inches by ⅜-inch thick. In Fig. 4 a back view of the panel is shown which brings the two holes for the telephone receiver binding posts in the lower left-hand corner. If the panel is viewed from the front these two holes will be at the lower right-hand corner. It seems quite desirable that this board present a good appearance, it being the front panel. Four holes are drilled in the panel A, one for the bolt which fastens the panel to the brace (see L, Fig. 1), two for the telephone receiver binding posts L and M (Figs. 1 and 7) and one for the shaft of the filament rheostat R' (See Fig. 1).

The exact location of the hole for the rheostat shaft is determined from the rheostat itself. It is drilled so that the rheostat will occupy as low a position as possible allowing room enough to do the necessary wiring.

Electrn tube (E, Fig. 7).—The electron detector tube is a commercially available type. An electron tube is sometimes called a vacuum tube.

The election tube socket is of commercial design.

Grid leak and grid condenser (R and C, Figs. 1, 2 and 7.)—The grid leak and grid condenser may be purchased together or separately or they may be constructed. If one expects to use a detector type of electron tube (sometimes called "soft" or "gas" tube) it is recommended that these two parts be purchased with the tube, care being taken to select the proper values of resistance and capacity for the grid leak and the grid condenser, as specified by the manufacturers of the tube purchased The resistance of the grid leak will usually be between 1 and 5 megohms (1,000,000 and 5,000,000 ohms) and the capacity of the grid condenser will be about 0.0003 of a microfarad (300 micromicrofarads). If an amplifier type of electron tube (sometimes called a "hard" tube) is used, the resistance of the grid leak may generally be anywhere within the resistance limits specified above and the same size of grid condenser used as mentioned above. Experimental grid leaks may be made for such electron tube detectors. This is only suggested for its educational feature. If the two-stage audi-frequency amplifier is used also, it will be quite difficult to make a grid leak that will work satisfactorily. Such an experimental grid leak may be made from a piece of fiber about ⅜ inch wide, 1½ inches long and from 1-32 to ⅛ inch thick. Two ⅛-inch holes are drilled along the center line of the piece, about 1 inch apart. A line is drawn between the two holes, using India or drawing ink. Contact with the ink line may be made by the use of two brass (6-32 or 8-32) machine screws about ½ inch long and each equipped with one nut and two washers. The machine screws are put through the holes in the ends of the fiber strip with one washer on each side of the fiber strip. A small piece of tinfoil may be rolled up and wound around each machine screw between the fiber and the washer, so that the tinfoil pad will make contact with the ink line. When the nuts are tightened down, the tin-foil pads will flatten out and form a contact between the brass washers and the ends of the ink line. Since the ink line makes a partial electrical conductor of high resistance, the thickness and width of the ink line will determine the resistance of the grid leak to a great extent. The value of resistance may be decreased by inking the line over several times, until the electron tube detector works best.

Connections for each of the parts that go to make up a vacuum tube detector. The dotted lines indicate wires which pass through or run under the base.

By-pass condenser, (C' Figs. 1, 2 and 7.)—This is any small-sized fixed condenser having a capacity of from 0.0003 to 0.0015 of a microfarad (300 to 1500) micromicrofarads which may be purchased.

Binding posts (Figs. 1 and 2.)—The binding posts used on the base may be 6-32 or 8-32 brass machine screws each equipped with two nuts and two washers, if regular binding posts are not available. The telephone receiver binding posts, L and M (Figs. 1 and 7), should be of the set-screw type to admit the tips of the telephone receiver cords.

Filament rheostat (R1 Fig. 1).—As has been previously stated, the filament rheostat may be constructed but no details are furnished. If the rheostat is purchased, it is desirable to select one designed for panel mounting as well as one having a neat appearing knob and pointer. The rheostat should have a resistance of about seven ohms and a current-carrying capacity of about 1½ amperes.

Accessories.—The accessory batteries are commercial articles. The purchaser of a storage battery for lighting the filaments should get full instructions from the dealer for testing and recharging the battery. The dry "B" battery usually used for the plate circuit can not be recharged. The normal life of a battery of reliable manufacture is about six months. Storage batteries for use as "B" batteries are available. Their first cost is greater than that of dry batteries but they may be recharged.

Assembly and Wiring.

Wood finish.—It is essential in electron tube sets that the wood be protected from moisture. While the wood base and panel may be treated with paraffin as suggested in Circular No. 120, it was found more satisfactory to first dry the wood and then stain and varnish it, using a good varnish, preferably insulating varnish. Shellac is not recommended. It is rather difficult to give definite suggestions concerning drying and staining of wood. Wood may be put in a warm oven for an hour or so to insure more or less complete drying. A lamp-black or carbon pigment stain is not used ordinarily on such radio parts as it would be well to avoid the use of such. The stain and varnish are thoroughly dried before the apparatus is mounted on the wood baseboard and panel.

Baseboard (B Figs. 1 and 7).—The eight brass machine screws or binding posts are put in the holes already drilled in the baseboard. If machine screws were to be used the heads would be put on the under side of the baseboard with a brass washer between the head and the baseboard. A brass washer and two nuts are then fastened to each screw, on the upper side of the baseboard, with the washer next to the baseboard. The tube socket S, the grid condenser C, the grid leak R and the by-pass condenser C' are next screwed to the baseboard. (Certain types of condensers may be held in position by the wiring only). The exact location of these parts can not be stated because the several types of parts commercially available will vary somewhat in dimensions. One can get a very good idea of the relative positions of the several parts from Figs. 1, 2 and 7. The tube socket S is mounted so that the two terminals marked G and P (Fig. 1) are nearest the upright panel. Blocks Y and Y1 are put under the socket S, so that the four terminals of the socket do not touch the wood baseboard. This is done by cutting off two round wood blocks just long enough to raise the socket terminals clear of the base, and mounting them so that the screws which hold the socket to the baseboard will pass through holes in the centers of the blocks. After the socket S, grid condenser C, grid leak R and by-pass condenser C1 are mounted the parts are wired up. No. 14 bare tinned copper wire is used in wiring. This makes the connections stiff and self-supporting. This wire is ordinarily furnished in rolls. The wire should be straightened before it is used. It can be straightened by clamping or otherwise fastening one end solidly and pulling on the other end just hard enough to stretch the wire slightly. It is also a good plan in wiring such sets to have all wires run as directly as possible, neatly, and all bends made at right angles. When a wire is attached to a binding post, a loop or eye is formed on the end of the wire and the wire at the eye flattened with a hammer. This gives more contact surface.

Special lugs may also be soldered to the ends of the wire before the connection is made. A small hole is drilled through the baseboard just back of each of the tube socket terminals marked F (See Fig. 1). A short piece of wire is fastened to the right-hand socket terminal marked F and is then led through the small hole in the baseboard to the underside of the baseboard. The same wire is led to the binding post F and fastened between the machine screw head and washer underneath the baseboard. The same wire is further led to the binding post marked B, and fastened between the machine screw head and washer underneath the baseboard. All wires which are run on the under side of the baseboard are shown by dotted lines. A short piece of wire is soldered to the wire leading from the right-hand socket terminal marked F, just above the baseboard and led to the "input" binding post No. 1, and fastened between the washer and the first nut. This wire is shown as a solid line which means it is on the upper side of the baseboard. The wires do not touch the wood boards except at the terminals and where the wires pass through holes in the baseboard. The wires may all be raised more or less to accomplish this. The two terminals of the grid condenser C are conected to the two terminals of the grid leak R as shown in Fig. 1. A wire is soldered at V and led to the input binding post No. 2. This wire is kept quite close to the baseboard. Another wire is soldered at V and led to the tube socket terminal marked G. The remainder of the wiring is left until the upright panel is assembled and fastened to the baseboard. Notes on soldering are given later.

Upright Panel (A, Figs. 1, 2 and 7)—The filament rheostat R1 is mounted on the upright panel A so the two terminals will be in a convenient position for wiring. Two binding posts of set-screw type, L and M (Figs. 1 and 7), are inserted in their proper holes, and the upright panel mounted in position by bolting it to the two brass angle pieces (Z and Z1) shown in Figs. 1, 2 and 3. One of the telephone receiver binding posts L serves as a bolt. Two small holes are drilled through the baseboard near the two terminals of the filament rheostat R1. A wire is run from the "output" binding post marked 4 (Fig. 1) along the upper side of the baseboard to the back of the telephone receiver binding post marked L. A wire fastened to the tube socket binding post marked P and from thence led to the back of the telephone receiver binding post marked L, or else soldered to a convenient place on the wire leading from binding post L. These wires are shown in Fig. 1. A wire is run from the binding post marked 3 to the back of the telephone receiver binding post marked M and also a wire from B' to binding post No. 3, underneath the baseboard. One of the terminals of the by pass condenser C1 is connected at the point X and the other terminal of the condenser is conected at the point X1. The method of making these connections depends to some extent on the particular type of fixed condenser which is used. If the condenser be provided with flexible leads one of them is soldered at the point X and the other is likewise connected at the point X1. If the condenser is provided with lugs, connections are made by bending the wires into the proper shape and soldering thereto. A wire is run from the filament rheostat binding post marked T through the hole in the baseboard and thence along the under side of the baseboard to the binding post marked F'. This wire is shown in Fig. 1 by a dotted line. Likewise a wire is run from the rheostat binding post W underneath the baseboard and up through the left-hand hole in the baseboard at the rear of the electron tube socket S and connected to the left-hand binding post marked F. This completes the assembling and wiring of the electron tube detector unit.

Connections—It has already been stated that better results are obtained if the two-circuit tuner described in Bureau of Standards Circular No. 121 is used with the electron tube detector. However, the single-circuit tuner described in Circular No. 120 may be used, or the electron tube detector may be connected to any tuner not already supplied with an electron tube detector.

If the single-circuit tuner is used with this electron tube detector the several parts are arranged somewhat as shown in Fig. 7. The single-circuit tuner (shown at extreme left) is fully described in Circular No. 120. Two more binding posts are added in the back right-hand corner and wired as shown in Fig. 7. The greater portion of the wiring is beneath the baseboard. The wires shown as * * * are three already described in Circular No. 120. The wires shown as . . . are the new wires added. Such wiring will not disturb the set for use as a crystal detector receiving set. The amplifier unit to the right is the electron tube detector described in this circular.

K S D TO BROADCAST TWO SAN CARLO OPERAS

Radio Listeners Will Hear Salazar in "Aida" and Tamaki Miura in "Madame Butterfly."

There will be a rare musical treat for owners of radio sets on the nights of Jan. 14 and 16 next when the first two performances of the San Carlo Opera Company at the Odeon will be broadcast in their entirety through the Post-Dispatch radio station, K S D.

This will be the biggest broadcasting event of its kind since the performances of the St. Louis Municipal Opera were sent out from the Post-Dispatch station and enjoyed by thousands. It will have the added attraction of being the first broadcasting of grand opera from St. Louis.

The San Carlo offering on the opening night, Sunday, Jan. 14, will be Verdi's "Aida," the dramatic masterpiece of that great composer. Interest in this performance will be greatly heightened by the fact that the leading tenor role will be sung by Manual Salazar of the Metropolitan Opera Company, which has assigned him to sing some of the principal tenor roles made famous by Caruso. He has been specially engaged as a guest artist for the San Carlo tour.

Of equal interest and importance will be the performance of Puccini's romantic opera, "Madam Butterfly," on the night of Jan. 15. Here the radio owners will have an opportunity to listen to the beautiful singing of Tamaki Miura, the Japanese prima donna, who has been called the world's greatest "Butterfly."

The San Carlo Grand Opera Co. is one of the most brilliant and complete organizations of its kind ever assembled for touring purposes. For the current season it has been numerically strengthened and it has many world-famous singers on its roster of principals. It opened this year in New York with a series of 32 performances, comprising 25 different operas. It also has played highly successful engagements in Philadelphia and Boston.

It has been said of the San Carlo Opera Co. under the direction of Fortune Gallo that it has done more than any other one influence to bring grand opera to the masses and to make it popular. Gallo has devoted himself to the perfection of ensemble work as being at least as important as the exploitation of stars. The result has been that the performances of the company are of remarkably even merit, the choral work being of special excellence.

In the broadcasting of the San Carlo performances the method will be the same as was used in broadcasting the Municipal Opera, which was sent out last summer through Station K S D with great clearness and fidelity.

Accessory parts such as telephone receivers, "B" battery and "A" storage battery are also shown in Fig. 7. As previously mentioned the "A" battery is shown here reduced in size, and it is usually placed under the table upon which the rest of the apparatus is mounted.

If the two-circuit tuner is used with this electron tube detector the arrangement of the parts is similar to that shown in Fig. 7, except that the wires from the secondary are connected to the "input" binding posts of the detector unit.

The antenna and ground wires are connected as described in Circular No. 120 and as shown in Fig. 7. Binding post No. 5 (Fig. 7) is connected to binding post No. 1 and binding post No. 6, is connected to binding post No. 2. The telephone receivers are connected to the binding posts L and M as shown in Fig. 7. The red (positive*) wire of the "B" battery is attached to the electron tube detector binding post marked B* and the black (negative-) wire to the binding post marked B-. An insulated flexible copper wire is run from the red (positive1) terminal of the 6-volt "A" storage battery to binding post marked F (Fig. 7), and a similar wire from the black (negative-) terminal of the "A" battery to the binding post marked F-.

Operation—The filament rheostat knob J (Fig. 7) is turned to the extreme left and the electron tube E inserted in the electron tube socket S. The filament rheostat knob is then turned to the right until the electron tube filament becomes lighted, the brilliancy depending upon the type of electron tube used. When one of the telephone receiver terminals is removed from its binding post and again touched to the post, a sharp "click" in the telephone receivers will be an approximate indication that the circuit is in working condition. If the test buzzer as described in Circular No. 120 is available, it may be attached (as described) to the tuner binding post marked "ground" and then the rheostat adjusted until the sound in the telephone receivers is the loudest. The reader should bear in mind that the electron tube detector unit is merely substituted for the crystal detector and the tuning of the receiving circuit is the same as described in Circulars Nos. 120 or 121. When signals from a desired transmitting station are heard as loud as possible by tuning, the intensity may sometimes be improved by adjusting the knob on the filament rheostat so as to increase or decrease the filament current (current from the "A" battery). The knob is kept in the position of minimum filament current without reducing the strength of the incoming signals.

If a detector type of electron tube be used, the voltage of the "B" battery is changed until the greatest signal intensity is obtained. This necessitates the use of a tapped "B" battery.

The operator must not expect too much from the apparatus at the first trial, and even assuming that he has had experience with crystal detectors, some difficulty may be experienced in getting the electron tube to operate. In this case he should first ascertain if the various parts of the complete receiving equipment are properly connected; or, again, it may be found that some of the connections to the electron tube detector unit are improperly made. Special care should be taken to see that the "A" and "B" batteries are connected to the proper terminals of the electron tube detector unit. After a little experience the operator will find the electron tube to be much more positive in adjustments than the crystal detecter.

Notes on Soldering.

It has been stated above that certain connections were soldered. In fact, one could well advise that all connections about a radio circuit be soldered, but soldered correctly. There are some general hints that may be given, but judgment and experience are essential. The soldering copper must be clean and the tip well coated with solder. If the tip of the soldering copper is not bright, it should be filed clean. It is then heated, care being taken that the tip is not directly in the flame. After the copper is hot, but not red hot, it is dipped in the soldering flux or paste and the copper tip coated with solder. The wires are cleaned where the soldering is to be done, using fine sandpaper, then a small amount of soldering flux or paste is applied at the joint and the wires to be soldered are tinned or coated with solder before the wires are joined. After the wires are tinned they are soldered together, using just enough solder to make the joint solid. The joint should not be jarred while the solder is still soft; to do so weakens the point and gives the solder a dull appearance. A good soldered joint will be smooth and bright. All excess soldering flux or paste should be cleaned off. Gasoline or alcohol will assist in cleaning off the paste. This last point is sometimes overlooked and the excess flux often causes the copper wires to corrode.

For the first time in history, "setting up exercises" are now broadcast in Philadelphia, Pa. The health tonic exercises commence at 7:30 o'clock every morning and nearly 500,000 people are members of the physical culture class.

FLIMSY HIGHWAYS WASTE OF CASH

Must Get Away From Roads With "No Top or Bottom," Says Firestone Official.

One fundamental fact which stands out in all serious consideration of the great question of road building and road maintenance in the United States is that the country cannot stand still. There must be enduring progress, or there will be loss of ground already gained, according to L. G. Fairbank, general sales manager of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co.

For the people will not endure the burden of paying for the construction of costly highways, only to see them go to pieces in a year or two. The waste is intolerable, the cost too heavy to be borne. The improved roads much last longer, or they will not be kept up at all.

To put the problem that way is to show that road building must be better done and road maintenance must be more careful and more intelligent. America cannot sink back into the mire of highways which had "no bottom in the winter and no top in the summer." That period is past. We must go ahead, as a people, in the construction, use and enjoyment of good roads. Public sentiment decrees the progress which economic needs demand.

The movement toward heavier and larger vehicles, on improved roads, is in harmony with the progress of the age. It marches with the times. Similar changes are steadily going on in transportation by sea and on inland waterways. They have been marking and hastening the development of American railroads. They characterized the growth of the interurban trolley lines, until they ran into the hard and almost paralyzing conditions which were partly the result of the war and partly the fruit of unsound early financing and adequate construction and equipment, from the beginning.

Must Have Best Roads.

Everything points to increasingly powerful and capacious motor vehicles of various kinds, used in greater and still greater numbers, and such transportation will depend upon and necessitate roads solid enough and scientifically sound enough to bear the strain to which such traffic will subject them. The larger units will drive the smaller before them, on the public roads as they have done the same thing on the steam railways, the trolley lines, the rivers, the seas and even the canals.

Since all this is clearly foreshadowed and is plainly now at hand, the only escape from ruinous expense, in struggling with the road problems of a country which labors under serious climatic difficulties, is its sections of greatest population and heaviest traffic, is to prepare as rapidly as possible for the coming era of wonderful motor truck transportation by building roads which can "stand up" under the loads they must carry, and do it year after year, for long periods.

We must get more years, even though we have to accept less miles for our millions poured out in the building of highways. We must move more slowly but with fewer mistakes. It is imperative that greater value shall be obtained in building of highways. We must comprehensive, most elemental and basic part of our transportation system can never attain its proper development.

SCHROEDER MOTOR TO DISTRIBUTE STEARNS

The Schroeder Motor Co., recently organized by George S. Schroeder, well known in the automobile industry in St. Louis owing to his many years connection with the Vesper-Buick Auto Co., has been appointed distributor for the Stearns-Knight car in St. Louis and adjacent territory.

Schroeder prior to coming to St. Louis was connected with the Buick factory branch in Kansas City for six years.

The new company, which will hold their formal opening this week, have obtained a portion of the new large three-story Melbourne Hotel garage building at 3508 Lindell boulevard, for their sales and service departments.

The company's salesroom occupy the eastern portion of the building, with a frontage of 36 feet and a depth of 148 feet.

The new company will distribute both the four and the new six cylinder Stearns models, recently announced by the factory. The new six is larger than the present four cylinder model, which the company has been producing for the past seven years and which is to be continued.

The body lines of the larger model are similar to those of the four, excepting for the added length. The characteristic white striped radiator is used on the new models.

Several refinements in details are to be found on the six which includes such items as molded, beaded fenders; a high quality hand-buffed leather for the upholstery; German silver radiator shell and special drum type headlights. Tire equipment consist of 34x4½-inch cords.

The engine is of the same general design as the four, and all other units with the exception of the frame are interchangeable between the two models.

Seven body types will be mounted on the six-cylinder 130-inch wheelbase chassis. These, with their prices, are: three passenger roadster, four and five passenger open models, $3700; seven passenger touring, $3850; coupe, $3350; coupe-brougham, $3500, and sedan, $3700.

MOON DEALERS REQUEST 15,625 CARS IN 1925

Fifteen thousand, six hundred and twenty-five Moon cars were sold at the two-day convention of Moon distributers throughout the United States, which was held Monday and Tuesday at the Moon factory, according to announcement made by Stewart McDonald, president of the Moon factory, as a banquet held Tuesday evening at the Missouri Athletic Association.

McDonald stated that prior to the convention the factory had set a goal of 15,000 cars for 1923, but from the amount asked for by the distributers, it may be necessary to build considerably more.

The history of the Moon Motor Car Co., from the time it was organized by Joseph W. Moon in 1906, up to the present time and the difficulties encountered in the early days of the automobile industry was also told by McDonald.

He also stated that the monthly production of the factory has been increased to 1250 cars per month and that the factory had shippings orders for the next three months of 4735 cars.

Other speakers and the topics on which they spoke at the banquet were C. W. Burst, works manager on important factors and elements entering into production; George H. Kublin, chief engineer, on the engineering principles; J. F. Oberwinder, vice president of the D'Arcy Advertising Co., on prospect for 1923; J. C. Lebens, on news; N. E. McDarby, advertising manager of the factory, on the part advertising plays in putting it over and what we will do in 1923. Earl F. Nelson, assistant treasurer, financial co-operation for the dealer, and F. H. Renges, sales manager, on sales plans for 1923.

Former United States Senator Xenophon P. Wilfley, attorney for the Moon factory since 1907, was toastmaster.

NEW COMPANY PAINTING CARS IN 3 to 6 DAYS

A new system for painting automobiles is announced by the Lykglas Auto Renewal Co., which opened quarters recently at 5255 Delmar boulevard. "A quick-drying paint and a secret chemical enables us to turn out a complete burnoff job in six days or a refinish job in three days," says F. J. Bury, manager of the company.

Mr. Bury claims that from the time the final sealing coat of the secret chemical goes on the car, the Lykglas finish is glass-hard and lasting and the car looks as good as it did the day it left the factory.

A burnoff job is necessary when the finish is badly cracked or worn, while a refinish job is sufficient when the finish is merely dull.

The company occupies the entire second floor of the large building at the above address. Mr. Bury was formerly in charge of the paint shop of the Packard Motor Car Co.

MOTOR CAPITAL TWO TIMES THAT OF BANKS

Frank B. Ansted, president of the Lexington Motor Co., Connersville, Ind., in a recent address before bankers caused considerable surprise when he said: 'Few people realize that the automobile industry has grown to such magnitude in a short time that today the capital invested in it is twice the capital of all the national banks in this country!"

Mr. Ansted takes as the latest total of the capital of all the national banks the figures $1,276,177,000. The amount of capital invested in the automobile industry is considerably in excess of $2,000,000,000.

Mr. Ansted predicts that the industry will build 2,500,000 cars in 1923.

With the exception of agriculture (which is not a manufacturing enterprise), the automobile business is America's greatest business.

The value of the 1922 output will be approximately as follows:

Automobiles	$1,350,000,000
Tires	675,000,000
Replacement parts	550,000,000
Accessories	150,000,000
Total	$2,725,000,000

There are today 81,000 retail trade units responsible for the distribution of automotive products. This is exceeded only by the sale of food products, cared for by 195,000 retail grocery stores.

The number of dealers in other staple lines ranges from 47,000 drug stores down to 30,000 shoe stores, all substantially under the total trade units engaged in merchandising automotive products.

NEW CHALMERS SIX COACH NOW ON DISPLAY

The new Chalmers six five-passenger coach recently introduced by the Chalmers factory is now being exhibited in St. Louis for the first time in the showrooms of the Ward Motor Co., Inc., local distributers.

Distinctive features in design are found in the unusual width of the body, the broad doors, the front seats, which fold and then tip forward—the driver's chair, completely clearing the steering wheel and wide windows all around, offering a clear view for all passengers.

The body is maroon, with balck superstructure. A carmine stripe on maroon runs around the body several inches below the belt. Black disk wheels, with maroon trimming, add to the striking appearance. The substantial fabric covering of the rear and rear side panels is cut in one piece and running from one side window to the opposite side window. The roof is also fabric covered.

Interior trim is in broadcloth, with hardware of satin finish. The door window lifters are of the lever type. Rear quarter windows are operated by a strap.

A large trunk is mounted on a nickeled trunk rack at the rear. For this a dust cover is also supplied. Wood trunk mars of natural finish protect the body. Additional equipment includes parking lights, windshield visor, rear view mirror, windshield cleaner, dome light, nonskid cord tires, five disc wheels, heater and windshield of doube ventilating type, with the upper glass hinged from the top and the lower from the bottom. The new model lists at $1585, Factory.

NEW FORD SEDAN NOW ON DISPLAY

The first of the new Ford four-door sedans made their appearance in St. Louis last week in the various Ford and Lincoln authorized dealers.

The new model is an addition to the line and lists at $725 factory. The present two-door sedan, which sells for $595, factory, will be continued.

The new model is equipped with an aluminum body, which is three inches larger and one inch lower than the two-door sedan. It has a more square design, with a rounded cowl. It comes equipped with a dome light, sun shade, door-locking handles, new type windshield and crank type window lifts.

The front seat is divided into two sections, which permits the driver to remain in the car when getting gasoline.

WICKS NAMED MANAGER OF APPERSON BRANCH

Maj. E. M. Lubeck, who recently was appointed general sales manager for the Apperson Bros. factory of Kokomo, Ind., manufacturers of the Apperson eight, announced Wednesday that Maj. A. J. Wicks, for the past three years assistant general manager of the Cadillac Automobile Co. of St. Louis, had been appointed manager of the Apersan St. Louis Motors Co., a direct branch of the Apperson factory.

Wicks, who assumed his new duties Wednesday, has been connected with the automobile industry in various capacities for the past 15 years. Prior to joining the Cadillac company Wicks was located in the East.

The Apperson St. Louis Motors Co., who are now occupying the building at 2814 Locust street as temporary headquarters, expect to move into their new sales and service building at the northeast corner of Jeferson and Locust street about Dec. 15.

ACCESSIBILITY OF CAR CUTS OPERATING COSTS

"The man who drives into a garage with a car which has been designed with much attention to the accessibility of all working parts immediately gains the respect of the garage man," said C. Merry of the Wilson Motor Car Co., local Dort distributers, in discussing the motor of the Dort six. "Accessibility cuts down time on minor adjustments and thus reduces operating costs. Every adjustable part on the Dort six motor is easily accessible."

SHIELDS-KRATKY TO SELL MAXWELL-CHALMERS

TALKING STUDEBAKER TO BE SHOWN HERE

A Studebaker car which, it is claimed, talks, sings and plays music, will be exhibited in the salesroom of the Weber Motor Car Co., 1817 Locust street, beginning Monday.

According to the Weber Motor Co., this car is unusual; in fact it does everything that a human can do. It will talk, it can see and hear, it plays music, sings songs and performs many clever antics, that makes it quite extraordinary. "The Talking Studebaker" comes here direct from Chicago, where it has been shown for more than 30 days.

The car will be on display from 10 a. m. until 12 noon; then from 2 p. m. till 5 p. m., and from 7 until 10:30 each evening this week.

CLOSED CARS RAPIDLY GAINING IN FAVOR

Advance in public favor of the enclosed type of automobile is due in large measure to progress that has been made during the past few years in the art of coach building, says F. C. McDonald of the Southwest Nash Co. Durability over a long period of years is of as great importance as are the features of riding comfort and appearance in the construction of Nash enclosed bodies built in the Nash body plants in Milwaukee.

Never before in the history of the Nash Motors Co. has the demand for the six-cylinder coupe for four-passengers been as heavy as this fall. In this car luxury and appearance are combined with body construction that insures against loosenings and rattles. The car is well proportioned, its body lines being in keeping with other Nash models. The seats are broad. The upholstery is of closely woven mohair. Easy riding springs and long wheel base give additional riding comfort.

STUTZ ANNOUNCES NEW SPEEDWAY "4" SERIES

The first public announcement of the new series Stutz Speedway "4" which replaces the "KLDH" series was made Wednesday at Indianapolis following a testimonial dinner given in honor of Messrs. Charles M. Schwab, Eugene V. R. Thayer, and Carl Schmidtlapp, which was attended by distributers and dealers of the Stutz Motor Car Co.

The new Speedway series is simply the continuation of the former models with certain minor refinements and improvements, and its announcement comes in advance of the formal presentation of the car at the New York Automobile Show.

The Speedway "4" series of cars embody the Stutz "DH" engine and the compensating spring suspension.

The prices of the Speedway "4" series were announced as follows: 7-passenger touring car, $2640; 4-passenger speedster, $2790; 2-3-passenger roadster, $2450; 4-passenger coupe, $3490; special bearcat roadster, $2760; 4-passenger with California top, $3165; 7-passenger with California top, $3015; custom-built 5-passenger sport sedan, $4450. All of these prices being f. o. b. Indianapolis.

SAFETY WORK INCREASES BRAKE LINING DEMAND

American automobiles and motor trucks next year will use 5876 miles of brake lining, or enough to stretch a bridge of brake lining from San Francisco to Shanghai, according to a forecast made yesterday by W. H. Burke, local manager of the automotive department of Johns-Manville, Inc., following a survey of automotive industries conducted through the company's 53 branch offices.

"The 1922 brake lining consumption can be conservatively estimated at 31,025,000 feet," said Mr. Burke. "Of this amount, 20,000,000 feet will be needed for replacements and the balance for equipping new cars and motor trucks. Dealers report a brisker demand for brake replacements as a result of recent campaigns by the press and by public organizations for the prevention of accidents."

It was estimated that asbestos mines here and in Canada, to meet the demand for asbestos brake lining, will have to produce more than 32,000 tons of crude ore.

HENDEE ANNOUNCES NEW INDIAN CHIEF

The Hendee Manufacturing Co. announces a new super-powered model, the Indian Big Chief, of 74 cubic inch piston displacement. The original Indian Chief of 61 cubic inches, brought out in 1911, made a decided hit with the motor cycle trade both in the domestic and export field, but there seemed to be a demand from those interested in the trade for a machine for side-car use, with greater power and speed, but embodying the same engineering principles of the orignal Chief.

The new model sells for $345 f. o. b. factory.

COWL VENTILATORS USEFUL IN WINTER

O. W. Koch of the O. K. Products Co., manufacturers of the O-K cowl ventilators for cars, points out a very useful need for cowl ventilators in winter as well as summer, especially so where the cars are closed up. He states many people have become ill from poison gases entering cars from running engines. This gas, carbon monoxide, according to Koch, affects the hemoglobin, the albuminous substance of the blood, so there is no chance for oxygen to be picked up and the tissue cells supplied.

The cowl ventilator, which excels the windshield in this respect in that it can be adjusted so as to experience little or no discomforts to occupants in winter driving, causes a steady stream of fresh air to circulate the car, starting at the proper place, namely, the bottom of the car, where the gases are the worst. He also states that the motor should not be left running in small garages where the doors are closed.

Beware of Poisonous Gases.

Running the engine of a car to warm it up in a small closed garage is almost as dangerous as blowing out the gas before going to bed.

Pretty Colors Not Serviceable.

Pasted colors and shades of automobile bodies will not stand the sun and bad weather so well as the deeper tones.

If the car will not coast freely with gears or clutch disengaged, it indicates binding in bearings of the front wheels or some part of the rear axle. Usually the cause is due to the brakes, which have not been set so that the bands are free of the brake drum.

TRAVELING "BUNGALOW" BUILT TO FIT REO CARS

"'Auto-Bungalow' ought to appear in all new unabridged dictionaries, to describe a complete home on wheels," says Mr. H. F. Fahrenkrog of the Kardell Motor Car Co.

"The auto-bungalow is a hybrid, born of the camping life now the vogue everywhere. Up to this time these outfits have mostly been homemade, without any thought of body lines or standardized equipment.

"Today many companies are springing up all over the country manufacturing nothing but equipment of this nature. From California comes a description of a new camping body built for the Reo speed wagon chassis which frees the tourist from hotel life and makes traveling a real pleasure.

"The height of this body is sufficient to allow occupants to stand erect inside. Airplane spruce is used largely in the construction to prevent the superstructure from being top-heavy.

"The interior equipment includes writing desk, combination buffet and ice chest, Ottoman bed of Pullman type, clothes closet, gas stove, white enameled sink with closet for cooking utensils, hot and cold circulating water, toilet, two revolving portable leather-covered chairs, collapsible dining table, clock, rear view mirror, floor covered with battleship linoleum, nickel-plated and glass hardware, opaque curtains and interior portieres (insuring privacy), and two dome lights provide sufficient illumination.

"The interior is stained and varnished; the exterior is painted and finished in colors selected by the purchaser. Ventilation is obtained by means of drop windows, which in each case are supplied with screens. There is a door on the front right-hand side and a rear door with folding step.

"Some purchasers of the speed wagon auto bungalow are fitting them with radio outfits. For those who wish to travel with a driver or servant, an arrangement is being made for hanging an auxiliary bed and tent on the outside of the vehicle.

NEW PEERLESS COUPE MAKE APPEARANCE

The new Peerless two-passenger roadster coupe has just made its initial appearance in the trade.

Some of the features of the new closed model are rear and rear side panels covered with a weather-proof top material. The interior is finished in a quality motor cloth of restful and neutral shade, setting off to advantage the design embodied in the window lifts, door-pull handles, dome light, instrument board and so on.

The cover to the rear deck lifts high and free, giving access to a storage compartment capable of holding a good-sized trunk or several suitcases and traveling bags. And just behind the driver's seat there is a removable section which allows direct entrance to the articles underneath.

Driving comfort is simplified by the easy accessibility of the steering wheel, control levers and pedals, while safety is assured by the addition of a sun and rain visor, a rear view mirror and windshield wiper.

Standard equipment includes an electric rear signal, cowl ventilator, engine-driven tire pump, tools, motometer, inspection lamp with extension cord, etc.

The Park Automobile Co. are distributers for the Peerless cars in St. Louis and adjacent territory.

NEW HAYNES 55 SPORT ROADSTER ON DISPLAY

The new 1923 Haynes 55 two-passenger sport roadster recently announced by the Haynes factory is now being exhibited by the Wilson Motor Car Co., Haynes distributers.

The roadster is one of the four new 1923 Haynes 55 sport models—the other three being the five-passenger touring car, the three-passenger coupelet and the five-passenger sedan.

One of the features of the roadster is the fact that it is completely equipped with all sport accessories and finished in a rich maroon color.

The new model is equipped with six disc wheels and six cord tires with the two extra wheels being carried, one on each side, at the front; the windshield wings, the front and rear bumpers and the rubberized weather-proof khaki top or standard black top.

Individual steps, trunk carried in the rear, nickel-plated radiator, head lamps and exterior cowl lights and a high hood are extra features.

DUESENBERG TO BE SHOWN AT JEFFERSON

The first public exhibition of the Duesenberg straight eight, winner of the Grand Prix auto race last year, will be held in the Jefferson Hotel for 12 days, starting Wednesday, according to announcement made yesterday by Arthur Walsh of the Duesenberg Corporation, 3918 Olive street, who recently were appointed distributers for Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois.

The car, which is built in six different models, three open and three closed, with color optional to the purchaser, lists at $6500 and up, f. o. b. factory.

McDonald on Vacation.

F. C. McDonald, president of the Southwest Nash Co., has left for the gulf on a vacation, the first he has taken during the 15 years in the automobile business. Incidentally, those 15 years have all been with the same organization, the Nash and Jeffery, of which the Nash is its successor.

Before leaving Mr. McDonald said that while he did not look for phenomenal business this winter, he nevertheless believed there would be a fair business all winter for the stronger lines. Beginning in February I am confident we automobile men will see a tremendous business all through 1923 and it is my guess it will be on a rising basis.

HUDSON

$1625
Freight and Tax Extra

A revolutionary thing to do

Moderate cost can't cover everything.

In creating the Coach, a new type closed car, Hudson frankly ruled out useless vanities and adornments. It put the cost in the real things of automobile worth—utility, comfort, convenience, reliability and first rate performance.

And for the first time made possible a closed car, under $2000, on so great a chassis as the famous Super-Six.

It changed the trend of closed car buying

Prior to the creation of the Coach there was no moderate-priced closed car to be had on a first-rate chassis. Closed car comforts at open car cost were unknown. So the sales of the Coach made a new mark in the closed car field. It was no longer necessary to sacrifice car performance in order to obtain a closed car at moderate cost. In the Coach one can get satisfactory utility without having to buy fancy fittings.

In the Hudson Coach at $1625 you get every practical closed car advantage. You get the new Hudson Super-Six motor and car performance that is world famous.

By the elimination of unimportant fittings you can get the Coach for only $50 more than the cost of the open model. And you will be proud of the Coach in appearance, comfort and utility.

STRAUS & CO. TO FINANCE HOTEL BUILDING HERE

Arrangements for Financipg Extensive Projects Made With Investmnet Banking Concern.

FIRM PROMOTED MUCH WORK HERE

Head of Enterprise Says Lending of Money in St. Louis Is Considered Matter of Good Business Policy.

By Berry Moore.

Projects have been disclosed recently for construction of apartment buildings and hotels on a large scale. Financial arrangements have been made with S. W. Straus & Co., a national investment banking concern, with headquarters in New York and branch offices in St. Louis, for the execution of several of these projects, including an apartment building to be erected at the northwest corner of West Pine boulevard and Euclid avenue, at a cost of $500,000 by clients of the Weisels-Gerhart company, as was noted in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch.

Harry Horowitz, through the Weisels-Gerhart Company, announced plans yesterday for the construction of an apartment building at the northwest corner of Buckingham Court and North Court, between Euclid avenue and King's highway, West Pine boulevard and Laclede avenue, at a cost of $250,000. This project is being financed by the Weisels-Gerhart company, through which Horowitz purchased the site, which has a frontage on Buckingham Court of 220 feet by a depth of 100 feet.

As exemplification of faith in St. Louis, S. W. Straus & Co. during the last two years has financed construction here to the extent of $4,-000,000, which, with the loan at West Pine boulevard and Euclid avenue, for $500,000, is increased to a total of $5,192,000.

Buildings Financed by Straus.

Buildings in St. Louis financed by S. W. Straus & Co. include: Chase hotel, corner Lindell boulevard and King's highway, $2,700,000; Chase apartment building, northwest corner Lindell boulevard and York place, $500,000; Chester apartment building, Lindell boulevard, 125 feet west of York place, $400,000; Bransche (The) apartment hotel, 5364-66 Pershing avenue, $430,000; University Club and office building, northwest corner Grand boulevard and Washington avenue, $525,000; Plymouth apartments, northwest corner Argyle and Euclid avenue, $325,000; Park apartments, northeast corner Lindell boulevard and York place, $27,500; Exeter apartments, southeast corner Argyle and York places, $32,500, and York apartments, northeast corner Argyle and Park avenues, $32,500.

Proclaiming its confidence in the future of St. Louis, the Straus firm announces that it has unlimited funds to devote to high-class construction here. Outside capital has become extraordinarily interested in the development of St. Louis. Within the last year, the New York Life Insurance Co. and the Prudential Insurance Co. have recognized St. Louis to the extent of establishing mortgage loan departments here. These institutions are represented in the local real estate field, respectively, by the Boatsmann-Spackler Real Estate Co. and the Franciscus Realty Co., of which James M. Franciscus is president.

Rosenbaum Sons Investment Co., of Chicago is another foremost concern which is financing construction here on a large scale. It has offices in the Third National Bank Building.

In discussing the policies of the Straus firm in connection with the building of St. Louis, S. W. Straus, president of the company, whose St. Louis offices are in the Boatmen's Bank Building, said:

"The loans that we have made in St. Louis are certainly tangible evidence of our complete faith in the growth and development of your great city.

"We are in close touch with every other city of importance in the country and are constantly studying the conditions existing in each of these centers. Inasmuch as the safety of the first mortgage bonds which we sell to our customers is by far the chief point of consideration with us, we make loans only in cities that measure up to the highest standards of development. Therefore, when we underwrite as many large first mortgage bond issues on important new building operations as we have in the last year and a half in St. Louis, it not only shows the local conditions have been carefuly analyzed, but also that we consider the lending of money in St. Louis under the usual safeguards of the Straus plan a matter of good business policy on our part.

"Building Aids Other Industries."

"We are indeed very glad that we have been in a position to help so materially in the development of St. Louis. It was the vision of the founder of the firm that our house should become an important factor in the development of our country and in providing more building facilities where they were needed. Hence, the co-operation we are giving the people of St. Louis in construction activities is in line with the fundamental purposes of our company's existence. The building industry is one which has a very stimulating effect upon all lines of industry. Its ramifications are so widespread that when we have active building operations, all lines of commerce and industry are more or less benefited. It also is to be borne in mind that buildings represent the creation of new wealth. The value of taxable property is enhanced by these improvements. Labor which otherwise might be idle becomes of value and many otherwise valueless basic elements are turned into units of wealth.

"I also wish to call attention to the fact that under the Straus plan the loan is being constantly repaid in the form of monthly deposits of principal, so that eventually the mortgage is completely liquidated out of the earnings of the property. By this process it will be seen that funds which have been utilized in the erection of one building flow back into the industry and are made use of in further building. Thus the ability of our house to give unlimited support to the upbuilding of thriving and substantial cities like St. Louis is greatly enhanced."

Far-sighted business men of St. Louis believe that the present great activity in building circles—approaching the intensity of an old-fashioned boom—is merely a start towards the vast amount of construction which must still be carried through in order to meet the growing needs of the city and to stabilize the rightful place of St. Louis among the great cities of the country. The faith and vision which has been evidenced by capitalists operating on a nation-wide scale should go far towards waking our people up to the importance of the present building movement and the tremendous possibilities of the future.

JAPAN'S NAVAL BUDGET SHOWS DECREASE OF 117,000,000 YEN

Nippon Official Says U. S. Gave Assurances Its Estimates Would Accord With Washington Conference Ideas.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Nov. 18.—Before the framing of Japan's naval budget which shows a decrease of yen 117,000,000 as compared with that of the current year, the Foreign Office, an official has said, had received assurances from the American Government that the United States' naval budget would be drawn up in the spirit of the Washington conference. Japan gave similar assurances.

The conversations which brought about the understandings were carried on by Charles B. Warren, American Ambassador at Tokio, and Foreign Minister Uchida. Both expressed the desire of their Governments that the budgets should accord with the naval treaty of Washington.

Competent officials here are satisfied that Japan's budget for the coming year complies with these assurances. The budget for the year which will end in March, 1923, is yen 393,662,000. That for the next fiscal year is yen 276,000,000.

GUSTAVE GOETSCH WINS FIRST PRIZE IN THUMB-BOX EXHIBIT

Other Awards in St. Louis Art League's Eighth Annual Exhibition Are Announced.

Awards in the St. Louis Art League's eighth annual thumb box exhibition, which has been in progress at the City Art Museum in Forest Park, were announced yesterday by the jury, comprising Dawson Dawson-Watson, chairman; Oscar E. Berninghaus and Frederick G. Carpenter, with Fred Rushing Rowe as alternate.

The Art League's six prizes were awarded as follows: Pictures, Gustave F. Goetsch, first; Marcel Olis, a new exhibitor, second. Sculpture, Victor S. Holm, first; Sheila E. Burlingame, second. Handicrafts, Henrietta Ord Jones, first, for an exhibition of pottery; Josie K. Wangelin, second, with jewelry designs. The Town Club purchase prize was won by Tom P. Barnett's picture, "Late October." The Wheaton C. Ferris prize was divided between Ralph W. Wolceske's "Mississippi," and Mrs. Kathryn E. Cherry's "From My Window."

The exhibit will continue through November at the museum and afterward will be taken to the Art League's galleries at the Planters Hotel.

The jury reported that there was a general excellence about the exhibit, which made it difficult to award prizes.

FEDERAL HELP IN MISSOURI INCOME TAX INQUIRY SOUGHT

State Auditor Believes Missouri Is Receiving Less Than It Should From Corporations.

Federal officials will be asked to assist in an investigation of an apparently unreasonable difference between the income tax paid by Missouri corporations to the Federal Government and that paid to the State by State Auditor George E. Hackmann and his chief field examiner, Dan G. Stewart, who will depart from St. Louis for Washington at noon today.

"We believe that, considering the difference in the Federal and State rates, Missouri is not receiving what it should from Missouri corporations in income tax," Hackmann said last night. "There is a considerable difference in the totals paid, and we are certain that if the Federal officials will co-operate in an investigation we will be able to greatly increase the State income tax collections."

Gov. Hyde has been in communication with the Department of Internal Revenue on this matter, and the visit of Hackmann and Stewart to Washington follows the exchange of correspondence.

W. C. T. U. MEMBERS VOTE TO ATTEND ALL LIQUOR TRIALS

Organization Also to Create Sentiment for Law Enforcement and Proclaim Benefits of Prohibition.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 18.—Women of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union were urged today to attend all court trials of cases dealing with prohibition in order to assure proper punishment for bootleggers and purchasers of illicit liquor.

This with three other recommendations was contained in the law enforcement plans of the organization for the coming year. The other three as stated by Mrs. Elizabeth Anderson, chairman of the committee were: Creation of a sentiment for law enforcement and observance, election and appointment of officers favorable to prohibition in accordance with the saying of Abraham Lincoln, "Entrust any cause to its friends," and the circulation of literature proving the benefits of prohibition.

The annual election of officers resulted in the re-election of President Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill., also president of the world's union; vice president, Ella A. Poole, Brooklyn, and corresponding secretary, Frances R. Parks.

$50 MONTHLY PENSION FROM U. S. EQUALS 53,000 MARKS

Little Baltic Seaport Agog Over Windfall to Resident, Veteran of the Civil War.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 18.—The little Baltic seaport of Warne Muende is all agog over the windfall of the $50 monthly pension which the United States Government has granted to Paul Friedrich Albrandt, an 83-year-old veteran of the Civil War residing here. At the current rate of exchange the sum is equivalent to more than 53,000 marks each month.

Albrandt retired in 1901, after traversing the seven seas in German and Dutch vessels in every capacity from ordinary sailor to skipper. As a young man he served in the American Navy during the war between the North and the South, and upon his retirement, his savings were considered sufficient to keep him and his aged wife comfortably for the rest of their lives. Depreciation of the mark, however, reduced the nest egg until it was barely enough to keep the wolf from the door. Only last spring Albrandt learned of his American pension privileges through a traveler, and his application, through American authorities in Berlin, resulted in the pension, dating from last May. The grant further provides that Frau Albrandt shall receive $35 monthly in case she survives her husband.

SIX PERSONS HURT IN REAR-END COLLISION OF STREET CARS

Motorman in Serious Condition After Cherokee Car Hits Natural Bridge Trolley.

A southbound Cherokee car crashed into the rear of a Natural Bridge car which had stopped at South Ninth and Emmet streets at 6:30 last evening. The front of the Cherokee car was demolished, and the motorman, R. M. Johnson, suffered concussion of the brain and internal injuries. He was taken to his home, 1574 South Vandeventer avenue, and is in a serious condition.

Five others, including the other members of the crews of the two cars, reported injuries to the police, and several more were said to have been cut and bruised, but went home without reporting their injuries.

John Miller of 910 Geyer avenue, a passenger on the Natural Bridge car, and George Schaeffer of 1908 Arsenal street, a passenger on the Cherokee car, were treated at the city hospital and went home later. Miller's back was said to have been injured, and Schaeffer suffered cuts.

James L. Davis, conductor of the Cherokee car; H. E. Brown, motorman, and T. G. Hartog, conductor, of the Natural Bridge car, reported cuts and bruises.

Johnson, motorman of the Cherokee car, said to policemen that the air brakes failed to work properly.

Mail Orders for Tickets Already Exceed 10,000, Passing Record of Ziegfeld's "Follies."

So remarkable has been the volume of advance sales for "Lightnin'," which opens to night at the American, that the management announces an extension of the comedy's visit to two weeks.

The mail orders already exceed 10,000, passing the record held here by Ziegfeld's "Follies." On Thursday, the first day of the advance sale, $9000 worth of tickets were sold at the box office window in eight hours. A large proportion of the applications come from out of town.

AUTO DEATH TERMED ACCIDENT

Mrs. Mary Ellen Hurl, 64, Was Killed by Truck.

A Coroner's jury yesterday returned a verdict of accident in the case of Mrs. Mary Ellen Hurl, 64 years old, of 1100A Market street, who was killed by a truck driven by John Gremmler, 24, of 3502 Chouteau avenue, on King's highway, between Lindell and West Pine boulevards, Friday afternoon.

Gremmler's helper testified their vision was so obscured by driving rain they did not see Mrs. Hurl until after she had been knocked to the street. Gremmler had stated to police he was driving slowly.

ALDERMEN ON TOUR OF PUBLIC DANCE HALLS

In Connection With Bill for Supervisor — No Disorderly Conditions Disclosed.

A tour of investigation of public dance halls, made last night by the Public Safety Committee of the Board of Aldermen, disclosed no disorderly conditions. The investigation was in connection with a bill now before the committee providing for a dance hall supervisor, and an assistant, at monthly salaries of $150 and $125, respectively.

Seven places visited by the committee were operating in orderly fashion, with large crowds in attendance. At the Fraternity Temple, 25 North Grand boulevard, the box office man disappeared as the committee approached. When the Aldermen reached the dance floor the musicians also had vanished and about 30 persons were sitting about the hall, apparently without means of diversion.

The manager, Miss A. A. Anderson, said she employed a "bouncer," who is a guard at the workhouse, to dispose of unruly dancers. He was not there and Miss Anderson explained he had been given an evening off, due to the small crowd.

Members of the committee commented favorably on the dancing at the halls visited but did not indicate what their position would be on the pending bill.

Among the places visited were the Arcadia, 3525 Olive street; Eagles' Hall, Jefferson and Lafayette avenues; Tower Grove Hall, Grand boulevard and Juniata street; Concordia Hall, Thirteenth and Arsenal streets; Hotel Statler, and Jazzland, a negro dance hall at 2216 Market street.

WRIT ISSUED FOR SCHNEIDER IN HALL-MILLS MURDER CASE

First Official Step Taken in Roundup of Witnesses for Grand Jury Inquiry.

By the Associated Press.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 18.—The first official step in the roundup of witnesses to appear before the grand jury on Monday to testify in the Hall-Mills murder case was taken today when a writ of habeas corpus for Raymond Schneider, who found the bodies of the minister and the sexton's wife, was given to the Sheriff of Middlesex County.

Schneider is in jail on charges of perjury in connection with his pseudo-confession several weeks ago, and also on a charge of impairing the morals of Pearl Bahmer, who was with him when the bodies were found.

As the preparations are being completed for the presentation of evidence to the grand jury without any announcement of the number of names or witnesses to be called, unofficial tabulations show that 52 persons have been mentioned in connection with the case in the nine weeks since the finding of the bodies.

Voice of Union Labor and the Radical Press

The Post-Dispatch prints herewith extracts from editorial or other articles in the organs of labor unions and of the Socialist and Communist parties showing the tendency of thought on public questions among those bodies of citizens and indicating causes of social unrest.

BABIES AND HOGS AGAIN.
(From the New York Call, Socialist.)

Commenting on the letter of a reader of the Memphis Commercial Appeal favoring public support of maternity, the editor remarks: "Horribly Socialistic idea this is, but conditions are driving us in many things to the adoption of theories that a few years ago were scouted as paternalistic, Socialistic and visionary."

Yes, it is "horrible" to contemplate a program of surrounding babies and their mothers with the protection of public power. But this idea applied to swine has been accepted for many years. Hogs have a market value, while babies do not. There are bureaus at Washington to render first aid to hogs. A hog threatened with cholera may have the services of such bureaus.

This paternal care is not so "horrible" when you consider that a porker will bring so much in the market. The Call hopes that the Memphis editor will some day become reconciled to the prospect of a Government that will really concern itself as much with the welfare of babies as the present Government does with the welfare of hogs. It may be "horribly Socialistic," but as the hogs have improved under this treatment it is possible that the babies and mothers also will benefit.

METAL MINE DIVIDENDS.
(From Industrial Solidarity, I. W. W. Organ.)

Two weeks ago Industrial Solidarity published newspaper reports that the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey had declared a stock dividend of 400 per cent. This appears fabulous. But the dividends paid by metal mining corporations exceed even those of Standard Oil of New Jersey.

According to figures published by the New Age, the Calumet and Arizona, 13 years in operation, has paid $21,000,000 in dividends on its investment, with an average of 930 per cent per annum. The Calumet and Hecla does even better by paying 1060 per cent dividend on the investment with a total of $125,000,000 paid to the lucky stockholders. The C. and H. has been in existence 40 years.

The lesser Standard Oil companies, like the Standard Oil Co. of California, paid only 100 per cent dividend. There are also lesser mining companies that pay less dividends than those named above. Here are a few: Tonopah Mining, 13 years in existence, has earned $13,000,000, with an average annual dividend of 329 per cent.

The Homestake is 40 years old, has paid an average annual dividend of 275 per cent and a total of $35,000,000 to the company shareholders. Five, seven and eight year-old babies, like the Chino, the Utah and the Belmont, paid respectively dividends at the average of 160, 180 and 150 per cent.

All of these enormous dividends come out of unpaid labor. Dividends are theft. They represent the legal robbery of labor, to which labor is compelled to submit by company-hired gunmen and the denial of the principle of free speech and the right to organize.

"MELLIFLUOUS PHRASEOLOGY."
(From the Worker, Communist Organ.)

Let the workers of America know that all their talk about a "living wage" is considered by the Railroad Labor Board as "a mere bit of mellifluous phraseology." It must have taken anti-labor members of the board a long time to find that word "mellifluous" in the dictionary, which means flowing or sweetened with honey.

That is about as close as the workers will get to the sweet things of life, to enjoy the charge that "a living wage" for them is a honeyed phrase.

Instead the Labor Board has decided for a "just and reasonable" wage, which means minimum pay of 25 cents an hour for common labor on the railroads, $2 per day, $12 per week for the full six-day week.

It is certain that the big families of the common laborers on the railroads will not find much joy coming into their lives on the fleeting wings of these wages. • • •

Twenty-five cents an hour is not a "just and reasonable" wage, whatever the meaning of that deceiving phrase. It is a starvation wage that will drive railroad labor into greater rebellion than the strike just past. The capitalist spokesmen on the Labor Board claim the "living wage" would increase the railroad payroll by $1,249,390,994 annually. It is a pity, of course, that that should go into the pockets of the workers rather than into the bank accounts of parasitic stockholders.

But these railroad millionaires may soon discover that they will not only lose that billion, but that it will be possible for labor to invoke some more "communistic ruin" for capitalism by taking over all industry, including the railroads, and tearing up these gilt-edged stock certificates as so much waste paper.

There is "communistic ruin" ahead, but for capitalists only. That threat should not be feared by intelligent workers. It should be "mellifluous phraseology" to their receptive ears.

FEDERAL JOBS FOR SALE.
(From the Locomotive Engineers' Journal.)

Senator Dial of Carolina has performed a genuine public service by bringing to light the shameful practice of selling Federal patronage indulged in by administration friends and officials in his State. The occasion for these disclosures was president Harding's appointment of Joseph W. Tolbert as United States Marshal for the Western district of South Carolina. When this nomination came before the Senate for its approval, Senator Dial submitted evidence to prove that Tolbert, who is Republican National Committeeman for his State, is peddling Federal patronage for his personal benefit. One of Tolbert's own associates swore to an affidavit that he expected to clean up $100,000 by this corrupt traffic.

These disclosures are on par with those submitted a year ago by Senator McKellar of Tennessee, who alleged that John W. Overall, Republican National Committeeman for that State, was demanding and receiving $10 from applicants for appointment as postmasters and that friends of his were soliciting from other applicants contributions to pay his expenses on a trip to Washington.

This shameful practice of selling public offices has been indulged in by the machine politicians of both political parties. We do not know that the machine Republicans are any worse than the machine Democrats. The only remedy is to clean out the corrupt rascals in both parties who thus betray the power entrusted to them by the people.

FRUITS OF "DEMOCRACY."
(From St. Louis Labor, Socialist.)

Capitalist employers of labor do not like to pay taxes and support their Government, but when they are in trouble, often trouble of their own making, they expect their Government to come to their assistance.

When it is a question of paying taxes they swear that they are poor people, hardly able to make a decent living. But let their employes go on strike and the poor employers run for court injunctions, assuring the Judge under oath that huge amounts of values, their own property, are endangered by the strike. • • •

They use the Government as their tool, but they want the common people to pay for it. They demand of the Judges to protect their assumed property rights, but they want the masses of the people to pay for it. They expect the Legislatures to manufacture laws in their interests, but they want the others to pay for it. • • •

They realize the importance of the law-making machinery in the "democratic" republic by the grace of profit, and they live up to their conception of state and society.

Their understanding is that it is the business of the ruling politicians to serve their interests in every possible way, to protect them from the covetousness of the victims of their exploitation, and make the people pay for it. And whatever taxes there are being paid, it is, if we go to the bottom of things, the producers of values, the workers, who pay them.

They are exploited by their employers, by the middlemen, by the retailers and by the old party politicians in office.

And their reward?

What is your reward, ye brave, industrious, faithful citizens and supporters of state and society?

You know it: Autocracy in the factory and workshop, capitalist class legislation, and in case of a lockout, a strike or a boycott, the injunction whip.

WARREN DEFENDS THE DEVIL.
(From the Milwaukee Leader, Socialist.)

Harding has to defend Congress—for election purposes—but it must be a conscience-stretching task.

It would be almost impossible for a Congress to sit for a long period of months without doing a few meritorious acts—but these few meritorious acts, such as the passing of the maternity bill, are overwhelmed by a flood of bad legislation—and by a still bigger flood of inaction, if we have our metaphor on straight.

Nice presents were handed around to the rich in the form of a repealed excess profits tax, reduced income taxes, and a juicy tariff.

The farmers were given a crumb when they asked for bread—and the wage workers were given a stone.

About all that can be said for this Congress is that it is no worse than those that have preceded it. And that is extremely uncomplimentary. For, the war Congresses plumbed the very depths of ignominy and un-Americanism.

BILL—The best putty is made of equal parts of white lead and whiting, softened with linseed oil. 2. White lead paste, just as it comes in the tin or keg, is excellent for making pipe joints, gas tight, water tight and air tight. Good plumbers and gas fitters white-lead all joints.

SUBSCRIBER—The first trans-Atlantic steamship was the "Savannah," a vessel of only 350 tons, and measuring 100 feet. She was launched in New York in 1818, propelled with paddles and shiprigged. She crossed the Atlantic in 26 days, the engine being used only 16 days. The rest of the time she was under sail.

H. H.—OLD COINS.—The half-dollar dated 1858 has a premium of $13 to $25. The quarter dollar dated 1856, 25c to 30c. The 10c silver piece 1853, 1c to 15c. The 5c piece dated 1869 is worth 5c to 20c; there was no coinage in 1882. The small copper cent, flying eagle, of 1858, is worth 1c to 5c; of 1868, 1c to 2c. The large copper cent dated 1854 is worth 1c to 5c. We cannot identify the other coins described. Take them to a coin dealer to determine valuation.

J. H.—There is nothing better than gasoline for killing bedbugs and destroying their eggs. Gasoline evaporates quickly, leaves everything it touches and does not harm the finest finish of anything. Apply it with a brush or spray. It will run into the small cracks and crevices. Be careful, however, because of its inflammability. Another effective remedy is ordinary kerosene, or coal oil; spray with an atomizer or a feather. Repeat the dose every week for three or four weeks. Many other preparations are to be had on the market, but one of the main things in ridding any room of the pests is cleanliness and persistance.

C.—In many places in Africa and India elephants are captured and owned for breeding purposes. Elephants intended for domestication are captured in various ways. It was formerly common to take them in pitfalls, but in this way they were often injured. Another method frequently practiced is by the aid of tame elephants. Male elephants chiefly are captured in this way, the decoy elephants employed being females, trained for the purpose. With these the hunters very cautiously approach the animal they mean to capture. Two of the females take their places, one on each side of him, while the men contrive to get beneath their bodies and to pass ropes round the legs of the intended captive. His two hind legs are fastened together by six or eight ropes, another rope keeping them tight at the intersection, and a strong cable with a running noose is attached to each hind leg. About 20 minutes are usually spent in fixing the necessary ropes, profound silence being maintained the process goes on unobserved. The animal finally becomes sensible of his danger; tries to retreat, but by means of the long cables he is led to some tree strong enough for the purpose. His fury then becomes ungovernable, and it is not until he has thoroughly exhausted himself and begins to suffer severely from fatigue, thirst and hunger that the next steps are taken toward training him.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

ANN—The man should notify the parole agent of his marriage, but failure to do so would not violate the law.

W. F. S.—Consult the Free Legal Aid Bureau in the Municipal Courts Building. It will help you to collect your wages.

STEPHENS.—The woman will have to live in the State of Missouri for 1 year before she can sue for divorce here.

MRS. J.—You can call yourself "Miss" if you wish. It is not necessary to notify your divorced husband.

S. J. R.—There is no law in this State compelling a son to support his father when the latter becomes poor.

L. C. W.—As they promised to take back the machine, and as you hold the driver's slip for it, you do not have to take it back, and if they refuse to return your money, or give you a due bill as they promised, you can sue them for damages.

LOUISE B.—In order for B and C to be legally married, they need only be married again. Their first marriage is not legal, as at the time it was performed B had not been divorced from A, but it is not necessary to have it annulled.

J. J.—There is no penalty for signing a chattel recommendation without knowing the party's past or present life. Your question is not clear. If this answer is not sufficient write again, stating all the facts.

INVALID.—If the living together was preceded by an actual, mutual, marital agreement, 3 years ago, then there was a common-law marriage and the man will have to get a divorce before he can marry again. But if there was no agreement there was no common-law marriage.

C. C.—1. Report the facts to the Prosecuting Attorney in the town where the trial took place. 2. After the divorce the husband is only required to comply with such provisions as the decree may as have been made in the divorce decree. 3. Address the State Bar Association of Indiana at Indianapolis. 4. Report the facts to the Prosecuting Attorney.

ANXIOUS RENTER.—The former owners of the flat have no right to remove the linoleum as long as you are renting the flat, as they agreed to "let it lay." The linoleum does not belong to you, but you have a right to its use as long as you rent the flat. They have no right to remove it by force, and if they do so you can sue them and recover damages. As long as you are renting the flat they have no right to enter it. They can keep the key but cannot use it.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

L. D.—Make inquiry at some surgical supply house for the information you seek.

F. W.—Repeat question, enclosing stamped addressed envelope and state what kind of diet list is desired.

WORRIED.—Ringing noise in the ears is caused by some abnormal condition. Local treatment is necessary. Consult a specialist.

F. L. B.—We have no record of such a medical company. Inquiry among the wholesale drug houses may give you the information.

L. B.—We do not think the symptoms significant of those of old age. If you are doubtful of your condition and health consult a physician.

ALBERT R.—Lack of proper weight could be caused by the presence of a tape worm. The only reliable evidence would be by the finding of segments of the worm.

L. H. A.—It is likely that at the age of 18 the only remedy for stra

18 TRYON PAINTINGS ON DISPLAY AT MUSEUM

Twilight, Dawn and Winter Themes Outstanding; 11 of Works From Bixby Collection.

The City Art Museum is displaying this month a group of 18 paintings by Dwight W. Tryon. Eleven are from the private collection of William K. Bixby and the remainder are from the museum's collection, having been purchased at various times from the fund provided by Bixby for the acquisition of American art.

Dwight W. Tryon is one of the foremost interpreters of the poetic phases of American landscape. He was born in Hartford, Conn., in 1849, and studied art under Daubigny, De la Chevreuse, Guillemet and Harpignies. His most significant training was therefore received at the hands of the Barbizon masters, and it is their fine command of subtle tons that predominates his work, rather than the brilliance of modern impressionism. Tryon is a member of the National Academy of Design and has received widespread recognition by the award of innumerable medals, including a medal of the first class at the Munich International Exposition, 1896; first gold medal at the Carnegie Institute, Pittsburg, 1898; gold medal at the Buffalo Exposition, 1901; gold medal at the St. Louis World's Fair, 1904, and a silver medal at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, San Francisco, 1915.

Dawn and Twilight Themes.

The 18 paintings now on view at the museum reveal his rare mastery of the fleeting beauty of early dawn, of dim twilight, of misty spring and chilly winter skies. Two characteristic compositions, in both color and subject, are the museum's "Nightfall" and "Before Sunrise." The former shows a stretch of level landscape in which slender trees raise a lace-like tracery of branches against the pale but luminous sky. Along the horizon is a low bank of faintly violet clouds, behind which the sun is just sinking, its presence indicated by glowing rifts of orange tone. An air of peaceful, harmonious quiet pervades the scene, enchanting in its lyric quality. The composition of "Before Sunrise" is so similar that both paintings must have been made at or near the same locality, but the mood is totally different. Here is presented the cool, silvery light of morning, gently diffused from a sky which is beginning to glow with the approaching dawn. There is fine decorative quality in the slender trees gracefully silhouetted against the light and in the broad, simply rendered masses of foreground and distance. The painting "Dawn," which won a gold medal at the St. Louis World's Fair in 1904, is another beautifully poetic rendition of the same mood in nature. A trifle less colorful and more atmospheric than the preceding, it is pervaded by an enchanting harmony which quite enthralls the observer who is attuned to its delicate, elusive nuances of tone. It is one of the Bixby collection.

"Morning in May" Colorful.

"Morning in May" presents the more colorful aspects of foliage in the full light of day. The rich green of the grassy foreground, the delicate yellow green of the young leaves and the purples and violet reds of shrubbery and distance, serve to indicate the season. "Starlight" is a silvery, haunting nocturne of simple but effective composition. "Blue Moonlight" is also a night scene of great beauty, its overcast sky illuminated by the moon in delicate, glowing pattern of vibrant light.

In two of the canvases, "Marine" and "After a Storm, New Bedford Harbor," Tryon has essayed his hand as a painter of the sea. The "Marine" is executed with characteristic conscientiousness in the matter of values and color, yet it fails to rise to the heights of poetic expression achieved by his more atmospheric landscapes. The painting of New Bedford Harbor, with its thin, dark line of coast and its heavy leaden sky somberly reflected in the restless water, is more expressive of mood. "New England Farm in Winter," "December Landscape" and "Winter Afternoon" are each a remarkable interpretation of the cold gray sky of winter and the somberness of barren landscape swept by chilly winds or covered with spots of snow. The "Winter Afternoon" was awarded a medal at the Chicago World's Fair in 1893. Among the other paintings by Tryon which are on view are "Autumn Evening," "Clearing After a Shower, Afternoon," "Evening After a Storm," "Glastonbury Meadows," "Spring in France" and "Morning in May." These paintings will remain on view in gallery 30 until Nov. 30.

Other collections which are on temporary view at the art museum today include 80 paintings by old Dutch and Flemish masters, lent by the Goudstikker Galleries of Amsterdam; the St. Louis Art League's annual Thumb Box Exhibition and prints by Troy Kinney, Rudolph Ruzicka and the Senefelder Club of London.

WOULD DECLINE SPEAKERSHIP

Congressman Mann of Illinois, Neither Desires G. O. P. House Leadership.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Representative James R. Mann of Illinois, a veteran of the House, declared today that under no circumstances would he accept if elected Speaker or Republican leader in the new Congress.

"I would not accept the speakership," said Mann, "if it were given me unanimously on a silver platter, and the same applies to the House leadership."

Oh-h-h Boy!!

.. FACTS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW ABOUT THE GOITER PROBLEM

Ailment which was known 3000 years ago is more important than the general public realizes in Missouri and other States today—Enlargement of the thyroid gland may be due to several causes, which are discussed by a St. Louis physician—Unchecked, it may develop cases of cretinism, and is now widely prevalent in certain regions. :: ::

THE following discussion of goiter, one of humanity's ills which constitutes a greater menace than most people realize, was delivered as an address by Dr. Willard Bartlett of St. Louis on a recent program of K S D, the Post-Dispatch Radio Broadcasting Station. Numerous letters about the address have been received, one of them from a pastor in Canada. The lecture was one of a series of informative medical addresses broadcast from Station K S D, under the auspices of the St. Louis Medical Society.

Authorized by Publication Committee of St. Louis Medical Society.

By DR. WILLARD BARTLETT

IT SEEMS that one may, with propriety, voice a warning which is suggested by the prevalence to an unusual degree of a certain malady in this community.

Our own Ozark region, on the edge of which we live, also our river valleys of Missouri, like the Great Lakes goiter basin, merit more than passing mention among the other similarly affected areas which are scattered all over the globe, most of them being high plateaus or mountainous districts.

The prevalence of the malady is apparent when one remembers that the authorities found goiters in more than one-fourth of the young school girls of Akron, O., not so far away, in whom nothing had been done to prevent it. It has been stated that 90 per cent of the street dogs in Cleveland have goiters, which reminds us in no uncertain way that not only the human inhabitants but practically all the lower animals as well are affected in a goitrous district.

The nearer we approach Lake Erie, no matter from what direction, the more frequently the disease is encountered, until, as Adami found, there is at least one goiter in practically every family in certain of the towns on the north shore of the lake.

Possibly, then, it may not be devoid of interest for us to discuss somewhat at length the normal purposes of the thyroid gland, as well as the conditions under which it increases its size till called a goiter.

This little gland, consisting of two tiny, flattened lobes, just below the Adam's apple, at either side of the windpipe, presides over nutrition, growth, the distribution of the blood and certain functions of the nervous system. It is wholly indispensable, is most important in earliest life, but gradually loses its value as the vital fires begin to smolder, and we slowly cool down toward the natural end of life.

Our vivacity, personal magnetism and joy of living are all proportionate to the amount and activity of our thyroid glands.

We must not regard every transient enlargement of it as a mark of disease, since there are periods of stress, like those of puberty, pregnancy, the menopause, etc., when nature makes extra secretory demands on this little structure, thus necessitating a temporary enlargement of it in order that its function may be properly performed.

Goiter, by which we mean the noticeable enlargement of this gland (well beyond the physiologic limit), was well known 3000 years ago, and no doubt had existed from the earliest times. It may be roughly divided into two kinds: First, the simple goiter, which may become a menace, because it exerts undue pressure upon the delicate and important structures of the neck, or renders the individual conspicuous and unhappy on account of its appearance alone.

The second form of goiter is the so-called toxic variety. The manifestations here are not confined to the neck alone, but concern the heart, the nervous system, the eyes in many instances are seen to bulge, and at times damage is done to almost all of the important organs.

We may, then, in this connection, ask ourselves what the real dangers of goiter are, and reflect in the light of our experience, that any simple goiter may attain such proportions as to exert undue pressure on surrounding structures, or, indeed, may in the course of years develop the symptoms of the toxic, systemic variety. This latter assertion is proven by the fact that many of our seriously sick goiter patients give a history of the tumor having long antedated the general symptoms for the relief of which the patients come to us.

In studying the cause of goiter let us concern ourselves with the endemic variety, which constitutes a distinct menace to the well being of the people of this State. The word endemic means epidemic within geographic limits. It would seem, when all the evidence is weighed, that an iodine deficiency, contagion or polluted drinking water, one or more of them in combination, go very far toward explaining endemic outbreaks of this kind.

Generally speaking, goiter is comparatively infrequent along the seacoasts, where iodine as a constituent of sea water is found in great abundance. On the other hand, the disease is more prevalent in mountainous regions, where iodine is scarcer than anywhere else.

Then, too, the experiments of Marine, who prevented goiter in thousands of Ohio school children by the use of iodine, would go far toward showing that the disease is in many instances merely an expression of an iodine deficiency, especially in the table salt manufactured today.

The second theory urged in the explanation of endemic goiter is that it is a water-borne disease, and this is in many instances proven by the fact that a change of water supply has sufficed to eradicate it. From the very earliest times, for example, in the writings of Pliny, goiter wells were mentioned, and it was a favorite ruse of the army recruits abroad of a hundred years ago to escape military service by drinking from goiter wells and thus acquiring the disease.

Surgical anatomy of the neck, showing location of thyroid gland, the enlargement of which is symptom of goiter.

Experiments too numerous to mention have been made in the direction of preventing goiter by boiling water, by letting the water stand until the evanescent poisons disappeared, by changing those affected from a spring to a cistern for their water supply, and in all of these ways proving the point at issue.

We have, however, never been able to determine just what it is in drinking water that causes the disease. Still, there are many important reasons for believing today that it is an organic and likely a bacterial poison which is disseminated by the water we drink, and thus accounts for the prevalence of goiter in the regions mentioned above.

Contagion as a third factor must not be entirely lost sight of, in view of the fact that many well-authenticated epidemics have taken place in boarding schools, barracks and similar institutions, where highly insanitary conditions prevailed, and the point is further proven by the fact that abolition of the conditions thought to have caused an outbreak speedily resulted in the disappearance of it.

The factor of infection holds true for the individual case no less than in the epidemic form of the disease, and this cannot be too strongly impressed upon patients and physicians alike. We have in our clinic been so deeply impressed by the fact that a large number of our systemically sick goiter patients present bad teeth, tonsils or both, that we now reason "a posteriori" and examine for goiter every patient who presents bad teeth and tonsils. Our colleagues, the dentists, have been perhaps not wholly blameless in this connection, since in their zeal to save the teeth they may have in some instances done so at the risk of sacrificing the patient's health.

The prevalence of endemic goiter is a matter vastly more important to the community than may be realized by the public, or even by many members of the medical profession. The cumulative effect of the casual poison, whatever it may be, expresses itself through succeeding generations, to the end that goiter in one generation may be followed by myxoedema in the next and cretinism in the third. In other words, we may see a spontaneous development in the course of three generations of a condition similar to that which ensues if a child be born without a thyroid, or suffers its destruction by operation or disease early in life.

This cretinism is known to most of us as a condition of both mental and physical dwarfism, with deaf-mutism. No words can describe nor the most fertile imagination conceive of more pitiable objects than cretins, these idiot man-plants which, like the lower animals, are capable of just a little training, which elevates them to the stage of imbecile man-animals.

Fortunately, cretinism has followed goiter with relatively less frequency in America than in Europe and Asia, but still this may not always remain true, since we know that the severity of endemic goiter undergoes profound changes, and hence no false security is to be taken for granted. We already have a sufficient warning in the statement that there are now 15,000 feeble-minded children in Ohio alone.

It is safe to assume that a large majority of these 15,000 represent the terminal phase of endemic goiter in their ancestors. This disease has played a well-found role in the economic life of other nations, of which many an example is recorded in history. It suffices perhaps, to remind you that the Swiss army is reduced by one-sixth in consequence of this disease alone. When one considers that more females than males of the same age are affected, the real economic meaning of this malady for Switzerland alone is apparent to the most casual observer.

The treatment of endemic goiter begins, of course, with prevention. Marine and his co-workers have done more than any other investigators in promoting it; it was to their work that I referred in mentioning the experiment on the Akron schoolgirls, early in this discussion. Unfortunately, the iodine, which can be used so successfully in the very young, can not be employed after 40, without the risk of transforming a simple goiter into one of the toxic variety. It is for the same reason especially unsafe after once a systemic variety of the disease has been established.

But suppose an epidemic is traceable to drinking water, then the proper line of reasoning becomes especially plain. We have to send these individuals into a nongoitrous district, or, what is vastly simpler, bring uncontaminated water to them, or, still better, boil or in some other way disinfect the water they are obliged to use.

Early in the disease these simple means suffice for the cure of many patients. This is, however, not true after degenerative changes in the gland have taken place.

The surgical world points with pride to the development of an operative treatment which has been 1000 years in developing to its present standard of excellence.

One need, perhaps, no more than mention the fact that specialists now remove, without risk or ill after-effects, the simple goiters which are unsightly or which mechanically interfere with important organs.

The public may not know that it is very much more of a problem to treat successfully by operative means the toxic goiters, but surgeons are now able, since they have learned by experience to judge accurately the very slender margin of safety possessed by these individuals, to remove their thyroids with the highest degree of satisfaction.

The Thriving Business Of Producing "Old Masters"

Complaint to police by patron of art dealer at Paris is followed by revelation of the enormous traffic in spurious pictures, sold as the work of famous artists — If purchaser of canvas learns he has been deceived, then his pride and self-interest tend to keep him silent :: ::

By MYER AGEN.

PARIS has a new scandal in her art world. And it has shed dreaded publicity on one of the most delicate subjects in the whole realm of art—the systematic faking of famous and valuable masterpieces. M. J. Guiboud, one of France's best known dealers and collectors of great paintings, was accused of having sold for a high price a number of canvases which were not genuine old masters but clever imitations of the originals.

Upon the complaint of M. Thomas, an engineer, who had bought three Carots which later proved to be false, the police visited the modest studio of M. Guiboud in Montmartre. They found in his collection many paintings attributed to Corot, Monticelli, Claude Monet, Henner, Cezanne and others. There were eight pictures purporting to be the work of Carriere. These the police sealed pending an examination by experts. Several weeks have gone by since then. Unknown powers of the inner circle seemed suddenly to have thrown an impenetrable cloak of secrecy around the case of M. Guiboud. He would probably have passed swiftly from the short memory of Parisians had it not been for his own disconcerting act.

M. Guiboud refused to let the charges be dropped. He not only indignantly denied them, but announced that he would resort to any extreme to clear his good name. His enemies had not expected that. Now they are the ones who are exerting powerful and mysterious pressure to hush the matter up. They realize now, it would seem, that they have found a boomerang that may quite possibly destroy them.

For publicity in a case of this sort would work incalculable harm to thousands of dealers throughout the world. It would call attention to the jealously guarded secret known to all professional connoisseurs, but not to those who spend fortunes to acquire coveted originals of great paintings. As a matter of fact, the practice of duplicating masterpieces has developed into a highly specialized and highly organized craft. The counterfeiters are so skillful that it is frequently impossible to distinguish their work from the originals they fake. Curators upon whom the finest museums of the world depend have been fooled. Artists themselves have actually mistaken copies for their own work. The great Rodin, when confronted with his statue "La Vieu" and an uncannily accurate copy of it, insisted that the copy was his own original.

If it should become generally known that men whose life work it is to identify the genuine can be deceived, it is easy to see what havoc might be wrought. Men of money who sometimes pay many thousands of dollars for one painting must rely entirely upon the word of trusted experts. Even the most confirmed spendthrift would hesitate long before he would lay out $20,000 or [illegible] for a canvas whose genuineness could not be established beyond any doubt. The market for collections acquired at enormous expense would very swiftly disappear. The innocent would be ruined along with the guilty. That is why collectors all over the world have been filled with deepest anxiety as the result of M. Guiboud's bold stand against his accusers.

Already astounding revelations have come to light. It has become known that there are hundreds of young artists in Paris who spend their entire time painting "old masters." One man has earned a most comfortable living for years painting "Van Dycks." He is so clever that specimens of his work hang in some of the world's most famous galleries, and pass as originals. In private collections all over the world hang canvases, highly prized by their owners, which were in reality produced by some hungry vagabond in an attic near Montmartre. Art lovers who have devoted their lives and their fortunes to the collection of valuable pictures have learned all this with dismay. What assurance have they that the Rubenses, or Fragonards, or Corots for which they paid huge sums are not the handiwork of some unscrupulous forger? "Hush it up at any cost," M. Guiboud's associates say to him. "The cause of art is worth more than any one man's reputation!" But M. Guiboud, lover of art though he is, thinks otherwise.

M. J. GUIBOUD.

Hundreds of artists spend all their time painting "old masters."

"My enemies recognize their mistake now," he said, "and are trying to silence me. But I cannot and will not let the matter drop. In honor to myself, and in respect for this," he touched the bit of red ribbon in his buttonhole, the badge of the Legion of Honor, "I must clear myself in the eyes of the world."

It must be said that M. Guiboud is a man to inspire confidence in his good faith. But it should be noted also that he has made bitter enemies among the ultra moderns for what they consider his reactionary attitude toward their daring experiments in new forms.

"The painting of pictures attributed to older and recognized masters of art is as old as art itself," M. Guiboud explained to me. "It is not a crime to have copies in one's collection—the jails would be pretty crowded if it were. It is not even a crime to take copies for originals if one honestly believes them to be authentic. It is simply impossible to stop the production of spurious pictures because even those who are duped are, in spite of themselves, in league with the counterfeiters." That last was a curious statement, but it is literally true. Suppose a collector strikes what is obviously a bargain. He asks the dealer if he is sure the picture is genuine. The dealer shrugs. "You know quite well," he says, "that I cannot guarantee that. No man could. There are several thousand copies of this picture throughout the world. I bought it at a reputable sale, but if I were absolutely sure it was genuine, would I let you have it for this ridiculous price?" Here is a temptation for your art lover. "Perhaps it is real," he tells himself. "Even this expert is not sure. I can tell my friends where I bought it, what its catalogue value is—and if it is genuine it is a find!" Having bought it, will this collector ever admit it is a fake? He will not. His own collection may be sold some day.

Naturally, there are unscrupulous dealers who deliberately force fakes on their clients in just this way. Such a case came up recently. The wife of a banker had bought two pictures attributed to La Tour for 250 francs. She found out later that the dealer had paid just 30 francs for them. What did she do? What would you have done? This woman did nothing. Some time in the future she can prove that she paid a certain dealer 250 francs for them, and the dealer will not deny it, nor will he reveal the secret of their origin. Perhaps some American millionaire of the future will proudly display those two pictures to his friends and mention quietly the fabulous price he paid for them.

There are dealers who have built up great fortunes by playing upon this weakness of human nature.

900 Relatives Call Her Grandma

Mrs. Virginia Elizabeth Veal and her youngest great-great grandchild, Virginia Louise Allen, 10 months old. There is 99 years and two months difference between their ages.

All were guests at Mrs. Veal's 100th birthday dinner and 327 at the 400-foot table were her direct descendants—Food for the big feast cost $1000—Celebration concludes with nearly a million handshakes—Centenarian exhibits the wedding dress she wore 86 years ago—She can still piece quilts and she wants to ride in an airplane

WHEN Mrs. Virginia Veal of Winder, Ga., sat down to dinner on her 100th birthday, recently, she was not that most pathetic of creatures, a lonesome old lady. In fact she had what she herself might call "quite a passel of company." 900 of her relatives were at the dinner at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Taylor Cooper. Of this large number of guests 327 were direct descendants of Mrs. Veal.

In fact, some of them were so far removed that Mrs. Veal, seated at the head of the table, would have needed fieldglasses to see them distinctly. For, be it known, the table at this wonderful birthday dinner was 400 feet long, about the distance from the home plate to the flagpole in a major league baseball park.

In places of honor, nearest to Mrs. Veal, sat her children. She had 14 children, 13 of whom lived to reach maturity and five of whom are still alive. Next in order at this festal board and taking up nearly 100 feet of its ample length were ranged her 60 grandchildren. That was hardly a beginning, for beyond these were ranged her 186 great-grandchildren and her 76 great-great-grandchildren. And that wasn't half of it!

After all the direct descendants were seated there was still room at the table for 573 other relatives of Mrs. Veal, and they were all there. They had come from every state in the South to do honor to her on her centennial birthday.

As Mrs. Veal herself remarked, it took "right smart o' vittles" to feed this great gathering. To be specific, the food alone cost $1000, not counting the labor and expense of cooking. And it was a "powerful good dinner," too. In a big city it would have cost much more. Mrs. Veal and all of her relatives are farmers and the good things came direct from the farm to the birthday dinner table, with no middlemen and brokers to take their toll.

This was an old-fashion barbecue meal, cooked and eaten outdoors. No need to worry about the gas bill when the range is dispensed with and a long trench filled with glowing hickory saplings provides the heat for the roasting. As to the labor of it—well, any nice old lady with 327 living descendants and 573 collateral relatives certainly must have a sufficient number of grandsons, great-grandsons and nephews to dig the trench, cut the wood and build and tend a fire for even so gigantic a barbecue as this one. Mrs. Veal's sons are "getting along in years," but they gave the undertaking their general supervision and Mrs. Veal herself was vigorous enough to give her granddaughters and great-granddaughters valuable pointers about the cooking, particularly in a matter seemingly so small but really so vital as the exact amount of sage to put in the dressing.

After the dinner Mrs. Veal was photographed with her youngest great-great-grandchild, Virginia Louise Allen, 10 months old. It isn't often that the camera brings into one picture two sitters the difference in whose ages is 99 years and two months.

And then Mrs. Veal unfolded to the wondering eyes of her granddaughters, great-granddaughters and great-great-granddaughters her most cherished possession—her wedding dress. She told them how she was married in this dress in 1836, when she was 14 years old. Her memory carried her back those 86 years and she told them how she herself picked the cotton for that dress from her father's field, though slaves would have done this work if she had said the word. Like many a Southern belle of those old days, she would let no hand but hers touch her "wedding cotton." After picking it, she carded it and spun it. Then on an old-time hand loom she wove it into cloth and with her own hands she cut and sewed the wedding dress. After the lapse of 86 years the dress is in fine condition and snowy white, owing to her tender care of it.

The younger generations of the family viewed the dress with great interest, especially the expansive skirt—made to be worn over "hoops."

"Why, it's nearly a mile around the bottom," one of the great-grandchildren exclaimed.

"Mebbe it is, and mebbe it ain't," said Mrs. Veal when she heard this comment, "but I can tell you of one thing: It looked mighty peert when I wore it to the meetin' house."

Mrs. Veal was born in Georgia and has lived in that State all her life. She retains all her faculties. She wears glasses, but her eyesight is so good that she pieces quilts and reads the daily papers.

She is not in favor of woman suffrage. "My menfolks have always done the voting and I guess they can keep on doing it," she said recently. "For the few years I have to stay on earth I am not going to bother with voting."

"I was always busy," she explained to an interviewer. "I managed my own home and I guess I've made over on to 10,000 quilts in my time. I always told my daughters that the best way to keep healthy was to keep busy, and they all obeyed me. That's why the family kept healthy and that's why I have all these relatives here now. I'm proud to look around and see more than 300 people of my own flesh and blood."

Mrs. Veal has ridden in everything from the ox cart to the automobile, and now she wants to ride in an airplane. During the World War there was an army aviation camp near her home. She said that at first she was amazed at the way the planes soared over her roof, but later, as she became accustomed to them, she had a wild desire to ride in one.

"Some of my children and grandchildren and great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren think it scandalous for me to want to do anything like that, but I just can't help it," she said.

After the birthday dinner old-time Georgia musicians played fiddles and banjos and the celebration broke up with a handshaking. It took just two hours for all of the descendants of Mrs. Veal to shake hands with her and with each other. First, each of the 900 relatives shook hands with Mrs. Veal. That was 900 handshakes. Then each of the 900 had to shake hands with the 899 others. That was 809,100 more handshakes, and the grand total was 810,000. It took fast work to complete it in two hours.

The Kind of Men Women Want to Marry

Feminine investigator sets out to discover what qualities women prefer in husbands — Majority do not insist on handsome faces — Vote strong for snappy dressers—Wealth highly desirable—Hemen win :: :: :: :: ::

By ROSALIE WALLACE

"My man must be a genius."

OF COURSE, it's notorious that women don't know as much as men. It's been proved time and again that her very brain architecture is smaller, and there never was a conference of two or more males gathered together when the girls weren't around who wouldn't openly admit that, after all, sweet as they are, there never was a woman who had any intelligence, real intelligence, you know, intuition, yes, but sheer brains, never. And logic? Not on your life. If you want to prove it, just listen to the way a man has to explain a business deal to a woman, kindergarten stuff, honest, and she won't get it even then. She'll interrupt you right in the middle of it to ask you did you remember to speak to the chauffeur about not smoking in the car.

Thus, man having a monopoly on the money and most of the brains in the world, he is mighty choosey about the little woman he picks out to share the burden of life with him and do the simple things, like making a home and having a child or two, and a census was taken recently among all types of men to find out just what they required of their ideal girl, and really it was great.

Without exception the boys decided they wanted a blonde. Also without exception they wanted her without much education and from their general tone you gathered that a few half-wits would be appreciated. Most of them specified neatness, a few mentioned charm and several got real bold and spoke right out and demanded such things as flattery and other snappy qualifications. All of which just goes to prove how worked up about the future of the race men are and how seriously they regard their responsibilities.

But there are two sides to everything, as some sage has remarked, so I went around and asked the girls what sort they would hunt if there should be an open season for men. The first one I questioned was a flapperist, rather hard-boiled, I must admit, but a blonde—which brought her into the running—and pretty pretty, aged 22. "My ideal guy? Sure. He's the one who gives me $1 for a 35-cent manicure and says, 'Keep the leavings, girlie; change don't mean anything in my life.' You want me to be serious? Well, I'd like a strong gink, and clean about his clothes and in his head. I don't so much care about his looks, except I'd like him tall, and I suppose with me this size that it would be better for him to be dark. I'd rather he knew a little more than I do, for there may be a few things left yet for me to learn; but his being strong in the most important thing, healthy and strong, so that I can have some nice, healthy kids."

A doctor came next on my list. She is a [illegible] of possibly 30, earns a most comfortable amount yearly, is short and slender, has lots of hair and twinkling of eye. She said: "I would like to find the man with whom it would be possible to be an equal. What he would be like, what his position in life might be wouldn't matter. But men have a deeply developed possessive instinct. They make marriage distinctly a relationship and not a companionship. To find a man with the mental and spiritual awakening that would permit me standing side by side with him is [illegible] impossible, though I am willing to concede that for such a man it is hard to find the woman sufficiently intelligent to really appreciate his fineness. But when such a combination is found, each is willing to admit that the other is 50 per cent of the union, neither greater nor less. That is perfection."

From this rarified atmosphere I descended to parley with a kitchen maid. She is a good cook and a clever housekeeper, and at my entrance a rather subdued looking policeman was exiting from the basement door. She knew what she wanted of men. "I want a man to be snappy, a fellow who will be a success, some get up and go to him. I'd like him to be a blonde, a big fellow, and not jealous, and I'd like him to be able to hand out a good line of talk that would keep me interested. I could do all the rest."

I tried Fifth avenue, speaking to a little home girl, a graduate of Miss Spence's School, than which there is nothing more correct. Her requirements ran thus: "I want him to be rich; that's most important. I want him to be like Joseph Schildkraut in 'Orphans of the Storm' and to be six feet tall. I don't want him to call me 'little wife.' He must like music and I prefer that he should be a genius, though I would compromise on a big-game hunter, and I want him to wear beautiful pajamas." She had, you see, worked out several details.

A fashion artist, tall, perfectly groomed, the type any movie director would have cast as a bold, bad adventuress, admitted: "My hero is the Zane Grey type, tall and rangy, tender and solicitous, who would protect me from everything. I don't want to be an equal partner. I want to be controlled and patronized most to death. I want a home and little children. Give me the chance and I'd be the most clinging vine on earth. I would like him to be neat, but rough and ready, to wear his funny clothes well, to"—— She was interrupted by a broker coming in and offering to take her downtown in his Rolls-Royce.

I sought the back of a popular theater and found there a professional dancer. A pretty thing she was, her figure as lithe as an orchid spray, her charming smile most ingratiating. "My man must love nature," she demanded, "trees and flowers and mountain streams. If he really has feeling for such things the others will be there, too. His appearance does not matter, except I think it would be difficult to fall in love with a man who was ugly or very fat. Then I should want him to be fond of women, not in the accepted meaning of that term, but rather for women as a sex, wanting to better their condition and all that, for a man who is a feminist is always fine. If he is awake to the fact that the position of women today is far from the ideal that it could be, then he is really awake to the problem of the race and not his individual problem alone. It is only the men of vision who know that and I do not think that men are as accustomed to gazing at the wider horizon as women are. But a man who has that outlook, oh, how fine he is! Last, I wish that he would be the sort who, after we had been married many years, I would still be looking forward to his homecoming each day as the meeting with a very dear friend." No simple order, that.

A real jazz baby, the kind whose father has an income of $50,000 a year, and she at 17 attends all the college proms and is rushed from the beginning of one school vacation to the end of another, declared: "Money seems essential. At least, you can't buy liquor without it and you've got to have liquor to have a good time. I would like to have him go in heavy for athletics at school. I wish he would want to amuse me once in a while and not sit and expect me to be snappy and cute every minute. I want him to be a good dancer, to hold his liquor well, to give me a fat allowance and to make love like a Scott Fitzgerald hero."

No. 8 was a private secretary, one of those enormously efficient, bone-rimmed-spectacled persons, but very young and pretty, who declared: "I want an American business man, though a girl in my position knows all about what makes the tired business man tired: golf scores and conferences with his bootlegger and too many Corona Coronas, but I like the type, just the same. They are alert, they are kindly. They have a faintly paternal feeling toward every woman, and yet they rather revere our sex, too. They make love so stupidly that you want to laugh at them and help them out, but down underneath they are fine. For business success they have to keep fit and they want their wives to reflect their prosperity. Yes, I want to marry a business man. There would be few thrills, but there would be stability and an untroubled atmosphere for one's children."

Going up in an elevator, I questioned the little blue-clad operator. "The nicest kind of a man," she proclaimed, "is the bird who knows everything. I like 'em that way. There's John that comes to see me. There's nothing that John don't know. I want to go to the Palace. I say, 'John, it's fierce the bills they're putting on at the vaudeville shows every Sunday night,' and John he says, 'Now, if that ain't just like a woman. You don't know a good thing when you see it. Why, they've got a bill on down at the Palace that would knock your eyes blind.' 'Well, I say, 'what on earth you see in Fannie Brice'—— and John, he snaps back, 'Now, lissen, you get on your things and I'll just display to you what a bonehead you are. Why, all the big critics, even, say she's great, but trust you not to know it.' Then I get awful meek and I go, and when we come out I admit he was right and John smiles real sweet and says, 'Well, girlie, you're all right, too; but you're kinda slow about things.' But he hugs my arm tight to him and we slide over to some place and get a soda and John's happy and so am I, because we both meant to go to the show in the first place. But if he wasn't such a wise bird, you see how much harder it would be to manage him!"

A Broadway actress, a delicious bit of fluff, laughed gayly at my question. "We all have our ideal Romeo in mind," she said, "that is, for the love making. I wish American men would become a little more interested in that branch of human science, but I guess they never will. An actor makes love prettily, but an actress knows better than to marry one. You would never know

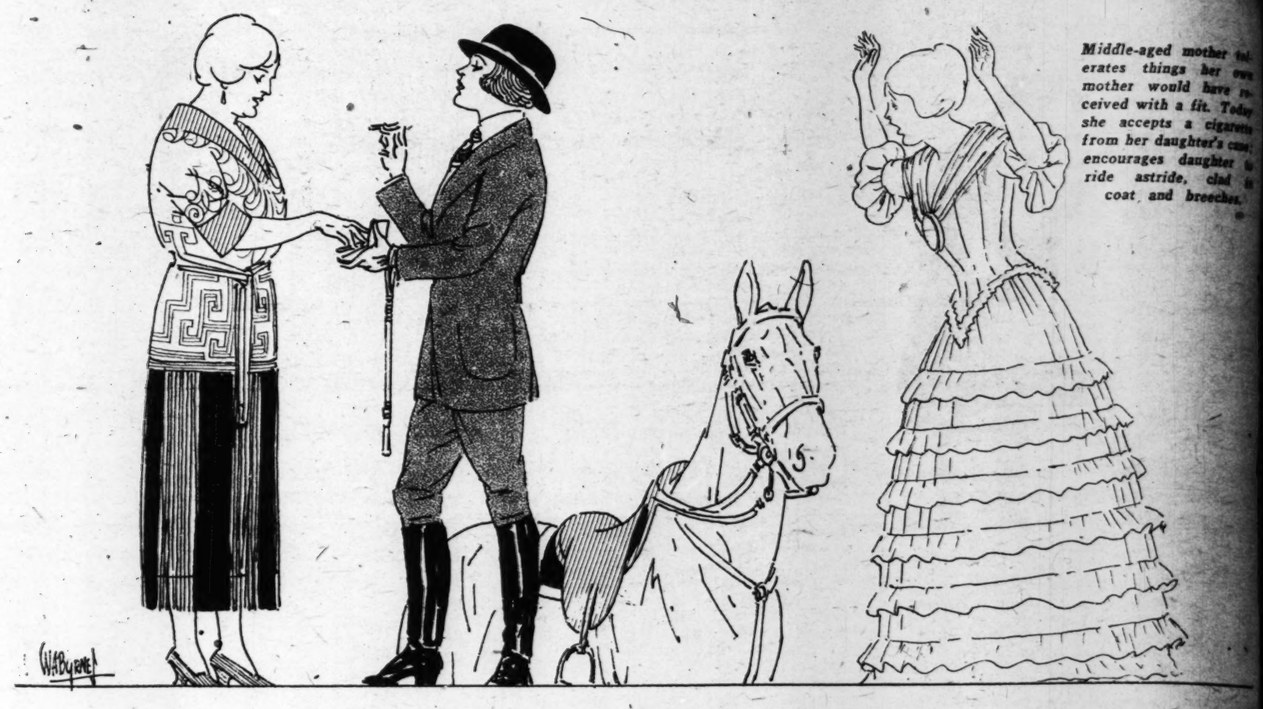
Woman of Today a Better Mother Tha



Middle-aged mother tolerates things her own mother would have received with a fit. Today she accepts a cigarette from her daughter's case, encourages daughter to ride astride, clad in coat and breeches.

Wife of "man who knows all about women" says present-day parent is more selfish, but that is better for the child—In Qween Victoria's day she was more prone to punish children unjustly and she reared her daughters to be dependent rather than independent—Now the girl is taught more self-reliance, and Mrs. George says women show more sound common sense in the bringing-up of daughters :: :: :: :: ::

THE writer of this article in defense of the present-day mother, is the wife of the well-known English novelist who has been called "the man who knows all about women." The practice of condemning mothers as responsible for the shortcomings, actual or alleged, of the modern flapper type of daughter has aroused Mrs. George to compare the mothers of today with those of a generation or two ago and she argues that present methods of rearing girls are superior to the methods of yesterday.

By MRS. W. L. GEORGE.

THE daughter of today is enduring so much criticism that one wonders whether the mother of yesterday should remain uncriticised. It is an established fact that, throughout all ages, every generation has looked down on the one immediately preceding. But it is equally true that the passing generation feels no lesser contempt for the one it has produced. On both sides the criticism is likely to be unjustly bitter, particularly between mother and daughter. While it is true that the mothers are often unreasonable in their attitude toward their daughters, the daughters are, in many ways, very unjust toward their mothers.

This situation having arisen, it is interesting to discover how it has come about. The emancipation of woman has made such great strides during the last 20 years, particularly during the war, that the old-fashioned mother faces an almost impossible task in adapting herself to the ways of life and thought of her daughter. Her own girlhood stands in the way of this readjustment. When one thinks of what was the girlhood of the woman who is now middle aged, one is amazed, not so much because she has evolved so little as because she has evolved so much.

The middle-aged mother tolerates a number of things which her own mother would have received with a fit. For instance, smoking, which she herself indulged in on the sly 30 years ago; today she accepts a cigarette from her daughter's case. Chaperons are a thing of the past, possibly because she refuses to grow old, dances and plays games as energetically as her daughters. It is quite common now to allow daughters latchkeys, although some mothers still make difficulties. She allows her daughter to become daily more athletic, and even encourages her to ride astride, clad in coat and breeches. Our grandmothers did not allow their daughters to issue invitations. Our mothers do. The daughter of today frequently arranges a tennis or luncheon party, and tells her mother later. Still, the old-fashioned mother is not above criticism.

Before criticising the mother of yesterday, who, according to her critics, has produced such a regrettable daughter, it is only fair to consider the difficulties of every imaginable description with which she was confronted. The girl of 40 to 50 years ago lived a protected, sheltered life and entered into marriage in a state of comparative ignorance. Her education was of the scantiest; any individuality of character was quickly repressed; she was trained to believe that marriage was her sole aim in life. Is it, then, strange that she should view with dismay the freedom of thought and action enjoyed by the modern girl? Once married, she was plunged into the difficulties of rearing a large family without any of the advantages which modern science has produced. Properly trained nurses were unknown; instead of the efficient present-day nurse, all the help mother could obtain was a woman untaught in feeding, doctoring and controlling; in those days the nurse's one recommendation was her complete devotion to the family. The young mother of today has countless sources of information, whereas the mother of the period of Queen Victoria had only her own common sense to guide her.

The mother of yesterday was handicapped because her own mother had been able to do little for her, because the difficulties in educating young children were enormous; transport was inadequate; hygiene was almost unknown. Should we not be grateful to our mothers that they overcame these difficulties and broke down prejudice and tradition? After all, hampered as they were, they did bring us up, did make us fit to appreciate modern innovations. Today the modern mother takes it for granted the child is of first importance as regards housing, feeding and education.

In the days of our grandmothers this was unheard of. Our mothers were hidden away in rooms devoted to them because these rooms were inconvenient for purposes of entertainment; in economical households the quality of their food was cut; their education was carried on by inefficient, uneducated governesses. The husband's whims were the first consideration; in all matters his wish was law. It is to the credit of our mothers that they should have begun the fight against such odds; all honor is due to them for carrying it to such a successful climax. To the determined efforts of our mothers we owe part of (though not all) our capacity to rear our children under present-day conditions.

Today marriage is only one of many careers open to women. In our mothers' girlhood it was, save under exceptional circumstances, the only one. In those days a girl who worked except from necessity, was considered unladylike; if she persisted in following a career of her own she was looked upon as abnormal by her fellow creatures. It therefore follows that most women were leading lives for which they were totally unsuited—namely, married and maternal lives. They can hardly be blamed, therefore, if in this role they proved somewhat inefficient. Today there is no such excuse; most careers being open to woman, there is no reason for her to marry to insure a livelihood. If she wants to she can earn her own living.

The mother of yesterday was somewhat restricted in her choice of a husband. Naturally, marriage being the only career open to her, her parents were anxious to see her settled in life, and undue pressure was often brought to bear. Chaperonage, too, was strictly applied; therefore, girls had far less opportunity of judging what the man they were going to marry was really like. Being so strictly watched, only by sly manoeuvre could they achieve knowledge of his temper, generosity, decency . . . and our nicest mothers were sly. Today, social relations between men and women are so free and unhampered that we can hardly wonder that our mothers should lift their voices in protest. Rather should we marvel that they accept so much in silence.

What careers were open to the girls of our mothers' period, when they were driven by circumstances to earn their own living? With the exception of nursing all professions were closed; employment in offices was almost unheard of; they could hope to become governesses, companions, readers, aspire only to dependent positions. The daughter of today can choose practically any career she desires; her one difficulty is to overcome a rather tottering parental opposition. In choosing a career she is aware that she will enhance rather than endanger her chance of marriage.

Again, undue restriction of our mothers' education and career made them mentally uninteresting to the men they married; this was probably the cause of a great deal of domestic friction. Their chief training was in domesticity, and this was cultivated to such a pitch that in many cases it proved disastrous. Many homes have been ruined by the zealousness of the housewife. Wives spent their day harried by domestic details, with the result that when their husbands came home they had no conversation beyond the misdemeanors of the rest of the household. Husbands returning from the office, laden with worries, did not care to be confronted with those of the household; inevitable collisions ensued. Neither of the parties was particularly to blame; what was at fault was this craze for domestic perfection. Today the care of the house may be neglected, but, on the other hand, the husband is more likely to find on his return at night an interesting and cheerful wife, ready to enter into his affairs. From the point of view of housekeeping all the man desires is good food, decently served. On the whole, he cares little whether the housemaid sweeps the carpets properly; he does not want to know that the cook is giving her mother half a pound of his sugar every week.

Here I realize that many will contradict me, but I do not hesitate to assert that the mother of yesterday did not love children in general as we love children today. Her own child she loved with the passion of possession, because it was hers, not because it was a lovable child. The bottle the person who suggested that it was anything but perfect! Children with stepmothers were always looked upon with pity; it was thought that their stepmothers could not care for them with anything like the passion they felt for their own children. Stories of cruel stepmothers are today unusual, while in the past they were common. In one case I know of it was taken for granted that the stepdaughter should be left out when it was necessary for one child to stay at home. In other words, our mothers loved the child as part of their person; they felt no social responsibility for the welfare of all children; they had not the sense of community, which expresses itself today in municipal nurseries, clinics, etc.

Our mothers were totally incapable of impersonal criticism; they view with horror the present-day mothers, who calmly state that the love of their children is selfish, another plain. They considered it one of the most important duties of the parent to refuse to admit a fault in their child, and they would listen to no criticism from friends or relations.

Criticism and displeasure were much less frequent than they are today. Children were punished or their faults were condoned chiefly according to the mother's mood. Reasoning and punishment were much more pronounced and carried out with little or no justice. An example of this was given me by a man the other day, who remembers a particular whipping he received from his mother when 9 years of age, because he innocently repeated at a luncheon party a remark his mother had made in his presence about a woman friend. This caused her considerable embarrassment, though the child was unaware of the crime he was committing. The whipping must have been unduly violent to be remembered after 30 years; the injustice of the punishment is obvious to the modern mother. The above illustrates how children were punished to afford a vent for the irritation of their parents, rather than to show them the wrong they had done. So much for punishment, but quite as many children were unduly spoiled as were unduly punished. Thus, a girl I knew has surprised her parents considerably when, after a life of spoiling, her father ordered her to break off her engagement. She refused and ran away with the man. The parents cannot grasp that her excessively indulgent bringing-up gave her lessons in insubordination.

Another bad influence on children was the way in which parents unhesitatingly created a scene in the presence of their children and even demanded that the children should take sides. I remember a case of a child being awakened at night by an irate mother to choose between living with her or with her father. The result was hysterical terror for the child, so the parents forgot their disagreement in their efforts to console the frightened offspring. Today scenes of this description are avoided with the utmost care. Indeed, where incompatibility exists between the parents' temperaments the modern child for many years often hears nothing of it.

Today children are carefully watched and developed on their own lines of individuality, but the mothers of yesterday tended to bring up their children according to their own desires and plans. No discrimination was employed as to their talents and temperament. Music and painting were forced upon them, irrespective of inclination. Daughters were trained exclusively in accomplishments, not careers; a great deal of the friction of the last 10 years has arisen through girls demanding to be trained in careers and refusing to be content with accomplishments.

Children were discussed much too openly in their presence and suffered greatly from the parents' pride in displaying their attainments. Today we tend to play with our children more and to display them less. Visitors are generally taken to the nursery to watch the children at play; the unhappy victims are no longer marshaled to the drawing room to perform their parlor tricks; we exhibit them as they are, for better or worse.

Curiosity as to the facts of life was rigorously suppressed; the result upon the childish mind was to create morbid curiosity. Today the modern parent does not seek to inform but treats such questions as sensible and in a matter-of-fact way.

Perhaps one of the most difficult things to cope with in the mother of yesterday was her demand for unquestioning obedience and affection. The daughter of today suffers continually from the parents' demand for the subordination of the will and the heart. Generally she is willing to give spontaneous affection, but at the same time she wishes to maintain her own individuality; thus, she comes into conflict with her parents because they demand that she should yield to their wishes, that not only her actions but her thoughts should be subject to their authority. The mother of yesterday must realize that owing to the wider education she has given her daughters she must expect to find in them a corresponding spirit of independence.

Music and painting were forced upon them, irrespective of inclination.

The main complaint made against the modern daughter by her parents is her lack of sense of duty toward them. That position is changing. Nowadays one of the last things desired by a modern mother is that her children should do things for her only from a sense of duty. Beyond a doubt the demands made on the modern girl by her parents are extremely selfish. The girl is expected to give herself up completely to her parents' wishes, irrespective of her aspirations to a career, a mode of life selected by herself. Marriage is, in her parents' eyes, the one career that justifies the girl leaving her home. In nine cases out of 10, when girls take up careers, even with the consent of their parents, they know at the same time that they have implanted in their parents' minds a feeling of disappointment. To the mother of yesterday it seems impossible that her daughter should feel a strong love for her parents and yet forsake the parental roof.

The American mother of yesterday is far in

The Unfinished House Where Hammers Ran

Multi-millionaire woman is said to have received a supernatural message in 1892 that she was about to begin building a dwelling and would die "when hammers ceased to ring"—She kept the workmen constantly on the task, adding room after room, until at her death, after three decades of construction, she left an amazing structure of 102 chambers with others started at each end ::

QUITE solidly material, yet a thing of mystery, is the "spirit house" left by Mrs. Sarah Winchester, who died recently in the home she never completed, notwithstanding the fact that as it stands it contains no less than 102 rooms. Although this strangest and most amazing dwelling on the globe has been in process of construction for 30 years and millions of dollars have been expended in the work, the hammers of the builders continued to ring upon it until death stopped the task. At each end of the rambling mansion near San Jose, Cal., uncompleted rooms are left.

In 1892 Mrs. Winchester is said to have had a message from the spirit world which, put briefly into words, substantially was to this effect:

"Sarah Winchester, you are about to undertake the building of a house, and when the hammers cease to ring upon it you will die."

The spirit message was interpreted literally by the wealthy widow. She was so deeply impressed with its ominous import that she hastened to obey the injunction. She must begin to build a house. She must continue building it without ceasing, cessation meaning her death. So long as she kept the hammers ringing her lease of life was secure. Thus did she give visible and audible expression to her implicit belief in the reliability of the warning message which she believed to have come from the realm of the disembodied.

Mrs. Winchester immediately purchased a tract of 50 acres lying southwest of San Jose. She employed architects and had the groundwork of a dwelling laid out. She hired workmen and set them at the task. Year after year rang the hammers. When the house became habitable, Mrs. Winchester moved into it. Year after year, beyond the rooms she occupied, rang the hammers of the workmen building additional rooms. The structure outgrew the original ground plan. More area was added. Years and years ago the house grew to mansion dimensions, yet still the hammers rang.

"When the hammers cease to ring you will die!"

Mrs. Winchester, an aging recluse, continued to believe that so long as she could hear the sound of the hammers she would live. The music was sweet to her ears, sweeter even than the compositions of the masters of melody and harmony in which she delighted. Addition after addition was built, to be torn down and rebuilt, or to be altered in plan—anything to keep the hammers ringing.

Mrs. Winchester remained to her death as little known to her neighbors as on the day she began building her house. All strangers were excluded from the grounds. There was a special inhibition of persons with cameras. The executors of the estate respect the woman's wishes in this respect, maintaining a guard against those who desire to take photographs of the premises. When the work of construction began Mrs. Winchester planted eucalyptus trees in a close-set line to shield the house from curious sightseers. The eucalyptus grows with astonishing rapidity. The avenue planted 30 years ago now form a high stockade that hides the "spirit house" from the world's gaze.

When Mrs. Winchester began her 38-year fight against the spirits her fortune was estimated at $20,000,000. She left an estate of about $4,000,000. The dwindling of her wealth was due to two drains—the immense sums she spent on the "spirit house" and the large charities she maintained. While she had millions on the strange whim which caused her to build and rebuild and keep on building indefinitely, without ceasing, her heart was with the needs of others. Ultimately her entire estate will go to charitable institutions, chief of which is the New Haven (Conn.) Tuberculosis Hospital, which she founded.

Mrs. Winchester was the widow of William Wirt Winchester, whose father founded the Winchester Repeating Arms Co. It was from this business that the huge income came. The source of her income seems to have been an added burden which this gentle recluse carried, for she was known to have told a friend repeatedly:

"Because my income comes from rifles and ammunition that take life, I must be careful and do much for humanity."

The house which Mrs. Winchester was always building consisted originally of 18 rooms. It was called Llanada Villa. Under the hands of Eastern architects and Eastern workmen it grew to 102 rooms, and is the strangest patchwork ever thrown into one building. There is no apparent adherence to design in its structure. There are large windows and small windows, round windows, square windows, leaded windows and windows of art glass. Doors open in and out of the horse without apparent purpose, and many of the upper floor even open into space. There are miles of corridors in the house, and porches, cupolas and pergolas galore. Before the earthquake which laid San Francisco in ruins there was a tower seven stories high above the structure, but it was razed by the shock and has never been rebuilt.

Thirty Years Because of Spirit Warnings

The main living room in this unique place is a thing of beauty. It is paneled in solid mahogany and fitted with rare old Sheraton furniture and blue Antwerp hangings. Fantastic Oriental rugs cover the highly polished floor. It is a room fit for royal affairs of state, yet it has never been graced by a guest. An odd part of its furnishings consists of two safes, in which were kept the gold and silver plate which Mrs. Winchester had used on the table each day. The servants were required to lock this plate away after each meal.

The music room is another on which the elderly recluse spent a fortune. She was very fond of good music, and it is told that at one time she offered the Bostonians $20,000 to render their opera in her home for her exclusive hearing. This was impossible, owing to dates made for the company and to the train schedule. The music room has walls and ceiling of stucco work, beautifully frescoed by a famous mural painter. In this room are to be found not only the piano, but a splendid orchestrall, phonographs, a pianola and virtually every known musical instrument, most of which never have been played upon.

The entrance hall to the mansion is known as prism hall, and its beauty probably is not exceeded by any house in the world. The doors to the hall never were known to have been unlocked, entrance to the house being by an uncomfortable side staircase that leads into a bare reception room. Prism hall is 8x40 feet in size and has a wainscoting of prisms so solidly set that no wood is visible. Thousands upon thousands of these prisms were used, and the effect is such that one walking the length of the hall finds them a maze of scintillating brilliance and dazzling rainbow colors. There is nothing in the hall to detract the attention but a few solid mahogany pedestals on which stand rare Italian marbles.

Despite the many handsome rooms and the rare furnishings of this home, the room about which centers the attention of the servants and the few other persons who in 30 years have had access to the house of mystery is the white satin room. This was the retreat of Mrs. Winchester and no other foot ever had been known to cross its threshold prior to her death. The floor is lined with white, the walls are hung with white satin and the chairs are all covered with white satin. Then after age had laid its palling hand on the occupant of the house and she was wheeled to the door of this sanctuary by her faithful servants, she always managed to enter it alone. Many hours of her time were spent there in silent meditation.

An exquisitely appointed bedroom which never had been used leads one to question what plans for entertainment may have been in the mind of Mrs. Winchester during all the years of her self-imposed exile. Those who had access to the house tell of the marvels of luxury—the works of art, the many curios, antiques and tapestries—that had been gathered from the ends of the earth to gratify the exquisite taste of the builder and apparently to clothe with beauty rooms that could be used only for the entertainment of large numbers of people. These things would seem to indicate that there was always struggling with the strange obsession a mind that pleaded for balance and reassured its possessor that at some time the whim would be overcome and she would be able to take her place in the world again, without the continual fear.

The gardens about the mansion were magnificent. Mrs. Winchester is said to have employed one man for the sole purpose of cutting flowers for the many vases which adorned the rooms.

Tragedy had entered the life of Mrs. Winchester just prior to the purchasing of the tract on which she maintained a continual building operation. Death had claimed her husband and shortly thereafter her only child, and the grief was almost more than she could bear. Then came the supposed message from the spirit world that when the construction of her earthly home was completed death would claim her.

In all the years that followed she lived alone, save for the servants who attended her. She never entered another home, never attended church, never was seen in a public building, never rode in a railroad train. At times she would drive into San Jose in the early years, using her victoria. This equipage was always drawn by blooded horses, royally outfitted with harness with solid gold mountings. In later years she used a limousine. A servant always accompanied her and attended to her errands, while Mrs. Winchester remained secluded in her car at the curb.

Her life was not one of entire sadness, for she enjoyed music and laughter and the beautiful things she had gathered about her. One of the great amusements of her life was a series of love letters from a San Jose youth, who showered her with professions of love. Mrs. Winchester never acknowledged the letters, but they were said to have furnished the lonely woman a keen diversion.

It was the purpose of those associated with her to protect her from every annoyance. It is told that when neighbors half a mile away annoyed her one night by an evening of revelry she ordered the purchase of their farm at any price. A real estate dealer, the story goes, once took advantage of this trait. He informed a servant from the house that a roadhouse was to be built upon a property opposite the home. Mrs. Winchester was apprised of the fact and paid a fabulous sum for the land, this act, of course, having been anticipated by the realtor.

Aside from the fact that she continuously kept the hammers ringing upon her house, destroying parts of it when necessary to continue the work of building, Mrs. Winchester was possessed of a remarkably well-balanced mind.

She met the workmen she employed in a barren and sparsely furnished reception room, with no hint of the lavishness which marked the remainder of the house, and her dealings with them were direct and always to the point. Her generosity was unquestioned.

In her will, just probated, there is displayed the efforts of a keen mind planning that her money do that which she most desired. During the life of certain relatives they are to have the income from her properties, but on their death the remainder of the estate is to go to the Connecticut hospital which she founded and which was so dear to her.

Despite the strange reticence which marked her life and the peculiar whim which kept her always building, there was none who scoffed. Her charitable disposition was known and revered, and her neighbors conceded her the right to live as she pleased.

The Villages of the Dead—The Terrible Cry M

Arctic explorer, on recent voyage home, learned that whole towns of Eskimos on coast of Northern Labrador were wiped out by influenza three years ago—Vivid description of one village where wild dogs eating flesh from human corpses were the only living things—Pet dog in lonely island hut found guarding little girl, sick and starving, only survivor of family—Savage curs that had eaten bodies of parents and brothers and sisters were kept away from child by faithful pet

DONALD B. MacMILLAN, recently returned from his latest voyage of Arctic exploration, brings to the civilized world its first news of a tragedy extraordinary. The story told by the noted explorer and his companions is heartbreaking in its elements of human misery, yet it carries one supremely heartening feature. Man's most faithful friend, the dog, once more is pedestaled as a hero.

As a setting for this true tale of darkness and despair that is brightened by but one incident, it is well to quote briefly from MacMillan's written account of his homeward voyage in the good ship Bowdoin:

"Stretching southward outside of our course was the Iron Strand, a long and almost continuous line of reefs marked by breakers, the formidable outer guard of Northern Labrador, which denies entrance in heavy weather to a ship seeking a quiet harbor, and growls and shows its white teeth to one who would like to get out.

"Eventually we were clear of the shoals and skimming along past Nachvak and Ramah, the dark, deep entrance of which beckoned us in.

"I was loath to leave the stretch of coast. There is nothing throughout the length of the whole North American coast to compare with it in rugged beauty. Here in the workshop of the Creator seems to be a bit of unfinished world. The earth's material is scattered carelessly there at the edge of the seat in a chaotic and confused mass if rests, patiently awaiting the molding hand of time to soften the outlines, to give gentle slopes to its hillsides and less depth to its deep fiords.

"Under cover of darkness we stole into the Eskimo settlement of Hebron. Lights appeared in the houses and flashed along the shore. Scarcely was our anchor on bottom when the natives swarmed over our rails, eager to get the news of the world, for as yet no ship had arrived from the South. They immediately recognized the Bowdoin and realized that we were as eager as they were to learn something of home."

It was the MacMillan party rather than the Eskimos that learned news—local news which the isolated character of the region had kept the outside world from knowing for three years. The widespread epidemic of influenza, which in 1918 and 1919 took its death toll of thousands in the United States and other countries, almost depopulated the Eskimo villages on the wild coast of Northern Labrador and its outlying islands. Living far beyond the aid of skilled physicians, the Eskimo had not even a fighting chance for his life. The scourge, mysterious, fearful, fatal, visited him and left him and his dead and all things desolate.

Not only whole families, but whole towns, were wiped out. In some of the Eskimo villages not a living human being remained. The tale of death and desolation was told only by the visible signs of the awful visitation, its grewsome aftermath of deserted huts and the crunched bones of those who had lived and died therein. Not only had the inhabitants died, virtually unattended, from influenza, but their bodies had been eaten by the wild dogs that came in savage, starving, yelping packs and fell upon the pitiful prey that was past defense. Survivors who lived at a distance told the explorers in graphic detail of the fate of one Eskimo town near Hebron. In boats and sledges they had visited this village and found that it had returned to primitive wildness. Doors of huts swung open on their hinges. Where doors remained shut, windows had been broken open by the ferocious curs that succeeded the human population. The wild dogs were in possession of the place. No other life was present. Every man, woman and child had perished. Those who had not died from influenza when the dogs attacked the village had been killed and eaten by the ravenous curs. Weak from ravages of the disease, women had been dragged from their beds and devoured. Little children, the living along with the dead, had suffered a like fate. Crunched bones of the victims lay strewn about the streets and in the silent habitations. All human food left by the inhabitants had been devoured by the dogs.

When the Eskimos from outlying posts arrived, many dogs still were active in their horrible work. They still were dragging human bodies out of huts, in some instances through broken windows, to gnaw the flesh from the bones. In some of the dwellings the visitors found dogs snapping and biting at each other, one trying to fight the other off from the half-eaten corpse of a victim of the scourge. Clothing worn by the victims had been caught in the sharp teeth of the savage beasts and torn to shreds. The rent garments lay scattered all about the streets.

The discoverers of the village of death fought off the dogs, using their firearms, their knives and the oars from their boats. Rendered thoroughly primitive by their glut of human flesh, the dogs fought back. At last, after a battle of human ingenuity against brute instinct, the pack was driven far afield. The victors, breathless from the struggle, crouched down in the snow and heard the receding yet still defiant yelping of the dogs as they vanished in the distance to fall upon some other settlement and feed again upon frozen corpses of influenza victims.

It was a place of horrors. Some of the men who made up the party that discovered the dead town had had relatives living there. These searched the huts for their kin. Some of them found so that now and then it happens that a tiny islet is isolated almost utterly. Its few inhabitants may visit the coast or some neighboring island occasionally, but it is seldom that any visitor sets foot upon it. Communication is by ice in the long winter season, by canoe or skiff when the water is open. At best, it is a most lonely place.

Such a one-family island as thus described furnished the one bright spot in the terrible story told by the Eskimos to MacMillan and his men. Some time after the discovery of the dead town where the wild dogs still feasted upon human carrion, a party of Eskimos visited one of the outer islands. Farther out to sea than the rest, this small piece of land was washed by angry waves on the frequent days and nights of storm. It would be difficult to imagine a place more utterly desolate. Before the influenza epidemic a prosperous native family had dwelt there. The hut was large enough to accommodate father, mother and several children, not by any manner of means to forget the dog.

It is the dog—the pet of that family—which is the hero of this true story. He is a dog that deserves a monument. One of the men with MacMillan, after hearing the account of that animal's faithful devotion, said the Carnegie hero medal should be awarded to him.

THE NEWEST TOOL ON THE FAR

Daily broadcasting of market reports enables the producer to keep in touch with conditions vital to his financial success — Just how the wireless bulletins help a farmer to sell his products for what they should bring—Radio in the country districts, as described by an investigator who traveled with portable set through Missouri, Iowa and Illinois :: :: :: :: ::

Pulling his whiskers in amazement, the farmer jumped up and walked around the car, looking first at it and then at the radio demonstrator.

JOHN SMITH, livestock shipper at Blankville, is driving along the road which leads northward through one of Missouri's richest counties. Prices on the St. Louis market are steady to strong and Smith is out buying up a carload. He gets two or three head of cattle at one farm, perhaps only one at the next place, purchasing outright from the busy farmers, and, as soon as he has enough, shipping the consignment as his own property.

When he comes to the Jones place, Smith turns in and drives up near the house, where he sees Jones at work repairing a piece of farm machinery.

"Hello, Jones," says the caller. "Ready yet to sell those steers?"

"Well, I don't know," replies Jones. "What are you paying today?"

"H-m," ruminates Smith. "They're nothing fancy, of course. You know, I looked at 'em the other day. They'll go as feeders. But I'll give you $5.50 and take my chance of making something."

"Only $5.50 for steers like those?" objects Jones. "It don't seem a very good price.

"It's in line with what I been paying for several days," insists Smith, who is a man of long experience and good standing as a shipper in the vicinity of Blankville.

Then Jones, who really wants to sell if he can get a satisfactory figure, has an idea.

"Tell you what we'll do," proposes the farmer. "Let's go into town and see what they're paying at the St. Louis National Stockyards today. If we start now we'll get to the bank just about in time to see the 2:40 radio broadcast from the Post-Dispatch, and those are figures supplied by a Government office."

"All right. I'd kind of like to know how the prices are myself," replies Smith. "I've been so busy I haven't been watching them closely."

The two men then drive into Blankville, and wait until the bank's receiving station has picked up K S D for the mid-afternoon news bulletins and market reports. And the livestock report shows conclusively that feeder steers like those of Jones should bring a better price on the farm than $5.50 a hundredweight, even with freight and marketing charges to be added.

So Jones finds himself richer by a substantial sum on his few head of cattle, thanks to accurate knowledge of the ruling prices on the big market at St. Louis. He expects the shipper to make a profit, but not an exorbitant one.

And it could as well have been grain, or poultry, or eggs, or butter, which he might have sold at a smaller price than necessary, but for the daily broadcasting of actual, day-to-day values by radio. With access to radio bulletins, either through having a set of his own or through getting the information at a bank or exchange with radio service, the farmer is enabled to sell to better advantage than ever before in history.

"You'd be surprised if you could see how fast radio sets are being installed in country towns and on farms." So declares H. D. Timberlake of the traffic department, St. Louis National Stockyards, National Stockyards, Ill.

Mr. Timberlake has seen this very phenomenon, and he himself is surprised. Not only surprised about the present stage of radio development for practical purposes, but filled with enthusiasm about the promise of the future.

It was to find out just how far away the St. Louis broadcasting service is being used, and general facts about the spread of wireless apparatus through the agricultural district, that he traveled some 3000 miles of country roads in his Ford.

From two cruises, which included Missouri, Iowa and Illinois, he returned with much interesting information about rural radio, his car thickly splashed with mud but the wireless receiving set mounted on the rear intact.

"Market Information—'Right Now,'" read the big gold letters on either side of Timberlake's car, beneath the name of the stockyards. With that portable receiving set, which had borne up bravely under the wrenching and wracking of roads which ran the gamut from excellent to villainous, Timberlake stopped over at scores of towns long enough to pick up K S D, the Post-Dispatch Radio Broadcasting Station, and get the market quotations.

A loud speaker amplified the sound for the benefit of the crowd which invariably gathered. To many it was their first face-to-face experience with radio.

"K S D has a fine reputation throughout the country," said Timberlake. "Many people who own receiving sets and use them regularly told me that they preferred K S D to any of the other broadcasting stations. They have learned that K S D's quotations are correct, and, besides, they like the way that the K S D operator reads off his reports, calling off the figures slowly and then repeating them. I have seen the K S D market reports being transcribed on a typewriter in a country town, word by word, as they came in by wireless.

"People told me that they liked the K S D entertainment programs for similar reasons. The quality of the entertainment is high, the announcements very clear and the transmission excellent."

Timberlake is not a radio expert by any means, having used only a small experimental set before he started on his tour for the St. Louis National Stockyards. He says that what he knows about radio he "learned at the side of the road," after starting on the first trip. first trip. Yet in the 35 days covered by his two trips, all despite the constant travel over roads which often were rough, the set failed to function only once. The trouble, as he afterwards discovered, was a poor connection.

When Timberlake set up his apparatus in country towns, a crowd would gather before he had tuned in on K S D and was ready to hook up the loud speaker. On country roads, the passing farmers would stop to see what he was doing and most of them would stay there until he took down the antenna.

"Interested?" remarked Timberlake. "Generally they wanted to get right in the horn." Answering questions as to the cost of wireless sets was part of Timberlake's work, for which he had primed himself before starting out.

"A radio set on every farm" is, in brief, the desire of the organization which sent Timberlake forth on his travels, and purely as a matter of business. The morning and afternoon broadcasting schedule of news bulletins and market quotations by K S D is the inducement which makes the greatest appeal. The entertainment programs are usually regarded as just a pleasant "trimming" added to the utility of a farmer's receiving set.

"The men really interested in the markets—the producer, the trader and shipper—are eager for all the information that can be sent out pertaining to the markets," said Timberlake, just back from his second trip.

"Radio isn't a luxury any more, but an essential thing for the farmer and the business man. It enables him to get in touch and keep in touch with the values of commodities in which he is interested, whether these be grain or cattle or hogs or poultry."

At present, more of the commercial radio sets have been installed by country banks, exchanges in country towns and elevators than by individual farmers. Some of the banks, it may be remarked, are getting their quotations by radio and then relaying them to customers by means of the party-line telephone systems. But the farmers are beginning to buy sets for themselves.

One radio demonstration in a farmer's front yard was followed by a remark from the farmer:

"I'm going to buy one of those things. I need it." Then the wife said:

"Yes. You can use it in the daytime for business, and we'll all use it at night for pleasure and comfort."

According to Timberlake, most of the younger men on farms are already more or less familiar with radio, at least with its general principles and what can be done with a good set, even though they may never actually have heard one. The older men want to have a demonstration before they will commit themselves, as a rule. Once they have heard the quotations being broadcast from St. Louis they usually become much interested.

A curious attitude which Timberlake encountered in a very few cases was a feeling of skepticism about the whole subject of radio. The feeling, as he described it, was akin to the feeling which many people have toward the alleged proofs of spiritualism. These few people seemed to think that radio bordered on the supernatural, and was perhaps better left alone.

But such cases were so exceptional that they hardly counted. For the most part people were much interested in Timberlake's demonstrations and more than one farmer invited him in to a fine chicken dinner, such as the women of Missouri farms know how to prepare.

At Red Oak, Ia., Timberlake was talking with a group of shippers about general business conditions and finally suggested getting the day's market quotations. The shippers asked how he proposed to do so, and Timberlake said by radio.

"If you've got a radio set, let's radio," replied the Iowans, so Timberlake picked up the 2:40 broadcast of K S D, which includes news bulletins and livestock reports. When that was finished he picked up the broadcasting of plays in the world's series baseball game at New York. After listening to the baseball for awhile Timberlake started to unhook his apparatus.

"What are you going to do?" inquired the shippers.

"Pack up and move along," replied Timberlake.

"The —— you are," said the Iowans, producing a rope and threatening that the demonstrator would be "tied to a tree" unless he kept his hands off the apparatus until the game was finished. It was all good-natured, but Timberlake stayed to the end of the game.

One of his amusing experiences occurred near St. Charles, Mo., at the beginning of his first trip. A few minutes before the 2:40 broadcast of K S D was due, Timberlake had drawn out on the side of the road, run his antenna to the branch of a tree and sat down on the running board of his car to wait. Presently a farmer came up and asked:

"What are you doing? Fixing the telephone wire?"

"Yes," replied Timberlake. Whereupon the farmer sat down beside him on the running board and the two began talking of agricultural conditions. Finally came the sound of K S D's bugle call, loud and clear. Pulling his whiskers in amazement, the farmer jumped up and walked around the car, looking first at it and then at Timberlake.

"What is the music? Where does it come from?" asked the farmer, who was having his first taste of radio and liked it. So the demonstrator had to explain and the farmer stayed until the broadcast was finished. He was one of Timberlake's earliest converts.

One day Timberlake had been getting market reports from K S D when he picked up the announcement of a broadcasting station at Kansas City that Mme. Schumann-Heink would sing at 6 p. m. At a quarter to 6 he was in the vicinity of New Florence, Mo., but too far away to reach town in a quarter of an hour, so he drew out on the side of the road, fixed his antenna and waited. It had been a hard day, he was tired and wanted some recreation.

The singing started at the time announced and Timberlake was "sitting back and enjoying it," as he says, when traffic along the road began to halt there. By the end of the concert, fully 30 automobiles and wagons were standing nearby, clear of the road, as the farmers listened to the noted singer.

Timberlake tells with amusement how he spoiled an afternoon's plowing near St. Peters, Mo. As often, he had set up his apparatus at the side of the road, the antenna made fast to the branch of a large walnut tree. It was at a cross-roads, with a half-dozen mail boxes on top of posts set in the ground there. When a farmer of the neighborhood came to get his mail, Timberlake apologized for his intrusion in making use of the tree. This led to an explanation of what the traveler was doing and he invited the farmer to come back at 2:40 and listen to the K S D broadcast.

"I'm plowing. I don't believe I can come back," replied the farmer, with some indifference. Another man who came for his mail said he would be there. Promptly at 2:40 both men were on hand, with several others, too.

Presently K S D was being received splendidly. Then still another farmer, plowing in an adjacent field, was seen to unhitch his mules and tie them to the fence, after which he joined the group on the road.

"I took the antenna down at 5:15," said Timberlake. "One of the men, who had promised his wife to be home at 4 o'clock, made me go with him to prove why he failed to show up at that hour. All of them were deeply interested in the market news, and in the other stations which I picked up for them when K S D was not broadcasting."

At Wellsville, Mo., the Mayor told Timberlake to set up his apparatus wherever he wished and when the visitor expressed a preference for the busiest corner on the main street, the Mayor told him to use it, regardless of traffic. So the antenna was carried to the roof of a building and Timberlake gave an evening's entertainment to a crowd of townspeople and farmers.

"It was past midnight when I disconnected the set," said Timberlake. "Then I had an experience which was repeated in a good many other places. It seems that a lot of people in the crowd had been wondering what I was going to sell. Some of them even suspected I would produce bottles of patent medicine, or soap, or something of that kind.

"When the entertainment closed without my starting to peddle anything, the comments of surprise and the expressions on many of their faces were almost ludicrous."

In one place, Timberlake saw a man and wife, invalids, who were driving in their little car to a health resort and attempting to make expenses along the way by taking up collections after giving mandolin concerts in the towns. They had not been able to draw a crowd in this town, and when Timberlake drove in the man asked him to "set up" near their own car.

Timberlake did so, the usual throng gathered to listen to the radio broadcasts, and when that was finished, a large proportion of them went over to hear the mandolin music of the invalids, who took up a collection of several dollars.

An interesting feature of the crowds which assembled in country towns to hear the radio broadcasts, both market quotations and news in the afternoon and entertainment programs in the evening, was the presence of a goodly proportion of traveling men. They were men stopping over there on business, and they welcomed the wireless programs and enjoyed them as much as the country people did, according to Timberlake.

Timberlake's equipment consists of a crystal set with amplifier and a loud speaker. The units are fastened securely in a cabinet on the rear of his car.

"Many people have thought that wireless sets were too delicately constructed to withstand rough treatment," says Timberlake. "My experience while driving some 3000 miles over rough country roads does not prove it to be so. We made everything as secure as we could, with felt-covered boards and plenty of braces. I had no trouble whatever."

Radio enthusiasts may be interested in the way this set is used. The car is drawn up near, but not too near, to a large tree. Then Timberlake takes a 100-foot length of rope, with an osage orange fastened to one end of it. The orange is cast over a limb of the tree and the rope provides a means by which the antenna is placed in position. An osage orange is used instead of a rock or a piece of metal because experience has shown that the orange is less apt to catch or become entangled in the twigs of the tree.

When the two ends of the rope are dangling from the desired limb, Timberlake fastens one end of his 100-foot copper wire to the car, using a short length of rope, then walks back 100 feet and fastens the other end of the wire to the free end of the dangling rope. By hauling down on the rope end to which the osage orange is attached, he stretches his antenna wire, leaving about three feet of rope between the wire and the limb of the tree. The rope serves as an insulator at either end of the wire. A short lead-in wire runs from the long wire to the radio set in the car.

Then he puts down his ground pole, consisting of an iron stake five feet long. This is not pounded into the ground, but only worked in by hand, so that it will come out easily. Now he is ready to connect the receiver, put on his head set and begin tuning in. Once he has picked up the station he wants, the loud speaker is connected into the circuit, in place of the phones.

Experience has shown that for demonstration purposes, especially before a skeptical audience, it is best to use the head-set first, because the harsh, crackling sounds which may be expected from the loud speaker while tuning tend to diminish the general effect, however clearly the broadcast may come in later.

"You are serving a class of people interested financially in the biggest industry in the United States, which is agriculture," said an official of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, located at the St. Louis National Stockyards, to a representative of K S D.

If some marketing is under consideration and the radio report is urgent, the wife or daughter may deliver it to the farmer as he works.

A BLACK CAT FOR LUCK

By P. G. WODEHOUSE

HE WAS black but comely. Obviously in reduced circumstances, he had nevertheless contrived to retain a certain smartness, a certain air—what the French call the tournure. Nor had poverty killed in him the aristocrat's instinct of personal cleanliness; for, even as Elizabeth caught sight of him, he began to wash himself.

At the sound of her step he looked up. He did not move, but there was suspicion in his attitude. The muscles of his back contracted; his eyes glowed like yellow lamps against the black velvet; his tail switched a little, warningly.

Elizabeth looked at him. He looked at Elizabeth. There was a pause, while he summed her up. Then he stalked toward her, and, suddenly lowering his head, drove it vigorously against her dress. He permitted her to pick him up and carry him into the hallway, where Francis, the janitor, stood.

"Francis," said Elizabeth, "does this cat belong here?"

"No, miss. That cat's a stray, that cat is. I been trying to locate that cat's owner for days."

Francis spent his time trying to locate things. It was the one recreation of his eventless life. Sometimes it was a noise, sometimes a lost letter, sometimes a piece of ice which had gone astray in the dumbwaiter; whatever it was, Francis tried to locate it.

"Has he been around here long, then?"

"I seen him snooping about considerable time."

"I shall keep him."

"Black cats bring luck," said Francis, sententiously.

"I certainly shan't object to that," said Elizabeth.

She was feeling that morning that a little luck would be a pleasing novelty. Things had not been going well with her of late. It was not so much that the usual proportion of her manuscripts had come back with editorial compliments from the magazines to which they had been sent—she accepted that as part of the game; what she did consider scurvy treatment at the hands of fate was the fact that her own "pet" magazine, the one to which she had been accustomed to fly for refuge, almost sure of a welcome, when coldly treated by all the others, had suddenly expired with a low gurgle for want of public support. It was like losing a kind and open-handed relative, and it made the addition of a black cat to the household almost a necessity.

In her apartment, the door closed, she watched her new ally with some anxiety. He had behaved admirably on the journey upstairs, but she would not have been surprised, though it would have pained her, if he had now proceeded to try to escape through the ceiling. Cats were so emotional. However, he remained calm, and after padding silently about the room for a while, raised his head and uttered a crooning cry.

"That's right," said Elizabeth, cordially. "If you don't see what you want, ask for it. The place is yours."

She went to the icebox and produced milk and sardines. There was nothing finicky or affected about her guest. He concentrated himself on the restoration of his tissues with the purposeful air of one whose last meal is a dim memory. Elizabeth, brooding over him like a Providence, wrinkled her forehead in thought.

"Joseph," she said, at last, brightening, "that's your name. Now settle down and start being a mascot."

Joseph settled down amazingly. By the end of the second day he was conveying the impression that he was the owner of the apartment. Like most of his species, he was an autocrat. He waited to ascertain which was Elizabeth's favorite chair; then he appropriated it for his own. If Elizabeth closed a door while he was in a room, he wanted it opened so that he might go out; if she closed it while he was outside, he wanted it opened so that he might come in; if she left it open, he fussed about the draft. But the best of us have our faults, and Elizabeth adored him in spite of his.

It was astonishing what a difference he made in her life. She was a friendly soul, and, until Joseph's arrival, she had to depend for company mainly on the footsteps of the man in the apartment across the way. Moreover, the building was an old one, and it creaked at night. There was a loose board in the passage which made burglar noises in the dark behind you when you stepped on it on the way to bed, and there were funny scratching sounds which made you jump and hold your breath. Joseph soon put a stop to all that. With Joseph around, a loose board became a loose board—nothing more—and a scratching noise just a plain scratching noise.

And then one afternoon he disappeared.

Having searched the apartment without finding the cat, Elizabeth went to the window, with the intention of making a bird's-eye survey of the street. She was not hopeful, for she had just come from the street, and there had been no sign of him then.

Outside the window was a broad ledge, running the width of the building. It terminated on the left in a shallow balcony belonging to the apartment whose front door faced hers—the apartment of the young man whose footsteps she sometimes heard. She knew he was a young man, because Francis had told her so. His name, James Renshaw Boyd, she had learned from the same source.

On this shallow balcony, licking his fur with the tip of a crimson tongue and generally behaving as if he were in his own back yard, sat Joseph.

"Jo-seph!" cried Elizabeth, surprise, joy and reproach combining to give her voice an almost melodramatic quiver.

He looked at her coldly. Worse, he looked at her as if she were an utter stranger. Bulging with her meat and drink, he cut her dead; and, having done so, he turned and walked into the next apartment.

Elizabeth was a girl of spirit. Joseph might look at her as if she were a saucerful of tainted milk, but he was her cat, and she meant to get him back. She went out and rang the bell of Mr. James Renshaw Boyd's apartment.

The door was opened by a young man. He was by no means an unsightly young man. Indeed, of his type—the rough-haired, clean-shaven, square-jawed type—he was a distinctly good-looking young man. Even though she was regarding him at the moment in the light of a machine for returning strayed cats, Elizabeth noticed that.

She smiled upon him. It was not the fault of this nice-looking young man that his sitting-room window was open, or that Joseph was an ungrateful little beast who should have no fish that night.

"Would you mind letting me have my cat, please?" she said, pleasantly. "He has gone into your sitting room through the window."

He looked faintly surprised.

"Your cat?"

"My black cat, Joseph. He is in your sitting room."

"I'm afraid you have come to the wrong place. I've just left my sitting room, and the only cat there is my black cat, Reginald."

"But I saw Joseph go in only a moment ago."

"That was Reginald."

For the first time, as one who, examining a fair shrub, abruptly discovers that it is poison ivy, Elizabeth realized the truth. This was no innocent young man who stood before her, but the blackest criminal known to criminologists—a stealer of other people's cats. Her manner shot down to zero.

"May I ask how long you have had your Reginald?"

"Since—4 o'clock this afternoon."

"Did he come in through the window?"

"Why, yes, now you mention it, he did."

"I must ask you to be good enough to give me back my cat," said Elizabeth, icily.

He regarded her defensively.

"Assuming," he said, "purely for the purposes of academic argument, that your Joseph is my Reginald, couldn't we come to an agreement of some sort? Let me buy you another cat—a dozen cats."

"I don't want a dozen cats. I want Joseph."

"Fine, fat, soft cats," he went on, persuasively. "Lovely, affectionate Persians and Angoras and"——

"Of course, if you intend to steal Joseph"——

"Those are harsh words. Any lawyer will tell you that there are special statutes regarding cats. To retain a stray cat is not a tort for a malfeasance; the celebrated test case of Wiggins vs. Blashford was established"——

"Will you please give me back my cat?"

She stood facing him, her chin in the air and her eyes shining, and the young man suddenly felt a victim to conscience.

"Look here," he said, "I'll throw myself on your mercy. I admit the cat is your cat, and that I have no right to it, and that I am just a common sneak thief. But consider: I had just come back from the first rehearsal of my first play; and, as I walked in the door that cat walked in at the window. I'm superstitious, and I felt that to give him up would be equivalent to killing the play before ever it was produced. You have no idiotic superstitions. You are more practical. Put, in the circumstances, if you shall go your way to waiving your rights"——

Before the wistfulness of his eye Elizabeth capitulated. How she had misjudged him! She had taken him for an ordinary, soulless purloiner of cats, a snapper-up of cats at random and without reason; and all the time he had been reluctantly compelled to the act by this deep and praiseworthy motive. And the unselfishness and love of sacrifice innate in good women stirred within her.

"Why, of course, you mustn't let him go. It would mean awful bad luck."

"But how about you?"

"Never mind about me. Think of all the people who are dependent on your play being a success."

The young man blinked.

"This is overwhelming," he said.

"I had no notion that you wanted him. He was nothing to me—at least, nothing much—that is to say—well, I suppose I was rather fond of him, but he was not—not"——

"Vital?"

"That's just the word I wanted. He was just company, you know."

"Haven't you many friends?"

"I haven't any friends."

"You haven't any friends! That settles it. You must take him back."

"I couldn't think of it."

"But, good gracious, how do you suppose I should feel, knowing that you were all alone and that I had sneaked your—your ewe-lamb, as it were?"

"And how do you suppose I should feel if your play failed simply for lack of a black cat?"

He started and ran his fingers through his rough hair in an overwrought manner.

"Solomon couldn't have solved this problem," he said. "How would it be—it seems the only possible way out—if you were to retain a sort of managerial right in him? Couldn't you sometimes step across and chat with him—and me, incidentally, over here? I'm very nearly as lonesome as you are. Chicago is my home. I hardly know a soul in New York."

"Black cats bring luck," said Francis, sententiously.

A SPRIGHTLY TALE OF LOVE AND HUMOR

There came a sudden shout from the floor above, and on the heels of it a shock-haired youth in pajamas burst into the apartment.

Her solitary life in the big city had forced upon Elizabeth the ability to form instantaneous judgments on the men she met. She flashed a glance at the young man, and decided in his favor.

"It's very kind of you," she said. "I should love to. I want to hear all about your play. I write, myself, in a small way, so a successful playwright is Somebody to me."

"I wish I were a successful playwright."

"Well, you are having the first play you have ever written produced on Broadway. That's pretty wonderful."

"H'm—yes," said the young man. It seemed to Elizabeth that he spoke doubtfully, and this modesty consolidated the favorable impression she had formed.

The gods are just. For every ill which they inflict they also supply a compensation. It seems good to them that individuals in big cities shall be lonely, but they have so arranged that, if one of these individuals does at least contrive to seek out and form a friendship with another, that friendship shall grow more swiftly than the tepid acquaintanceships of those on whom the icy touch of loneliness has never fallen. Within a week Elizabeth was feeling that she had known this James Renshaw Boyd all her life.

And yet there was a tantalizing incompleteness about his personal reminiscences. Elizabeth was one of those persons who like to begin a friendship with a full statement of their position, their previous life and the causes which led up to their being in this particular spot at this particular time. At their next meeting, before he had time to say much on his own account, she told him of the small Illinois town where she passed the early part of her life; of the rich and unexpected aunt who sent her to college, for no particular reason that anyone could ascertain except that she enjoyed doing the unexpected; of the legacy from this same aunt, far smaller than might have been hoped for, but sufficient to send a grateful Elizabeth to New York to try her luck there; of editors, magazines, manuscripts refused or accepted; plots for stories; of life in general, as lived down where the arch spans Fifth avenue and the lighted cross of the Judson shines by night on Washington Square.

Ceasing eventually, she waited for him to begin. And he did not begin—not, that is to say, in the sense the word conveyed to Elizabeth. He spoke briefly of college, still more briefly of Chicago, which city he appeared to regard with distaste that made Lot's attitude toward the Cities of the Plain almost kindly by comparison. Then, as if he had fulfilled the demands of the most exacting inquisitor in the matter of personal reminiscence, he began to speak of the play.

The only facts concerning him to which Elizabeth could really have sworn with a clear conscience at the end of the second week of their acquaintance were that he was very poor and that this play meant everything to him.

The statement that it meant everything to him insinuated itself so frequently into his conversation that it weighed on Elizabeth's mind like a burden, and by degrees she found herself giving the play place of honor in her thoughts over and above her own little ventures.

At an early stage in their friendship the young man told her the plot of the piece; and, if he had not unfortunately forgotten several important episodes and had to leap back to them across a gulf of one or two acts, and if he had referred to his characters by name instead of by such descriptions as "the fellow who's in love with the girl—not what's-his-name, but the other chap," no doubt she would have got that mental half-nelson on it, which is such a help toward the proper understanding of a four-act comedy. As it was, his precis left her a little vague; but she said it was perfectly splendid, and he said, "Do you really think so?" and she, "Yes, I do," and both were happy.

Rehearsals preyed on Mr. Boyd's spirits a good deal—at least so it seemed to Elizabeth. He attended them with the pathetic regularity of the young dramatist, but they appeared to bring him little balm. In the evening Elizabeth generally found him steeped in gloom, and then she would postpone the recital, to which she had been looking forward, of whatever little triumph she might have happened to win, and devote herself to the task of cheering him up. If women were wonderful in no other way, they would be wonderful for their genius for listening to shop instead of talking it.

Elizabeth was feeling more than a little proud of the way in which her judgment of this young man was being justified. Life in Bohemian New York had left her decidedly wary of strange young men, not formally introduced. But their relations, she told herself, were so splendidly unsentimental! There was no need for that silent defensiveness which had come to seem almost an inevitable accompaniment to dealings with the opposite sex. James Boyd, she felt, she could trust; and it was wonderful how soothing the reflection was.

And that was why, when the thing happened, it so shocked and frightened her.

It had been one of their quiet evenings. Of late periods together without speaking. But it had differed from other quiet evenings through the fact that Elizabeth's silence hid a slight but well-defined feeling of injury. Usually she sat happy with her thoughts, but tonight she was ruffled. She had a grievance.

That afternoon the editor of an evening paper had informed her definitely that the man who had conducted the "Advice to Lovelorn" column having resigned, the post of "Heloise Milton," official adviser to readers troubled with affairs of the heart, was hers. Imagine how Napoleon felt after Austerlitz, picture Mlle. S. Lenglen, after defeating Mrs. Mallory at tennis, try to visualize a suburban householder who sees a flower emerging from the soil in which he has inserted a packet of guaranteed seeds, and you will have some faint conception of how Elizabeth felt as those golden words proceeded from that editor's lips.

She told him the great news.

He said: "Ah!"

There are many ways of saying "Ah!" You can put joy, amazement, rapture into it; you can also make it sound as if it were a reply to a remark on the weather. James Boyd made it sound just like that. His hair was rumpled, his brow contracted, his manner absent.

The impression he gave Elizabeth was that he barely heard her.

The next moment he was deep in a recital of the misdemeanors of the actors now rehearsing his four-act comedy. The star had done this, the leading woman that, the juvenile something else. For the first time Elizabeth listened unsympathetically.

The time came when speech failed James Boyd, and he sat back in his chair, brooding. Elizabeth, cross and wounded, sat in hers, nursing Joseph. And so, in a dim light, time flowed by.

Just how it happened, she never knew. One moment, peace; the next, chaos. One moment, stillness; the next, Joseph hurtling the air, all claws and expletives, and herself caught in a clasp that shook the breath from her, and kised so emphatically that it seemed not so much a kiss as a Black Hand explosion.

One can dimly reconstruct James' train of thought. He is in despair; things are going badly at the theater, and life has lost its savor. His eye, as he sits, is caught by Elizabeth's profile. It is a pretty, above all a soothing, profile. An almost painful sentimentality sweeps over James Boyd. There she sits, his only friend in this cruel city. If you argue that there is no necessity to spring at your only friend and nearly choke her, you argue soundly; the point is well taken. But James Boyd was beyond the reach of sound argument. Much rehearsing had frayed his nerves to ribbons. One may say that he was not responsible for his actions.

That is the case for James. Elizabeth, naturally, was not in a position to take a wide and understanding view of it. All she knew was that James had played her false, abused her trust in him. For a moment, such was the shock of the surprise, she was not conscious of indignation—or indeed, of any sensation except the purely physical one of semi-strangulation. Then, flushed and more bitterly angry than she could ever have imagined herself capable of being, she began to struggle. She tore herself away from him. Coming on top of her grievance, this thing filled her with a sudden, very vivid hatred of James. At the back her anger, feeding it, was the humiliating thought that it was all her own fault, that by her presence there she had invited this.

She groped her way to the door. Something was writhing and struggling inside of her, blinding her eyes and robbing her of speech. She was conscious of a desire to be alone, to be back safe and alone, in her own home. She was aware that he was speaking, but the words did not reach her. She found the door and pulled it open. She felt a hand on her arm, but she shook it off. And then she was back behind her own door—alone and at liberty to contemplate at leisure the ruins of that little temple of friendship which she had built up so carefully and in which she had been so happy.

The broad fact that she would never forgive him was for a while her only coherent thought. To this succeeded the determination that she would never forgive herself. And, having thus placed beyond the pale the only two friends she had in New York, she was free to devote herself without hindrance to the task of feeling thoroughly lonely and wrecked.

The shadows deepened. Across the street a sort of bubbling explosion, followed by a jerky glare that shot athwart the room, announced the lighting of the big arc lamp on the opposite sidewalk. She resented it, being in the mood for undiluted gloom; but she had not the energy to pull down the shade and shut it out. She sat where she was, thinking thoughts that hurt.

The door of the apartment opposite opened. There was a single ring at her bell. She did not answer it. There came another. She sat where she was, motionless. The door closed again.

The days dragged by. Elizabeth lost cout of time. Each day had its duties, which ended when you went to bed; that was all she knew—except that life had become very gray and very lonely, far lonelier than in the time when James Boyd was nothing to her but an occasional sound of footsteps.

Of James she saw nothing. It is not difficult to avoid anyone in New York, even when you live just across the way.

It was Elizabeth's first act each morning, immediately on awakening, to open her front door and gather in whatever lay outside it. Sometimes there would be mail, and always, unless Francis, as he sometimes did, got mixed and absent-minded, the morning milk and the morning paper.

One morning, some two weeks after that evening of which she tried not to think, Elizabeth opening the door, found immediately outside it, a folded scrap of paper. She unfolded it.

"I am just off to the theater. Won't you wish me

BREVITY IS THE SOUL OF WIT IN CORRESPONDENCE

RECENTLY Major-General Sir F. Maurice of England wrote a note to Lloyd George requesting him to withdraw his statement that certain information supplied to him by the General was incorrect, or the latter would send his letter to the press. The Premier's secretary, in a brief letter, referred Gen. Maurice, "with all courtesy," to a short observation made in similar circumstances by the Duke of Wellington: "Publish and be damned."

This drew the attention of a London Daily Express writer to the fact that the Iron Duke was the most noted of all laconic letter writers. Another of the Duke's famous letters, it was pointed out, was to Sarah, Countess of Jersey, who wrote to him, "The Emperor Nicholas is coming to see me. How shall I receive him? Yours, etc., Sarah Jersey."

He replied: "Receive him as you do your other visitors. Yours, Wellington, F. M."

Lady Jersey answered: "But he loves me. Yours, etc., Sarah Jersey."

Not to be outdone in brevity or in dramatic effectiveness, the Duke replied: "Receive him as you do your other lovers. Yours, etc., Wellington, F. M."

A third example of the Duke's laconic mind is furnished by a letter he wrote to Sir Charles Russell when that gentleman endeavored to obtain a subscription from him for the restoration of the Church of Swallowfield. "Dear Sir Charles: I, too, am restoring a church and if we can both agree to give the same amount, no money need pass between us."

Not less famous as a quotation than the Duke of Wellington's letter to the anonymous lady is one Mr. Stanley, the Colonial Secretary, wrote to Sir James Graham, the First Lord of the Admiralty, when Lord John Russell announced the breaking up of Earl Grey's Cabinet on May 27, 1834. He wrote: "My Dear Graham: Johnny has upset the coach. Yours, etc., Stanley."

For direct sententiousness, few letters are more renowned than those exchanged by Rich, the manager of Covent Garden Theater, and Quinn, the famous actor of his day. They had a great quarrel, and Quinn retired from the theater in high dudgeon and betook himself to Bath. While there Rich arrived, and Quinn, desiring to bury the hatchet, wrote: "Dear Quinn: I am at Bath." In reply Rich wrote: "Dear Quinn: Stay there and be damned."

Among other notable instances of the same meritorious brevity are the following:

At one time Sennen, St. Levan and Buryan constituted a deanery which was held for several decades by Mr. Stanhope. In 1867, when a church at Gravesend was to be restored, the then Duke of York, despite the opinion of one in authority, insisted on the appointment of Mr. Stanhope, wrote to the Bishop of Cork: "Dear Cork: Ordain Stanhope. Yours, York."

The reply came: "Dear York: Stanhope ordained. Yours, Cork."

Scarcely less succinct was a letter once written by Gen. Sir Robert Boyd, when Governor of Gibraltar, to his agent in England when ordering his private supply. The letter, telegraphic in its brevity, ran as follows: "Browne: Beef. Boyd."

The answer received was equally brief: "Boyd. Beef. Browne."

When the first visitors following the scourge landed upon the island, they heard the furious yelping of maddened curs. Carrying their oars, they made their way up to the hut. On the way thither they paused briefly to examine the skeletons of a man, a woman and several boys and girls. These pitiful remains had been left here and there in the snow, after the dogs had finished with them. They had been dragged out of the hut, probably some of them even before death had claimed them. The wild pack had crossed to the island on the ice.

Louder and louder grew the yapping, yelping sounds as the visitors advanced. The door of the hut swung open. The first man to reach the threshold beheld a scene that for a brief time held him spellbound. Inside the one big room that had been the living room of those now dead and mangled outside was a bed, over against the wall. Upon the bed lay a little girl about 8 years old, moaning. She crouched close against the wall, with bony fingers holding the coverings upon her emaciated body. She was described by the men as merely a living skeleton. Disease and hunger had picked her bones.

In a semicircle near the walls farthest from the bed was a pack of long, lean, sinewy dogs. They were snapping and snarling. Some sat upon their haunches, howling. Others were on all four feet, darting forward at times, their jaws wide open, dripping froth. But not one of the avid curs dared advance to the bedside.

There was a reason. Another long, lean, hungry dog was the reason. He was a domesticated dog, a brute beast reclaimed from the wild, descendant of ancestors that in prehistoric times had roamed the wilderness, attacking and slaying beasts much bigger than themselves, and looking upon the cave man as legitimate and comparatively easy prey. Through long ages this dog had come down, slowly but surely losing attributes of savagery and acquiring traits of gentleness.

In some era thousands and thousands of years ago one of his ancestors had been captured, as a puppy, by a hairy human who dwelt in a cave. That puppy, growing up, had been bred to a female of the species similarly captured. The pair had been trained to obedience, through kindness of a rough-and-ready sort had been made to know that man was not an enemy, but would be, if given half a chance, a friend. Through the ages, generation after generation, the progeny of that pair had been associated with man.

As man advanced, the dog advanced. As man grew less brutal, the dog divested himself of some of his ferocity. As man became gentle rather than fierce, he petted the dog; and the dog responded to the petting. The reaction was favorable to both. And so, in time, the man loved the dog and the dog loved the man and became and remained, of all the brute creation, man's best and most faithful friend.

So the pet dog inside the hut of death on the lonely island off the coast of Northern Labrador knew what was expected of him in an emergency, and he was there to make good. As the little girl whom he loved, and who loved him, lay suffering on the bed, the dog cuddled up beside her. He was sitting there on his haunches, his front legs straight and ready to spring, his head thrust forward, as the first man darkened the doorway. The lips of the dog were curled back. He was showing his teeth, menacingly, and he was uttering an ominous growl, a note of menace, of defiance. It meant danger to anybody or anything, to man or to beast, that dared advance beyond the dead line.

How long the household dog had kept off the wild pack that was eager to fall upon and devour the sick girl there was no means of knowing. He was there on the job, when the men arrived. When the first arrival started toward the bed, the guardian got up and uttered a growl several notes more menacing than before.

The other men came up. They entered the hut and laid about with their oars, scattering the wild curs, which leaped through the window and door and disappeared, uttering yappy cries of disgust which acknowledged defeat. The guardian of the stricken household soon recognized that the men were his friends and the friends of his little mistress. They gave the girl food and medicine. They fed the dog, too, and he uttered his gratitude both for his own succor and that given to the child.

"The dogs had entered and eaten her parents, brothers and sisters," writes MacMillan. "She lived on, protected from the pack by a pet dog, which cuddled beside her and at the approach of anyone stood defiantly, showing his glistening teeth. The little one was living as we came by, slowly recovering from her terrible experience."

As to what became of the dog, the explorer is silent. Perhaps those Eskimos who told this story to the Arctic adventurers were too little advanced in civilization to give the dog proper credit. But it is safe to predict that the little girl, unless some thoughtless person separated her and her pet before she grew strong enough to insist upon the rights of both of them, will cling to him while he lives and will remember him with reverence after he is gone the way of all dog flesh.

Newest Tool on the Farm Is a Radio Set

"With radio equipment of small cost the farmer or livestock shipper can get, several times daily, an amount of reliable market information the cost of which, if he were to use the commercial agencies, would be prohibitive. The man in the country, be he farmer on the farm or a livestock shipper in a small town, no matter how far from his favorite market, is placed in touch with the trend of prices and conditions every day.

"There are many livestock dealers in the country who make a business of buying animals from the farmers and assembling their purchases in town for shipment to the stockyards. Such a dealer may have been paying a certain price for two or three days and meantime the market has gone up. The farmer with a radio is well acquainted with market conditions at livestock centers. On the other hand, if the market has gone down, it is to the interest of the dealer to know it promptly.

"I'm very enthusiastic over the radio, because I've lived in the country. The man in the country raises corn, wheat, apples, potatoes and oats and he feeds hogs, sheep and cattle. These are the elements that contribute to his business, and it is natural that he would want to be posted as often and as accurately as he possibly could be.

"The radio today puts him in a position where he is in constant touch with the rise and fall of prices and all the other conditions connected with the product of his labor. It not only enables him to sell on a good market, but to buy his feeders on a declining market. And apart from dollars and cents, the radio will make the young people happier on the farm."

E. F. Bisbee, vice president, St. Louis National Stockyards, took a keen interest from the start in the possibilities of radio as a means of broadcasting market reports, and he said his investigation now has gone far enough to warrant his making this statement:

"Any farmer, country elevator, bank, shipping agency or country buyer located within or adjacent to Missouri, Illinois or Iowa can now obtain reliable market information from some station within comfortable range of a very modest-priced radio receiving set of good manufacture.

"This fact is being realized more and more, and the number of sets being installed primarily for business purposes is rapidly increasing, so that it does not require an extended imagination to picture a set in each farmhouse on which wife or daughter, at fixed broadcasting hours, makes a record of the market reports in which they are interested. And if some marketing is under consideration she may deliver the report, if urgent, while the work in the field is in preparation.

"This condition surely will change many present trade practices and may in some lines revolutionize business. Whether from any or every standpoint this is desirable does not matter. Broadcasting is efficiently here and will never grow less efficient, and the number depending on this means of obtaining business information is rapidly extending."

The Business of Producing "Old Masters"

They are to be found in this country as well as in France and elsewhere. Their method of procedure is highly ingenious and publicity would be fatal. For instance, if a picture which they know to be false is to be put up at auction it is a common practice for them to plant their confederates in the auction room. These dummy bidders are clever psychologists and are able to run bids up to ridiculously high figures. One by one they drop out of the bidding when it becomes dangerous, and finally some eager bargain hunter succeeds in having a worthless canvas knocked down to him. It is said that frequently the auctioneers are in the confidence of the dishonest dealers and they also receive their fat commissions. If things go wrong and the bidding suddenly stops, the stool pigeon pays only $5 to the auctioneer for his trouble. The picture is then taken back to the storeroom and kept for several months until those who attend auctions regularly may be supposed to forget about it. Then it is likely to bob up again.

Indeed, it is a crisis fraught with dangerous possibilities that M. Guiboud has precipitated. Even if he himself is innocent and is proved to be so, he may cause real hardship to people who are also innocent of wrongdoing. He may bring about the loss of millions to people in no way involved in his case. He will undoubtedly deprive many a striving young painter of his means of livelihood. And even this has its deplorable side. After all, if a picture is painted well enough to deceive the connoisseurs it actually must be almost as good as the original itself. And a beautiful picture, who ever may have painted it, is a work of art.

whether he meant it or whether he was practicing a part before you. For marriage a woman wants something dependable. I'd like a nice Ambassador, worldly, witty, slightly cynical, very bored, the sort whose eyes would light up when you came in and say, 'Adorable; there never was another woman who had a three-cornered freckle at the left of her chin like yours.' Individual treatment, that's the trick. Give a woman that and he can have Ben Turpin eyes and a figure like a pumpkin, but she will adore him all her life."

All these answers were different. They had no basis of generality. I walked home wearily and then I thought of Goldie. Goldie is our telephone girl, and her worldly erudition is greater than King Solomon's. Goldie should have been an artist, for she has a remarkable color sense. She can get more colors on her small Irish face than Sargent could on a 20-foot canvas.

Goldie looked at me with a wink and shifted her gum. "Lord, give me a mushy man," she cried. "I just want a guy who will whisper sweet nothings in my pearly ear all day long. I don't care what he looks like, if he'll only turn himself into a radio and broadcast me a nice, steady stream of thrills. But, gee, what's the use? I won't get him. How many of us ever do get the one we want? I tell you, a girl's ideal man is the one she can get. If he wants a dumbell, she'll be one; if he wants a cutie, she'll make the attempt. You know how it is, if you can't get the John you want, you take the John you can get, and that's all there is to it."

Abstractions, nothing definite. Desire for protection and kindliness and strength and such. No headwork. No absolute certainty like the men had possessed. Just dreams. Well, that's the way women are, anyway.

luck? I feel sure it is going to be a hit. Joseph is working like a dynamo.

J. R. B."

In the early morning the brain works sluggishly. For an instant Elizabeth stood looking at the words uncomprehendingly; then, with a leaping of the heart, their meaning came home to her. He must have left this note at her door on the previous night. The play had been produced! And somewhere in the folds of the interior of that morning paper at her feet must be the opinion of one in authority concerning it.

Dramatic criticisms have this peculiarity: if you are looking for them, they burrow and hide like rabbits. They dodge behind murders; they duck behind baseball scores; they lie up snugly behind the Wall Street news. It was a full minute before Elizabeth found what she sought. The first words she read smote her like a blow.

In that vein of delightful facetiousness which so endears him to all followers and perpetrators of the drama, the one in authority rent and tore James Boyd's play. He knocked James Boyd's play down and kicked it; he jumped on it with large feet; he poured cold water on it; and he chopped it into little bits. He merrily disemboweled James Boyd's play.

Elizabeth quivered from head to foot. She caught at the doorpost to steady herself. In a flash all her contentment had gone, wiped away and annihilated like a mist before the sun. She loved him, and she knew now that she had always loved him.

It took her two seconds to realize that the one in authority was a miserable incompetent, incapable of recognizing merit when it was displayed before him. It took her five minutes to dress. It took her a minute to run downstairs and out to the news stand on the corner of the street. Here, with a lavishness that alarmed and exhilarated the proprietor, she bought all the other papers that he could supply. Eagerly she sought the reviews of the play.

Moments of tragedy are best described briefly. Each of the papers noticed the play, and each of them damned it with uncompromising heartiness. The criticisms varied only in tone. One cursed with relish and gusto; another with a certain pity; a third with a kind of wounded superiority, as of one compelled against his will to speak of something unspeakable; still another wrote as he were spanking a naughty child; but the meaning of all was the same—James Boyd's play was a hideous failure.

Back to the home sped Elizabeth, leaving the organs of a free people to be gathered up, smoothed and replaced on the stand by the now more than ever charmed proprietor. Up the stairs she sped and, arriving breathlessly at James' door, rang the bell.

Heavy footsteps came down the passage—crushed, disheartened footsteps, footsteps that sent a chill to Elizabeth's heart. The door opened. James Boyd stood before her, heavy-eyed and haggard. In his eyes was despair, and on his chin the blue growth of beard of the man from whom the mailed fist of fate has taken the energy to perform his morning shave.

Behind him, littering the floor, were the morning papers. At sight of them Elizabeth broke down.

"Oh, Jimmy, darling," she cried; and the next moment she was in his arms. And for a space time stood still.

How long afterwards it was, she never knew; but eventually James Boyd spoke.

"If you'll marry me," he said, hoarsely, "I don't care a hang."

"Jimmy, darling," said Elizabeth, "of course I will."

Past them, as they stood there, a black streak shot silently and disappeared out of the door. Joseph was leaving the sinking ship.

"Let him go, the fraud," said Elizabeth, bitterly. "I shall never believe in black cats again."

But James was not of this opinion.

"Joseph has brought me all the luck I need."

"But the play meant everything to you."

"It did then."

Elizabeth hesitated.

"Jimmy, dear, it's all right, you know. I know you will make a fortune out of your next play, and I've heaps for us both to live on till you make good. We can manage splendidly on my salary from the Evening Chronicle."

"What! Have you got a job on a New York paper?"

"Yes. I told you about it. I am doing 'Heloise Milton.' Why, what's the matter?"

He groaned hollowly.

"And I was thinking that you would come back to Chicago with me!"

"But I will. Of course I will. What did you think I meant to do?"

"What! Give up a real job in New York!" He blinked. "This isn't really happening. I'm dreaming."

"But, Jimmy, are you sure you can get work in Chicago? Wouldn't it be better to stay on here, where all the managers are, and"——

He shook his head.

"I think it's time I told you about myself," he said. "Am I sure I can get work in Chicago? I am, worse luck. Darling, have you in your more material moments ever toyed with a Boyd's Premier Breakfast Sausage or kept body and soul together with a slice off a Boyd's Excelsior Home-Cured Ham? My father makes them, and the tragedy of my life is that he wants me to help him at it. This was my position. I loathed the family business as much as dad loved it. I had a notion—a fool notion, as it has turned out—that I could make good in the literary line. I've scribbled in a sort of way ever since I was in college.

"When the time came for me to join the firm, I put it to dad straight. I said: 'Give me a chance, one good, square chance, to see if the divine fire is really there, or if somebody has just turned in the alarm as a practical joke.'

"And we made a bargain. I had written this play, and we made it a test case. We fixed it up that dad should put up the money to give it a Broadway production. If it succeeded, all right—I'm the young Gus Thomas and may go ahead in the literary game. If it's a fizzle, off goes my coat, and I abandon pipe-dreams of literary triumphs and start in as the guy who put the Co. in Boyd & Co.

"Well, events have proved that I am the guy, and now I'm going to keep my part of the bargain just as squarely as dad kept his. I know quite well that, if I refused to play fair and chose to stick on here in New York and try again, dad would go on staking me. That's the sort of a dad he is. But I wouldn't do it for a million Broadway successes. I've had my chance, and I've foozled; and now I'm going back to make him happy by being a real, live member of the firm. And the queer thing about it is that last night I hated the idea, and this morning, now that I've got you, I almost look forward to it."

He gave a little shiver.

"And yet—I don't know. There's something rather grewsome still to my near-artist soul in the idea of living in luxury on murdered piggies. Have you ever seen them persuading a pig to play the stellar role in a Boyd Premier Breakfast Sausage? It's pretty ghastly. They string them up by their hind legs, and—brrrr!"

"Never mind," said Elizabeth, soothingly. "Perhaps they don't mind it, really."

"Well, I don't know," said James Boyd, doubtfully. "I've watched them at it, and I'm bound to say they didn't seem any too well pleased."

"Try not to think of it."

"Very well," said James, dutifully.

There came a sudden shout from the floor above, and on the heels of it a shock-haired youth in pajamas burst into the apartment.

"Now what?" asked James. "By the way: Miss Herroid, my fiancee—Mr. Briggs—Paul Axworthy Briggs, sometimes known as the Boy Novelist. What's troubling you, Paul?"

Mr. Briggs was stammering with excitement.

"Jimmy, what do you think has happened! A black cat has just come into my apartment. I heard him mewing outside the door, and opened it, and he streaked in. And I started my new novel last night! Think of it, Jimmy! You do believe in black cats bringing luck, don't you?"

"Luck! My lad, grapple that cat to your soul with hoops of steel. He's the greatest little luck bringer in New York. He was boarding with me till this morning."

"Then—by Jove, I forgot to ask—your play was a hit? I haven't seen the papers yet."

"Well, when you see them don't read the notices. It was the worst frost Broadway has seen since Columbus' time."

"But— I don't understand."

"That's all right. You don't have to. Go back and fill that cat with fish, or he'll be leaving you. I suppose you left the door open?"

The Boy Novelist vanished with a passionate cry.

"Do you think Joseph will bring him luck?" said Elizabeth, thoughtfully.

"It depends what sort of luck you mean. Joseph seems to work in devious ways. If I know Joseph's methods, Briggs novel will be refused by every publisher in the city; and then, when he is sitting in his apartment wondering which of his razors to end himself with, there will be a ring at the bell, and in will come the most beautiful girl in the world. And then—well, then, take it from me, he will be all right."

"He won't mind about the novel?"

"It won't exist for him."

"Not even if its failure means that he will have to go away and kill pigs and things?"

James Boyd regarded her a little seriously.

"You mustn't let your mind dwell on that pig-killing business, dear. I've noticed a slight tendency in you to let yourself get rather morbid about it. I know they string them up by the hind legs, and all that sort of thing; but you must remember that a pig looks at these things from a different standpoint. My belief is that pigs like it. Try not to think of it."

"Very well," said Elizabeth, dutifully.

advance of her European sisters. This, probably, is because her traditions are not so old; therefore the American takes much more easily to new ideas and habits. Even in America one hears protests against the selfishness of girls who leave their homes to carve out a career. This is most unreasonable. It has never been suggested that a son is selfish because he wants to leave his parents' roof and earn his own living; indeed, everything and everybody, including their daughters, would be gladly sacrificed by parents to establish their sons in a career. In one family I know of the two daughters were barely educated; they are now completely deprived of all pleasures and have scarcely the necessities of life, the object being to provide sufficient money to enable the elder son to remain in the most expensive regiment in the army. It used to be a matter of course that the daughters should be sacrificed; if they demanded equal consideration with their brothers they were looked upon as unnatural and almost indecent.

In my opinion, parents who desire affection from their children generally will find that they receive it, but to expect from them a sense of duty and obligation is unreasonable. Why should a child be expected to feel a sense of duty to one whose only claim to it is that, having once brought it into the world, she has fed, clothed and educated it? Surely this is the least that a child may expect of its mother!

Considering her generally, how does the young mother of today compare with the mother of yesterday? She is more selfish and sacrifices herself less. What is good for the child. Her attitude toward her children is more impersonal and, therefore, more likely to be just. Her interests are much wider and, therefore, she is anxious that her children should have interests of their own. Her children are being taught that they are free to choose whether they will remain with their parents or take up a career. Her daughters are receiving educational advantages practically equal to those of her sons; in houses where money is scarce sacrifices are as readily made for the one as for the other. Children are reared less sentimentally, therefore more sensibly; probably the effect on the children will be a harder outlook on life. This may not necessarily mean that their affection will be less deep, but they will certainly not be as easily moved.

The modern girl is self-willed, outspoken and selfish but, on the other hand, she is honest, sympathetic and intelligent. The mother of yesterday has done fine pioneer work; she wanted to develop in her daughter some independence, a capacity to face the world; she was resolved that her daughter should have a better chance than she had had herself to think and act freely and, if required, to earn her own living. If required! There came the trouble. The mother did not understand how far the ball would roll that she had started. A girl trained to earn her own living does not want to earn it only if required; she wants to earn it for the sake of independence. The mother let her daughter go to college, but did not realize that the educated daughter, set free for two or three years, would refuse to return to the nursery. She got what she wanted, a developed daughter. But she got more than she wanted, a daughter who ran away. The daughter she produced may not be perfect, but she has realized all her mother's expectations; the mother should not be too harsh a judge of her own handiwork just because the daughter has gone beyond those expectations. And to the mother who is discontented with the daughter she has produced, I quote my husband: "Do not be afraid of the future, it will probably take care of itself, as did the past."

Off for Eveless Eden on Equality Island

TWELVE engineering students of Loughborough College in England have undertaken recently a great adventure. They intend to found a "New Arcady" on a lonely island in the South Pacific. The adventurers sailed early in the autumn in an auxiliary sailing craft for a small isle which they have named "Equality Island," where they will raise large herds of cattle, so they hope for export to the Pacific Coast of America. All of the doughty dozen are bachelors, and for the present they are to forego marriage, making their island an Eveless Eden—if they can.

Glowing reports of the island were furnished by two "scouts" who have returned to Loughborough. "Equality Island," which is forty miles long by fifteen miles broad, is said to be rich in natural pastures. All the members of the expedition are shareholders in the scheme.

"The Republican Government, the name of which we do not care to give at present, simply said: 'Here is the land. Take possession of it,'" said D. L. David, the organizing manager, to a reporter. "They made no stipulations, demanded no taxes, and offered a long concession with an option of purchase."

"We shall start business right away," said another member of the expedition. "At the beginning we shall not worry about comfort. We expect to raise 20,000 head of stock annually. Four of us have had practical farming experience, one has been a bushman in America, and the rest of us are going to learn.

"We are all single, and we have sworn not to marry till we have 'made good.' Meanwhile, we shall do all our own cooking, mending and domestic duties."

Women say La-may stays on better than any other face powder.

Up to the time of La-may it was almost impossible to get a face powder to stay on the face longer than it takes to put it on. You powder your nose nicely, and the first gust of wind or the first puff of your handkerchief and away goes the powder, leaving your nose shiny and conspicuous, probably just when you would give anything to appear at your best. A specialist has perfected a pure powder that really stays on; that stays on until you wash it off. It does not contain white lead or starchy rice powder to make it stay on. This improved formula contains medicinal powders doctors prescribe to improve the complexion. In fact the powder helps to prevent and reduce enlarged pores and irritations. It is also astringent, discouraging flabbiness, crow's feet and wrinkles. This unusual powder is called La-may (French, Poudre L'Amay). Because La-may is pure and because it stays on so well it is used by millions of American women. All dealers carry the large box and many carry the generous thirty-five cent size. When you use this harmless powder and see how beautifully it improves your complexion you will understand why so many beautiful New York women say they can not buy a better powder than La-may anywhere at any price.

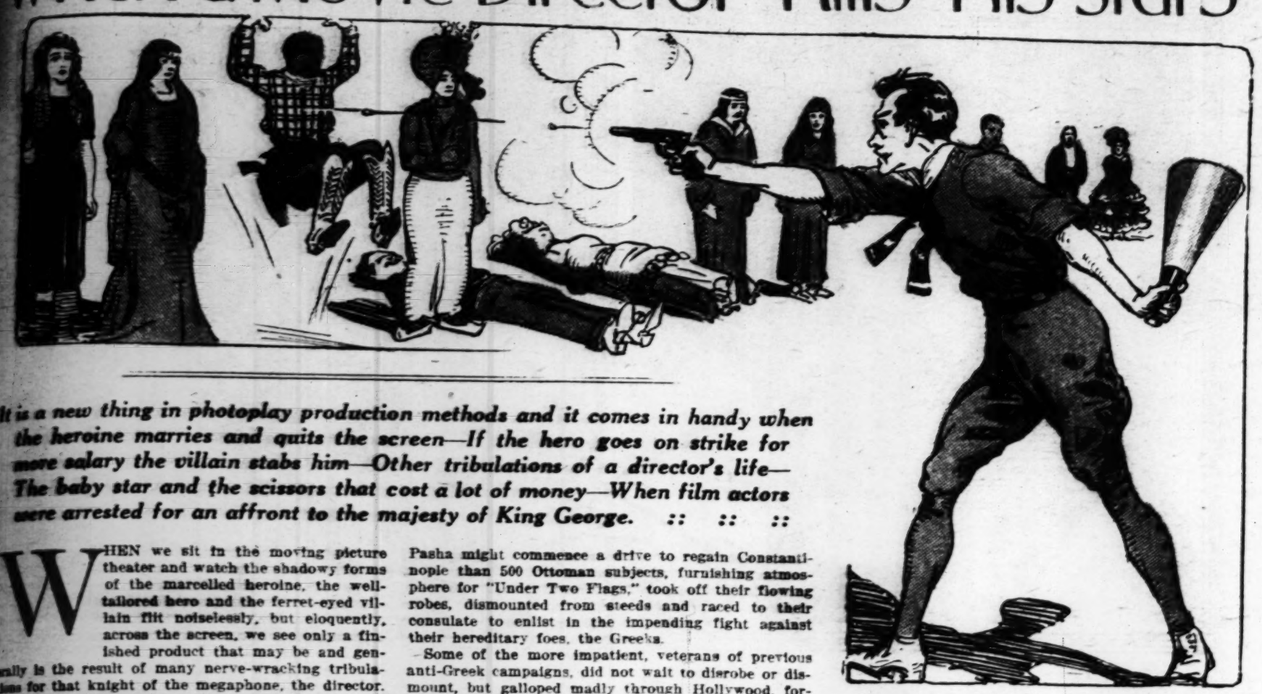
When a Movie Director "Kills" His Stars



It is a new thing in photoplay production methods and it comes in handy when the heroine marries and quits the screen—If the hero goes on strike for more salary the villain stabs him—Other tribulations of a director's life—The baby star and the scissors that cost a lot of money—When film actors were arrested for an affront to the majesty of King George. :: :: ::

WHEN we sit in the moving picture theater and watch the shadowy forms of the marcelled heroine, the well-tailored hero and the ferret-eyed villain flit noiselessly, but eloquently, across the screen, we see only a finished product that may be and generally is the result of many nerve-wracking tribulations for that knight of the megaphone, the director. If the public believes that the director has only to wave a magic wand with one hand and to utter a few cabalistic instructions through a megaphone held in the other, it is grievously mistaken.

How many movie fans know that the very latest wrinkle in motion picture production is to kill all the leading actors and actresses in the company. This unpleasant duty falls to the lot of the director. It is being done every day in Hollywood and in the Eastern studios. Heroes, villains and vamps are being slain without compunction or remorse.

Thus far the new idea of killing off the cast is being practiced only by directors of serial pictures, but it may well spread to the one-installment pictures.

The way of it is this. A serial is designed to run in installments through many weeks. Keeping a company of temperamental film stars together long enough to complete one of these serials is not easy. Suppose the heroine marries and gives up her screen career after only a few episodes have been shot! Or, again, suppose the hero or the villain develops cranial enlargement and refuses to go on with the picture unless his salary is doubled. Those were contingencies which sent many a serial upon the rocks in the old days.

Now, every actor or actress that might possibly throw a monkey wrench in the machinery is killed at the very start of a serial.

The first shots made are a series of episodes, in each of which one of the leading characters meets a sudden and violent death. It may be that in one of these the heroine is thrown from a cliff. In another the villain stabs the hero. In another the hero shoots the villain. These episodes are carefully canned and held for emergency use. If one of the principals deserts the company for any cause the episode showing the death of that actor or actress is put on public view in mute explanation of the disappearance of that performer from the plot. This may necessitate some changes in succeeding episodes, but these only strengthen the film, as they give the plot new and unexpected twists and furnish additional opportunity for the survivors to avenge the slain.

But the sudden marriage or disaffection of a star is only one of a movie director's troubles, as instances which follow will show.

Such trivial objects as a pair of scissors in a child star's hands have done their bit to bring more than one director to an early grave. Baby Peggy, 21-2-year-old Century star, was walking through the wardrobe department of the studio several months ago and found a pair of scissors lying on a sewing machine. Baby Peggy has one of the most attractively bobbed hair cuts in Hollywood. She had recently heard her parents and certain adult players mention that bobbed hair was no longer stylish. Eager to obey the dictates of the latest vogue, Baby Peggy had the bright idea of cutting off her no longer fashionable short-length hair. She did, and delayed her entire company almost a fortnight until she could be fitted with a specially-made wig.

Burma and California are thousands of miles apart, but when, months before actual hostilities started, rumors of the Turkish offensive in Asia Minor reached Universal City, Cal., the effect was no less startling than if they had been within a stone's throw of each other. No sooner had word reached the studio colony of even the possibility that Mustapha Kemal Pasha might commence a drive to regain Constantinople than 500 Ottoman subjects, furnishing atmosphere for "Under Two Flags," took off their flowing robes, dismounted from steeds and raced to their consulate to enlist in the impending fight against their hereditary foes, the Greeks.

Some of the more impatient, veterans of previous anti-Greek campaigns, did not wait to disrobe or dismount, but galloped madly through Hollywood, forgetting (?) to return their costumes and horses. Tod Browning, the director, and Priscilla Dean, the star of the Ouida classic's film version, had to delay production for almost a fortnight until another band of less bloodthirsty Bedouins could be impressed into service for the picture. The men were obtained after lengthy search, but it put an awful dent in Los Angeles' available supply of rug and cigarette merchants.

Erich von Stroheim seems to have been chosen by the fates as a butt for their jests. In "Foolish Wives" he had more than his share of misfortunes. The death of Rudolph Christians during the filming of "Foolish Wives" was a severe blow to the entire industry, but it meant a loss of several months' time to the director, who lost weeks and weeks interviewing applicants before he could find a suitable "double" for the role. Finally Robert Edeson was chosen from among several hundred possibilities.

For days he sat in the Universal City projection room looking at the scenes in which Christians had appeared. Finally, when he had studied all of his predecessor's mannerisms, his carriage and his walk, until he could imitate them perfectly, he was given Christians' wig and photographed in the remaining scenes. When the film had been developed and printed, it was discovered that the wig had photographed much lighter on Edeson than on Christians, despite the fact that the same powder had been sprinkled on it by both players. After inquiry it was found that Christians had always made a point of brushing most of the powder off the wig—Edeson, not having been told of this, had neglected to do so, with disastrous results; the scenes had to be remade.

Occasionally, more than financial loss is encountered; frequently physical welfare is jeopardized by some perversity of fate, apparently scheming to add to the director's cup of woe. An important sequence of "The Silver Horde" had to be filmed on the waterfront of one of the West Coast seaports. The action called for a coastwise steamer to be loaded with cargo prior to its departure from Alaska. The day on which the scenes were to be photographed ushered in a sudden strike on the part of local stevedores and longshoremen. The cameramen had barely commenced turning their cranks when the entire company was interrupted by a volley of stones and bricks, punctuated by cries of "Scab!"

Armed with six-shooters, a mob of striking dockmen stormed the wharf and ordered the company off the premises, threatening to kill the first man who tried to put any more cargo aboard the steamer. The director attempted to explain the situation, showing the strikers his battery of motion picture cameras, but without success. The strikers suspected the cameras were merely "props" being used as a blind to permit of the ship being loaded, and started to throw the cameras into the water, with every intention of hurling the actors in also. The timely arrival of the hastily summoned police reserves came as a welcome relief to the harassed director and production continued after a delay of several hours. The rest of the scenes were "shot" under the protection of a cordon of 15 policemen.

In filming Jack London's "Tales of the Fish Patrol" it was essential to photograph several scenes on a desert island. Jack Mulhall and Louise Lorraine were in the midst of a scene in which they appeared silhouetted against the boundless Pacific, when they were interrupted by an exclamation from the director, Edward Kull. A few hundred yards off-shore, within range of the camera, were half-a-dozen fishing boats.

Fishing boats are all right in their place and are entitled to recognition as being necessary to the general scheme of the world's food supply. But, vociferously protested Kull, they were not a happy background for a desert island, and would they please get out of his camera's range. In unmistakable terms they more or less politely declined the invitation to get out of the picture, unless they were jolly well paid for it. Kull was of necessity compelled to comply with their demands and the "hold up" netted the fishermen more than the equivalent of an entire week's catch.

During the war one of America's best known multi-millionaires was courteously taking a motion picture company on his yacht to Bermuda, where it was intended to film a picture of the tropics. When the yacht hove to at the harbor entrance to take the pilot aboard the owner came to the gangplank to receive him. To his surprise the pilot was a negro. The yacht owner had certain prejudices against allowing the negro to come aboard and sent him ashore, saying he would pilot the vessel through the narrow passage himself. Ignorant of the recognition signals essential to his safe passage, the yachtsman elected to hoist the required pennant and commenced to steam through the channel.

Calmly ignoring a set of signals which were immediately hoisted above the fort, the self-appointed pilot had nearly cleared the channel and was congratulating himself on his skill, when a shell whizzed across his vessel's bow. The yacht then and there established a world's sudden-stop record which has never since been equaled. A few minutes later a Government cutter drew alongside and the commander of the port boarded the vessel and put everybody aboard under arrest for defying "Dora," as the defense of the realm act was called. Several days were lost before the players obtained their release and the yachtsman was freed after a vitriolic lecture about neglecting to comply with certain necessary war measures, defiance of regularly constituted authority and plotting against His Majesty, George V.

Even animal screen stars occasionally show symptoms of temperament. Brownie, the Century Wonder Dog, exhibits surprisingly human traits when it comes to having his own way. Should the sun be too hot to suit his canineship, Brownie will lie down in the middle of a set and act as if he were overcome by the heat, going through all the motions of a sunstruck dog. So realistic are his panting and tongue-lolling that everyone on the "lot" feels sorry for the dog. His director and trainer finally "call it a day" and, like a shot, Brownie is off the set and galloping to his trainer's car, where he impudently barks a taunting farewell to the human players on the other Century studio sets.

Lions, too, are not without their occasional exhibitions of temperament. Should the man who feeds them happen to pass in sight of their cage while they are going through a scene, they will immediately stop work and tear around the inclosure and playfully knock over camera and reflectors in their mad dash

with a remarkable beauty clay

What do you think of the declaration by The LADIES' HOME JOURNAL that "the healthy woman who looks her age is either stupid or lazy?"

One woman read that statement, and her first feeling was one of resentment. But it caused her to think, and to act, with benefits which left her deeply grateful. Rarely does a woman write such a letter as that which follows over her signature.

By MRS. MURIEL DALTON, 1006 Michigan Ave., Wilmette, Ill.

I HAVE been on the point of writing you many times, and at last have decided it is only right I should tell what you have done for me.

Magazines these days offer sure ways of becoming beautiful, on almost every page. I must admit until recently I took the things published about your beauty clay with a grain of salt. I don't suppose I would have tried it yet except for a statement of the Ladies' Home Journal. It said: "The healthy woman who looks her age is either stupid or lazy." I was angry as I read it. Since a girl, I had had a dull and sallow complexion, and lines in my face that told my age as plainly as if the figures were written there. But I didn't care to be called stupid on top of it. I had read up on the subject to the skin and was well informed on its care. No one who knew the things I had tried to improve my complexion could call me lazy.

But what my trusted magazine had said made me wonder if my efforts had really been intelligent. Also, if it might not be a little laziness that had prevented trying your clay. I had never done so, though it only required mailing my name and address. So I did hunt up one of your advertisements. I remembered the remarkable story—how women in a far-off English province made their skins so beautiful by weekly use of a native clay. How an American girl discovered it, used it with marvelous results, and how her father brought the clay to America. There was the same generous offer by which I could try a full supply of the clay without risking a dollar, and I sent the coupon.

When our postman brought the clay you cannot blame me if I was still a bit skeptical. The directions seemed so simple to expect the results I had read about. I had done wonderful things for my figure by rightful exercise and diet. I had an enviable head of hair because of the care given it. But these things had taken time and patience. Here was something to be accomplished in forty minutes! It seemed too good to be true. However, it did do everything and more than claimed. I received a genuine shock when I wiped away the clay and looked in the mirror.

I had taken ten years off my face in forty minutes! There was no doubt about it. It wasn't alone the new color in my cheeks—I have had other preparations bring a temporary flush of color. But those tell-tale lines around my eyes and from my nose to the corners of my mouth had gone. As for the pores of my skin, they simply were not to be seen. I felt ten years younger; I certainly looked it.

My next thought was "How long will it last?" But I went out that night, and was conscious throughout the evening that I was looking my best. I received compliments, and I continued to get them next day, and the next. Every word about the lasting improvements proved true. For quite a while I used the clay three and four times a week, then twice a week and sometimes only once. But I never went a week without one application. I haven't seen the sign of a blackhead or any other impurities that used to be on my face in regular clusters. Nor is my skin sallow as it used to be not even if I go the day without powdering.

A lot of women will wonder why I grant permission to print this letter. But I would be ungrateful if I did not. This clay has done what specialists, charging big fees, failed to do—give me a skin clear and soft as a baby's. I have told everyone of my acquaintance about this perfectly wonderful beauty clay. I can't help thinking how many there must be who like myself have been on the very point of trying it, but have set it down as just another domestic preparation and let their doubts keep them from a perfectly gorgeous complexion. If everyone knew what I have learned about Ryerson's Forty-Minute Beauty Clay you would soon have to stop your offer to send five-dollar jars for trial without charging for the time and care of putting them up, because there couldn't possibly be enough to go around.

Your skin needs different kinds of care at different times

No matter what you do during the day, your skin collects much dust and dirt that ordinary washing cannot reach.

Fine particles of dirt bore deep into your pores and only a cream made with oil can reach them.

Each night, after washing with warm water and pure soap, smooth Pond's Cold Cream on your face.

This delicate cream contains just the right amount of oil to work its way deep into the pores and out again, bringing every bit of dirt with it.

Wipe it off with a soft cloth. The grime on the cloth will convince you how necessary such a cleansing is even after careful washing.

To protect the skin and hold the powder

A protective cream must be one that your skin will absorb instantly. For its most frequent use is for daytime and evening—before going out and before powdering.

The cream especially made for daytime and evening use is Pond's Vanishing Cream. This fragrant cream is absorbed the instant you smooth it on your face, and it acts as an invisible shield against wind and cold. It contains no oil to reappear in a shine and the smooth velvety surface it gives your skin is the ideal powder base.

Both these creams are too fine in texture to clog the pores. They cannot injure the most sensitive skin or encourage the growth of hair. The Pond's Extract Co., 131 Hudson Street, New York.

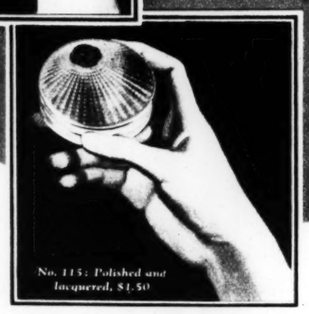
No. 115: Rolled gold filled, $7.50

No. 215: Heavy gold plated, $2.50



No. 115: Polished and lacquered, $4.50

Three exquisite designs

FIRST there is the delicately simple sun-ray design. It reminds you of nothing so much as the rare vanity cases of enamel seen in Venetian jewelers' shops—those hand-wrought bits of jewelry that were sometimes in colored enamel, sometimes in finely etched gold.

Then there is the primrose design. The skill of the finest craftsmen has fashioned this perfect garland of delicate flowers and engraved it on a background of golden tracery.

So rich in design

The third design is ravishing. A border of beautifully etched scrolls recalling the elegance of French decoration. It might have been inspired by Marie Antoinette's jewel case, so rich are its materials and design—so perfect its workmanship.

Which will you choose? Ah, that will be a simple matter. For while they are different, each is in perfect taste and your own personality will dictate with unerring ease the one you will care for most.

Refillers, too!

Inside, the three cases are just alike. Each has five times as much powder as rouge, the proportions women actually use. Each has two ample mirrors, one for powder and one for rouge, and each has two soft lamb's-wool puffs.

When powder and rouge are used up they can be renewed, for the center section is a refiller which is easily removable. This refiller fits all three cases and is interchangeable.

Make your selection today with the three Twin Compact designs before you. The powder comes in white, natural and Rachel, the rouge in the medium tone that suits every skin. In Richard Hudnut Three Flowers, Gardenia and Du Barry. At all drug and department stores.

This is Twin Compact with both sides open. The center section contains powder on one side and rouge on the other. Mirror in each cover and each side has its own soft lamb's-wool puff. Center section, the refiller, can be renewed in any of three odors for 75c.

To free your skin from blemishes

ASK a skin specialist why it is that your skin is continually breaking out with disfiguring little blemishes.

He will almost certainly tell you that this condition comes from an outside infection.

Authorities on the skin now say that skin blemishes are generally caused by bacteria and parasites which are carried into the pores from outside, through the dust and soot in the air.

To free your skin from blemishes, use this simple treatment:

EACH night just before retiring, wash your face with Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water, finishing with a dash of cold water, and dry carefully.

Now dip the tips of your fingers in warm water and rub them on the cake of Woodbury's until they are covered with a heavy, creamlike lather.

Cover each blemish with a thick coat of this and leave it on for ten minutes.

Rinse your face thoroughly, first with clear hot water, then with cold.

GET a cake of Woodbury's today. A 25-cent cake lasts for a month or six weeks.

It gave him back the energy of perfect health

"A human dynamo"—"a live wire"—

How often you hear that said of the man whose buoyant, vigorous health wins him first place everywhere!

Strength and vigor like his should be normal, not exceptional. Thousands lose them because they neglect the body's two most vital needs: building up the worn down tissues from day to day, and removing daily the poisonous waste.

The fresh, living cells of Fleischmann's Yeast contain a natural food—with the very elements needed to help the body perform these two vital functions.

Like any other plant or vegetable, yeast produces the best results when fresh and "green"—not dried or "killed." Fleischmann's Yeast is the highest grade living yeast—always fresh. It is not a medicine, it is a natural food. It helps to "tone" up the whole system and assures regular daily elimination. Results cannot be expected unless it is eaten regularly.

Everywhere physicians and hospitals are prescribing Fleischmann's Yeast to correct run down condition, constipation, skin disorders and all the troubles that come from lowered vitality.

"I get up with a ravenous appetite—"

"Naturally I am enthusiastic!"

"For four months" says a recent letter from a business man, "I suffered from lowered vitality, coupled with a persistent series of boils. For six days after beginning the yeast cure I noticed no material improvement, but on the sixth day the fifteenth boil, instead of coming to a head, started to disappear.

"Naturally I am enthusiastic. I am cured! My lowered vitality is back to normal, and I get up in the morning with a ravenous appetite, full of pep and ambition."

Eat two or three cakes a day regularly—plain, or spread on crackers, or mixed with water or milk. If you prefer, get six cakes at a time. They will keep in a cool, dry place for two or three days. Begin at once to know what real health means! Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast. All grocers have it.
